With the Twelfth Engineers in France

Lieut.-Col. Jonah Tells How They Built the Famous 'Light Railways' Right Up to the Front

Over These Little Lines of Two-Foot Guages the Allied Armies in the Trenches Were Provided With Supplies, and Problems in Constructing Them Taxed the Ingenuity of the St. Louisans.

One Line Was Built Much Quicker Than French Had Deemed Possible, Nearly Three Miles of Track Being Laid in One Day—Regiment Was Among First 30,000 to Reach France.

By F. G. Jonah

Of St. Louis, formerly Lieutenant-Colonel, C. of E., Chief Engineer, Department of Light Railways, A. E. F.

THE "Light Railway" was a development of the great war, and became one of the most important agencies of transportation—and thus one of very great importance in the winning of the war.

The Light Railway became, in fact, the principal means of supplying the front line, this being the railway connection from the railhead to the trenches.

A railhead is the point where transportation on the standard gauge ceases. It is a terminus usually eight to ten miles back of the line, and just outside the range of the enemy's ordinary guns. At this railhead will be assembled all the supplies for a certain sector, consisting of ammunition, rations, road material, building material, fuel, barbed wire, fence pickets, culvert drains, track material, forage, and everything necessary for the sustenance of troops and their means of offensive and defensive operations.

The problem of getting these supplies up to the trenches over an area subject to the shelling and bombing of the enemy is one of great magnitude, calling for the use of an army in itself. In the early stages of the war, dependence was placed on the motor truck and the old-fashioned army wagon train, but the concentration of men in the front line became so great that the highways were soon congested, and the traffic was so dense that it was a tremendous task to keep the roads in repair for the never-ending stream of trucks; and, to relieve the situation and meet the requirements of the line, the Light Railway were introduced.

Lines Were of 2-Feet Gauge

These lines were of 2-foot gauge, engines built by the Baldwins, 16 tons; cars of the low gondola type, 22 feet long, 5 1-2 feet wide ten tons capacity. We could build the lines on grades of three per cent and curves with a radius of 100 feet, and over such a line our trains would haul 60 tons. Thus one train would haul as much as 20 trucks.

It was on the construction and operation of these lines that the Twelfth Engineers, recruited in St. Louis and Kansas City, were engaged. We were among the first 30,000 troops to land in France. We left St. Louis July 26, 1917, and landed in Liverpool August 12. We moved at once to the Borden Training Camp in the south of England, and were in London for the parade August 15, in which the Twelfth (St. Louis) Thirteenth (Chicago), Fourteenth (Boston), and Seventeeenth (Atlanta) all engineering regiments took part. This was the first time that foreign troops bearing arms marched in London since the Norman Conquest. On August 18, we were moved over to Boulogne and for three days were in Camp St. Martin, on the heights overlooking the Straits of Dover, where Napoleon was encamped in 1803, when he was seeking to invade England. One could well imagine, while standing on these heights and looking at the chalk cliffs of Dover, which are visible on a clear day, how the great Napoleon must have fumed and fretted at his inability to cross this narrow channel, due to the vigilance of the British fleet.

Boulogne and Napoleon! One called to mind the incident of the captive British sailor who sought to escape in a rude boat which he had made from an empty hogshead; how Napoleon heard of it, and, admiring the boy's pluck, gave him a sum of gold and ordered him sent to England; and Campbell's lines were recalled at once:

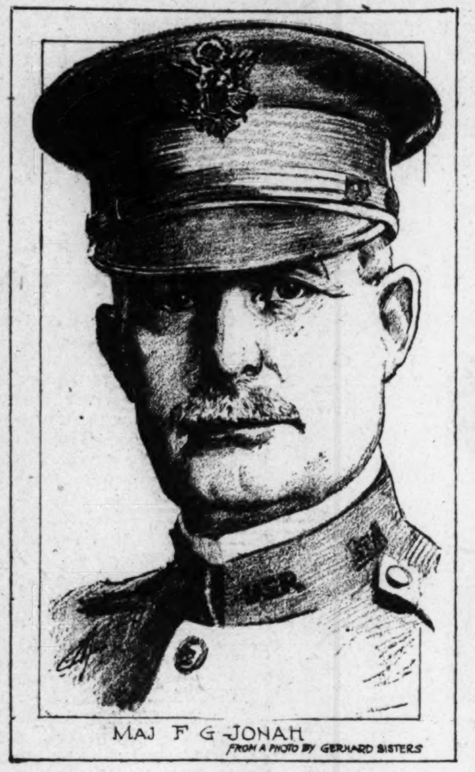
"Rash youth, that wouldst yon channel cross
On twigs and staves so rudely fashioned,
Thy heart with some sweet English lass
Must be impassioned."

"I have no sweetheart," said the lad,
"But, absent years from one another,
Great was the longing that I had
To see my Mother,"

"And so thou shalt," Napoleon said.
You've both my favour fairly won.
A noble mother must have bred
So brave a son."

Moved Up Near the Front

After three days in Boulogne, during which we were equipped with steel helmets and gas masks and instructed in various ways, we were moved to Montigny Farm, about seven miles southeast of Peronne, four miles back of the British trenches and only six miles from the German front line, and began our duties at once. Thus, in less than one month from leaving St. Louis, we were working within range of the enemy's guns, wearing steel Stetsons and gas masks.



MAJ F G JONAH

We were in the midst of the country which had been laid waste by Hindenburg in his retreat of March, 1917, a section of country in which there was not a habitable house, not a standing church, not a living fruit tree—a country that looked like the blight of a mighty cyclone had visited it—the veritable abomination of desolation.

The British had a small railway terminus at Montigny Farm, our headquarters, and one of our first duties was to construct a line eastwardly to the ruins of the town of Jeancourt and LeVerquier, to supply some batteries which were posted near those villages. The work of surveys and construction was under my immediate supervision.

While working on the survey, we saw our first airplane fight, on the morning of September 4. It occurred almost directly over our heads. A German plane was over our line and flying rather low, possibly endeavoring to obtain photographs. In the meantime, the British anti-aircraft guns some little distance back of us were firing at this German aviator, and the pieces of exploded shrapnel were coming down all around us. It was for protection against these falling pieces of exploded shell that we wore our steel helmets. We were able to pick up a number of pieces of shell, which was Souvenir No. 1 of a long list of a very interesting collection. In a very short time, the German aviator was attacked by a French flyer, who dropped out of a cloud a considerable distance above him, shooting at him with a machine gun. One of the shots took effect, and set the German's tank on fire; and we saw him immediately glide for the ground with a streak of flame streaming out behind, like a meteor in its flight.

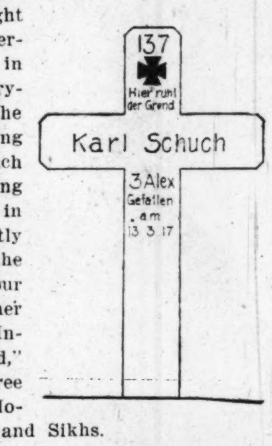
First Time Under Heavy Shelling

We were warned by the Canadian engineers whom we succeeded on this sector that in working as close to the front line as we were it would be well to do the most of our work on cloudy or rainy days, and that when a German observation balloon was up directly ahead of us is would probably be unhealthy to be working where we were. This we found out that same afternoon, as our grading party (which was working behind us in full view of the German observation balloon) was treated to a bombardment of 12 six-inch shells, eight of which, however, were duds; but four of them exploded only 30 feet away from the side of our new roadbed.

The village of Jancourt, to which we were building, was subjected to bombardment almost every day, but Fritz was very methodical with his operations and usually began about four o'clock in the afternoon, so our parties would work in and around Jeancourt in the morning and work further back in the afternoon.

In the western outskirts of Jeancourt our branch took off to Le Verquier, and just at this junction there was a cemetery. The old French cemetery was full of beautful family vaults, which had been broken into and used by the Germans as shelters. The church had been blown entirely to atoms when they retreated. After witnessing these acts of vandalism in the cemetery, we felt that a proper emblem for the German army would be, not an eagle, but a turkey buzzard. I noticed one beautiful vault that had been broken into. Over the door was carved in granite, "Famille Parringault-Caron." It bore a long line of inscriptions to the memory of the departed, the founder of which had been Pierre Jacques Auguste Caron, ne 28 Mai, 1786, decedee 20 Decembre, 1844. Immediately adjoining this French cemetery was a military cemetery that the Germans had established, and in which they had buried a lot of their men during the fight in that vicinity. There are many wooden crosses like that in the accompanying sketch.

Adjacent to the German cemetery was one established by the British, in which they had buried their men who had fallen in March and April, during the fight following up the German retreat, and in which they were burying in September the men who were being killed in the trench raids which were going on almost nightly, in front of us. Directly across the road on the opposite side of our track was still another cemetery, marked "Indian Burial Ground," and divided into three divisions, for the Mohammedans, Hindus and Sikhs.



Seeing Their First Military Burial

As our railroad junction came just at these cemeteries, our men had a great deal of work to do there, and I can remember very well the subdued appearance of the gang one September morning when we saw the first military burial. An English Lieutenant had been brought back sewn up in his blanket, a shapeless object, and was buried in a plain coffin, he having been killed the night before. A short time after that we saw a wood cross erected in memory of Second Lieutenant P. M. Dyer, Royal Engineers, killed in action, September, 1917. In this British burial ground there were men from nearly every part of the empire; and, in walking through these different cemeteries and noting the graves of the dead from various parts of Germany and various parts of the British empire, including Canada. Australia and India, our men often used to speculate as to who would be the first American to be buried with them. But fortunately our work was completed without any casualties.

We fixed up a very comfortable camp at Montigny Farm. Montigny Farm had been the site of the largest sugar refineries in France, and it was a mass of absolute wreckage, as the Germans had destroyed that as systematically as they did everything else before leaving. But out of this wreckage we were able to obtain enough plumbing material to fix up a good regimental bath; and out of the refuse of the destroyed villages we built a good road to our camp. While most of the troops were in wooden barracks and the officers in Nissen huts (a semi-circular metal building with wood floor and wood ceiling), we also built a large number of dugouts. Many of the troops made themselves very comfortable in these. However, when the British Fifth Army had to give way in the drive of March, 1918, the Germans recaptured all of this territory, from which they again were ejected by the British when they began their last successful drive Aug. 8, 1918.

How the Line Was Built

After serving back of the British lines until Oct. 27, I was detached and sent to Paris, where I was engaged in organization work in our department of light railways. During the winter months I made many visits to the French front between Verdun and the Swiss border. These visits were for the purpose of examining the French light railway shops and systems, and examining places where we were likely to build railheads and terminals ourselves. Finally, after the St. Mihiel sector was definitely assigned to the Americans, our work of construction on that sector began with the development of an independent railhead at Sorcy, 11 miles west of Toul. This work was begun in March, 1918, and had been thoroughly completed and rail lines extended from there up north into the St. Mihiel sector, connecting with the French light railways, so that when the St. Mihiel drive took place in September we were well equipped for supplying the Twenty-sixth Division.

It became necessary to select a location for the light railways shops, and as this was a plant of considerable magnitude, where we erected cars and where we stored vast quantities of track material, for use in the operations at the front, it was desirable to keep these shops some distance back of the front where they were not likely to be bombed by German aviators; and if they were kept back at least 30 kilometers from the front, we could at any time use German prisoners if we wished, as it was against the rules of warfare to work them within 30 kilometers of the front lines, which rule the French and British scrupulously observed. The writer recommended a place called Abainville, two miles north of Gondrecourt, which was approved by the General Staff

Gen. Maurice Tells How Foch Promised

ALLIED COUNCIL BY A VIGOROUS GESTURE

to Win War by 3 Punches and a Kick

Not a Word Did He Say in Reply, Says Noted British Leader During Visit to St. Louis, but He Slashed Out With His Fists and a Foot to Show How He Felt About It and That Was the Way in Which He Finally Beat the Germans.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.

"FOCH won the war with three punches and a big kick."

The speaker was no less an authority than Major-General Sir Frederick B. Maurice, former chief of operations at the War Office of the British army, whose knowledge of just how the war was won probably is not exceeded by any leader save Foch himself.

"He told the diplomats he would win it that way, and he did," continued the distinguished General, who spent Thursday and Friday in St. Louis. "I heard about it a short time afterward, from one who was there. It was at a meeting of the Supreme Interallied Council. Marshal Foch had been placed in command of all the armies in France shortly before. One of the Premiers asked him how he proposed to break the deadlock and win the war.

"Foch didn't say a word, but he stood up. Standing like a pugilist, he imitated a short, stiff-arm punch with his right fist then one with his left; another with his right, and followed them with a big, lusty kick. That was his solution for the problem that had baffled every French, British and German leader and all the boards of strategy for almost four years.

"It was well known that the side which first produced a leader who could solve the problem of breaking through the opposing line of entrenchments would win the war. Great Generals had burned the midnight oil and grown gray trying to find the way out. All the big military brains of the world had been concentrated on it ceaselessly, each haunted by the specter that the other side might find it first. And that was the answer; and that was the way it was first disclosed by the man who found it—three punches and a big kick."

138th the Toe of the Boot

In the course of the interview, had at the Racquet Club, Sir Frederick made the further interesting revelation that St. Louis' own 138th Infantry was right on the toe of the boot with which the big kick was administered, but that is getting ahead of the story. Let us begin at the beginning, as the burglar said when he removed the hinges from the front gate.

"The first jab with the right fist was the one that bloodied the German's nose south of Soissons, on July 18," said Sir Frederick, and he thudded his own hard right fist against the big palm of his left. "It was delivered with French and Americans."

"Now, the punch with the left that followed had three knuckles and each left a dent. That punch was made with the British army, and consisted of the attack in front of Amiens on Aug. 8, the advance about Baupaume, Aug. 19, and the drive at the Drocourt-Queant switch line Sept. 2. The third punch, again with the right, was Pershing's blow at the St. Mihiel salient, Sept. 12.

"Each of these three punches were limited blows. Each had a definite purpose, and when that was accomplished, the pressure was taken away. The purpose was to exhaust the enemy's reserves; to get him out of wind, and it was served.

The Big Kick That Went Through

"Then, when the German was panting, 'stalling for wind,' Foch let drive with his big boot, and he put behind it everything he had—the united strength of the British, French and American armies. And he followed it through. It was a terrific kick, and the sweep of it never stopped until the German cried 'Enough!' This is the way it was delivered:

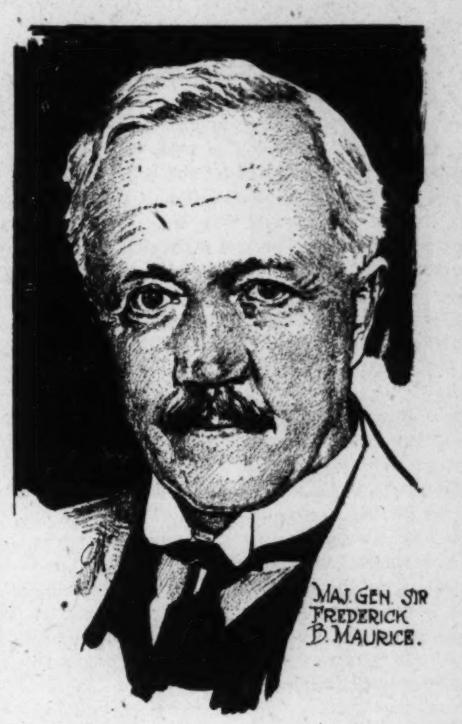
"On Sept. 26, Gen. Liggett's First American Army Corps, between the Argonne Forest and the Meuse River, drove northward, and your own Thirty-fifth Division was on its left center. The toe of the boot had made contact. On the same day, Gen. Gouraud's French army, west of the Argonne, struck.

"Following the swing of the kick, half the British army attacked on Sept. 27, the second day, and the Hindenburg line was punctured when the Canadians entered Cambrai. The German was moving before the big foot.

"Not a moment did the pressure stop. On the third day, Sept. 28, King Albert of Belgium, commanding the Belgian army, the Second British Army and a French army, hurled his force against the German line on the front stretching from north of Ypres to Messines, and all the Flanders ridges fell before him.

The Boot Gets Into Action

"Now came the climax. The German was staggering before the impact of a kick that had behind it all the force of the young manhood of three nations. It was a critical moment in the world's history.



MAJ. GEN. SIR FREDERICK B. MAURICE.

"On Sept. 29, the Fourth British Army, having in its center the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth American Divisions, plunged against St. Quentin, that central pivot of the Hindenburg line. It was a straight frontal assault on the strongest system of fortifications ever devised by man. The line cracked—and caved in.

"The war was won. The German front went to pieces after that. It crumbled all along. The great boot moved forward with accelerating speed, gathering momentum and weight as it went, and soon the German was reeling headlong before it. Then came Ludendorff's request for an armistice, and the end. The three short punches and the big kick had solved the problem.

"No man can take from Foch's greatness. The test of it is the result which he achieved. Before him, Ludendorff had come the nearest to finding the answer. In those March and April days of 1918 it looked like he had, but it was not the right way. Ludendorff tried the same method that other Generals of both sides had used—giving the big kick first, and following it up with a shower of punches. The difference between Ludendorff and the other was that he almost succeeded in giving the kick hard enough to knock out his opponent with the first blow."

Foch and Wellington

Gen. Sir Frederick paused and pulled his red mustache thoughtfully before answering the next inquiry. "I believe that history will place Foch nearer Wellington," he said. "Not so high as Napoleon, but certainly as great as Wellington; perhaps greater. It was, as I have said, an entirely new warfare, and Foch was the only man to master it."

The talk turned on the long-mooted question of Ludendorff being Hindenburg's "brains." Sir Frederick settled it.

"There is no doubt of it," he said quickly. "Ludendorff always was the mind that made the plans. He was a great General. Hindenburg was merely the big, strong figure who carried out Ludendorff's schemes.

"That was the one unquestionable feature about Foch—nobody was ever credited with being his 'brains.' He stood on his own feet. He made his own plans, and he carried them out. That was true unification of control."

Sir Frederick, who had the painful duty during the gloomy days of March and April, 1918, of telling correspondents in his weekly audiences of how the battle was going strongly against the allies, referred again to that time, dwelling on what he frankly called "the timely arrival" of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth American Divisions.

The Darkest Days

"Between March 21 and April 30 our casualties were 350,000, about three times the number of your total casualties in the Argonne," he said. "They had been giving us a bad time of it before the American divisions turned the tide. Mind you, it was that same battered British army, strengthened by your two divisions, that took the offensive Aug. 8, and never stopped advancing until the day the armistice was signed.

"In that period that army took 182,000 prisoners and 2000 guns. It was the most remarkable recovery of the war, and it was made possible by the timely arrival of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth Divisions, who fought with us right on through to the end.

"There was a curious condition," Sir Frederick chuckled. "The Twenty-seventh, as you know, was a New York division, mainly composed of men of Irish and German extraction, who naturally had no great fondness for the British. As their commanding General (Ryan) said to me: 'They have all been taught, when they were babies, to knock down tin redcoats with their toy cannon.'

"After they had been with us a while, though, they found out the Englishman was not as bad as he had been painted, and the longer they stayed together the better they got along. Your Englishman is a man who takes a bit of knowing. He is rather shy and he doesn't hit you on the back right away and tell you you're a good fellow.

"All my experience has been that when friction occurred between British and American soldiers, it was due to mutual misunderstanding, and was on short acquaintance. We're going to be good friends.

"And now," he said briskly, "that will have to do for you. I'm coming back here if I can, and tell your people all about it—just what the different armies did and how we worked together to beat the Hun. It's rather a good story, and," his eyes twinkled, "I believe I know enough to tell it straight."

He Knew the "Inside"

Few would dispute the last statement. The position of chief of operations, which Sir Frederick held until his daring attack on the Lloyd George ministry last May resulted in his transfer, required that he be intimately familiar with the "inside" of all operations in every theater of war. He inaugurated the system of giving weekly interviews to American correspondents, which proved so successful that all correspondents were included, and upon these statements the American public was dependent for its most authoritative information on the tactical movements of the armies.

Indeed, it was on the very ground that Lloyd George and Chancellor Bonar Law were misinforming Parliament and the public about the condition of the army, that Sir Frederick made the attack that threatened the overthrow of the Lloyd George Cabinet—a danger which the astute Premier apparently overcame only by the most vigorous exercise of his prestige and political sagacity.

A Typical Englishman

In manner and appearance, Gen: Sir Frederick is an Englishman to a "t." His thin, fair hair, his ruddy complexion, his speech, all bespeak his ancestry. While his imposing forehead and grave, pale blue eyes give him something of the air of a scholar, yet his gestures are vigorous, his words are emphatic and he talks as a man must who has more important things to say than he can possibly have time to say them in.

He knows the war from the beginning. He held a commanding post in the "Old Contemptibles," the little British bulldog of an army that set its teeth in the throat of the great gray monster that swept down through Belgium in the terrible days of August, 1914.

The fact that the sheer weight of the monster enabled it to lift the bulldog from the ground, and bear it, struggling, back toward the Channel, never loosen the grip of the teeth.

Sir Frederick rode with the British cavalry screen which covered that stubborn retreat. He was there when they dismounted again and again to take the shock of the eager uhlans and jagers who tried to break through on to the heels of the sullenly withdrawing infantry.

Witnessed Desperate Fighting

He saw the thin line of riflemen fire their weapons into the advancing masses of gray-clad infantry until they were so heated th egrimy defenders cursed, and held on, as their fingers blistered against the hot breeches. And he saw the gray hordes still roll forward.

He was an eyewitness to those immortal stands that Britons made with Enfields and pistols against field artillery and attacks in mass formation, when so many German soldiers fell before the vengeful riflemen that their official reports stated that "the enemy opposed us with massed machine guns," a weapon of which the British hardly had any, and with which that particular army was almost totally unprovided.

Thus it is, that when Sir Frederick tells the story of the fighting that won the war, he is describing something of which he has personal knowledge—knowledge that extends from Liege right down to the moment that the German, twisting around from in front of the big boot, cried "Enough."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Soldiers Appreciate Red Cross.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

It may be interesting to you to know just what the sentiments of the boys of the A. E. F. are towards the American Red Cross Association for their valiant work during the war and up to the present moment. With a deep sense of gratitude, I feel it is my duty to express to you our warmest thanks that through the medium of your journal (of which I am a constant reader) they may get some of the well-earned publicity that is more than due them, so that our people at home may learn not only that we appreciate the constant effort on the part of the Red Cross to relieve the sufferings and anxieties of boys so far from home, but also the fact that it really was money well spent in the aid they lent this wonderful organization.

Lonesome Soldiers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

After spending a most miserable winter in the Toul sector we were withdrawn and brought down to within a few miles of Bordeaux, and we expected sailing orders at a very early day. Now, we find after two months of waiting (the hardest fight of the war), we find that we have been sidetracked, due to the arrival of several divisions who hold priority on the sailing list, and we may be here for six months.

Being held here for six months is within itself a heart-sickening sentence, in addition to the other things we have to contend with; among the most serious of these is our mail. In a desperate attempt to remove the hardship, we appeal to you.

We are two young privates in the Tank Corps of the United States Army. We received our initial training at Camp Colt and our finishing touches at Bourg, France. Although we have had our share of war's bitterness, we can say that the Tank Corps proved to be as interesting and exciting as we anticipated and while we were forced, at times, to live under trying conditions, we feel that the experience will do us much good as the years roll on. It made us see life in its true light and gave us knowledge that could not be had in books or learned at school. But the one thing that will lighten the burden of our stay, is mail from the one in dear old U. S. A. Not being as fortunate as some of our fellow soldiers in receiving mail, we are appealing to anyone who has a spare moment which they could sacrifice to cheer two lonely soldier lads. Any one can feel that such missives will be greatly appreciated by,

Wise Use of the Ballot.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In Raymond Robins' eloquent speech as printed in the Sunday edition, Mr. Robins is made to say, "In this country all wrongs can be righted by the ballot." That's very true. He could have said just as truthfully, all rights can be wronged by the ballot, because it is barely possible that even the best country could be done to death by a crowd of official mistakes—life servants of the Constitution, but haters of its spirit, and because the quality of good judgment is an absolute necessity to the well-being of a nation of ballot wielders—especially if the times be out of joint.

Electric Fixture Inspectors.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I desire to call your attention to a holdup now existing in St. Louis in the form of a law. It is inspector of the installation of electric lighting fixtures. I recently had five old-style fixtures changed for new ones in one of my flats in this city, and about twenty days after the work was done a very important gentleman called and announced his very important mission of inspecting the said electric fixtures. He was admitted and proceeded to walk through the house and casually glanced at the fixtures, and then walked out—nothing examined or inspected—and the most interesting part of the play is that today when I received my bill from the fixture people I find a charge of $1.50 for inspector's fees. This is a nice condition, and I do not believe the public in general are acquainted with this law. What kind of lawmakers have we? It is nothing more than a desire to create new jobs; more expense burdens on the people; more power in politics.

Fenders for Automobiles.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Won't you kindly help put through a law compelling the manufacturers of automobiles to equip all autos with a good fender? It will be the means of saving many a life. I have no device, only a desire to help save a few lives. Set the inventors to thinking through your valuable newspaper.

THE OLD GRAB FORMULA AT FIUME.

The memorandum presented to the peace conference by Signor Barzilai of the Italian delegation must be assumed to embody as strong a summary as can be made of the points on which Italy's demand for Fiume rests. If no more convincing a presentation can be made, Italy's claim is weak indeed.

The argument designed to be most appealing is based on attempts to show that Fiume is a part of that "unredeemed" area to which Italy has an undisputed right. If it is really irredenta territory, whose inclusion with Italy is supported by the strong sentimental reasons applying to other areas, why was not the discovery made earlier? Why did not Rome ask for it in the pre-war agreement made at London in compensation for sacrifices?

If Austrian census figures on racial divisions in Fiume are to be discredited now, why were they not to be discredited then?

Signor Barzilai says that it was not included because the fall of the Hapsburgs was not expected at the time the London treaty was entered into and that it was "therefore natural that, to a population of 50,000,000 inhabitants, one Adriatic port should be left."

But those inhabitants are still there. Change of rulers and shiftings in governmental units do not alter their need for free access to the sea. On the contrary, those needs may be all the more clamorous. The point as to "military safety" is touched on but lightly. It is hardly to be pressed after the reference in President Wilson's statement on conference differences. If Italian safety did not demand the possession of Fiume when Austria-Hungary had a prospect of continuing a powerful state, retaining its historic enmity to Italy, what considerations of safety demand it now when Austria-Hungary is dismembered? Those who now oppose her pretentions stand exactly where Italy stood in 1915, when she made her own designation of the utmost she could expect.

Italy now has more than 4000 miles of sea coast, not including that of her islands. To insist that she has a pressing need for more is like a statement that the old Russia, with nearly one-sixth of the earth's land surface, had a need for more territory. If Italy gains in the peace adjustments but one-sixth of the eastern shore of the Adriatic, she will yet control, with what she has already, two-thirds of the total coast line of that sea.

She obtains Trieste, the greatest and busiest seaport of Austria-Hungary; also Pola, its greatest naval station and one of the finest harbors in all Europe. The five-sixths of the Dalmatian coast, which is denied her, but which she covets, is no more to be compared as an asset with the Istrian Peninsula she gains than the bleak coast of Lower California is to be compared with our own Atlantic coast, indented with plentiful harbors.

The incident in the conference to which the dispute gives rise is not wholly to be regretted. In the attitude of this one delegation we see what might have been the attitude of all European delegations but for the spirit and counsel which America brought to the conference.

Italy fears that Trieste, under her control, will have a most dangerous commercial rival in Fiume, if it is given to the new Jugo-Slav state. Even under their old masters Fiume was threatening Trieste's supremacy. It is worth more than all the rest of the Dalmatian coast to the south and would realize the dream of an Italian lake in the Adriatic.

Well-wishers of Italy, admirers of her struggle for unity and independence, may excuse the demand that has caused discord, but cannot hope that it will be successful. She is applying, not the irredenta formula, but the old formula of trade grabs and territorial grabs whose inevitable consequences in misery are to be read in her own past history.

CONSTANTINOPLE'S SECRET LIBRARIES.

Some of the books of Livy undoubtedly will be found among the great number of volumes ascertained to be stored in crypts under the public buildings of Constantinople, but will the lost books of Livy be found?

The report that the long-awaited discovery is about to be made may rest on no better foundation that the vague impression of some uneducated Turkish under official. And, indeed, in the absence of any information whatever on the subject, what more natural conjecture than that the lost historical works will be restored to the world when the vast collection of ancient books whose existence was previously unsuspected come to be examined?

Of the 35 books of Livy preserved to us out of 142, two are incomplete. Of the other 107 books the summaries remain, so that their contents are known. Their full text probably would not add so much to the sum of knowledge, but their recovery has been the dream of classicists for centuries. The occasional discovery of even a fragment in the Vatican or other libraries has been a sensation for scholars.

These tons and tons of books, which it was supposed the Turks burned during their conquests, but which, it appears, they took back to their capital, may increase stores of learning and make more definite our knowledge of particular men and particular periods. It is agreeable to think that forgotten authors of great merit and forgotten works of undisputed value will gain new recognition.

If the missing works of the Roman historian are among the volumes, further cause will be given for congratulation over the Turkish downfall.

LEARNING TO USE THE RIVERS.

With ample tonnage offered the barge line improvised by the Government is now being operated to capacity. The plans made by the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association at their meeting in St. Louis look to a comprehensive improvement of the river channels to keep pace with the expected commercial development of the future.

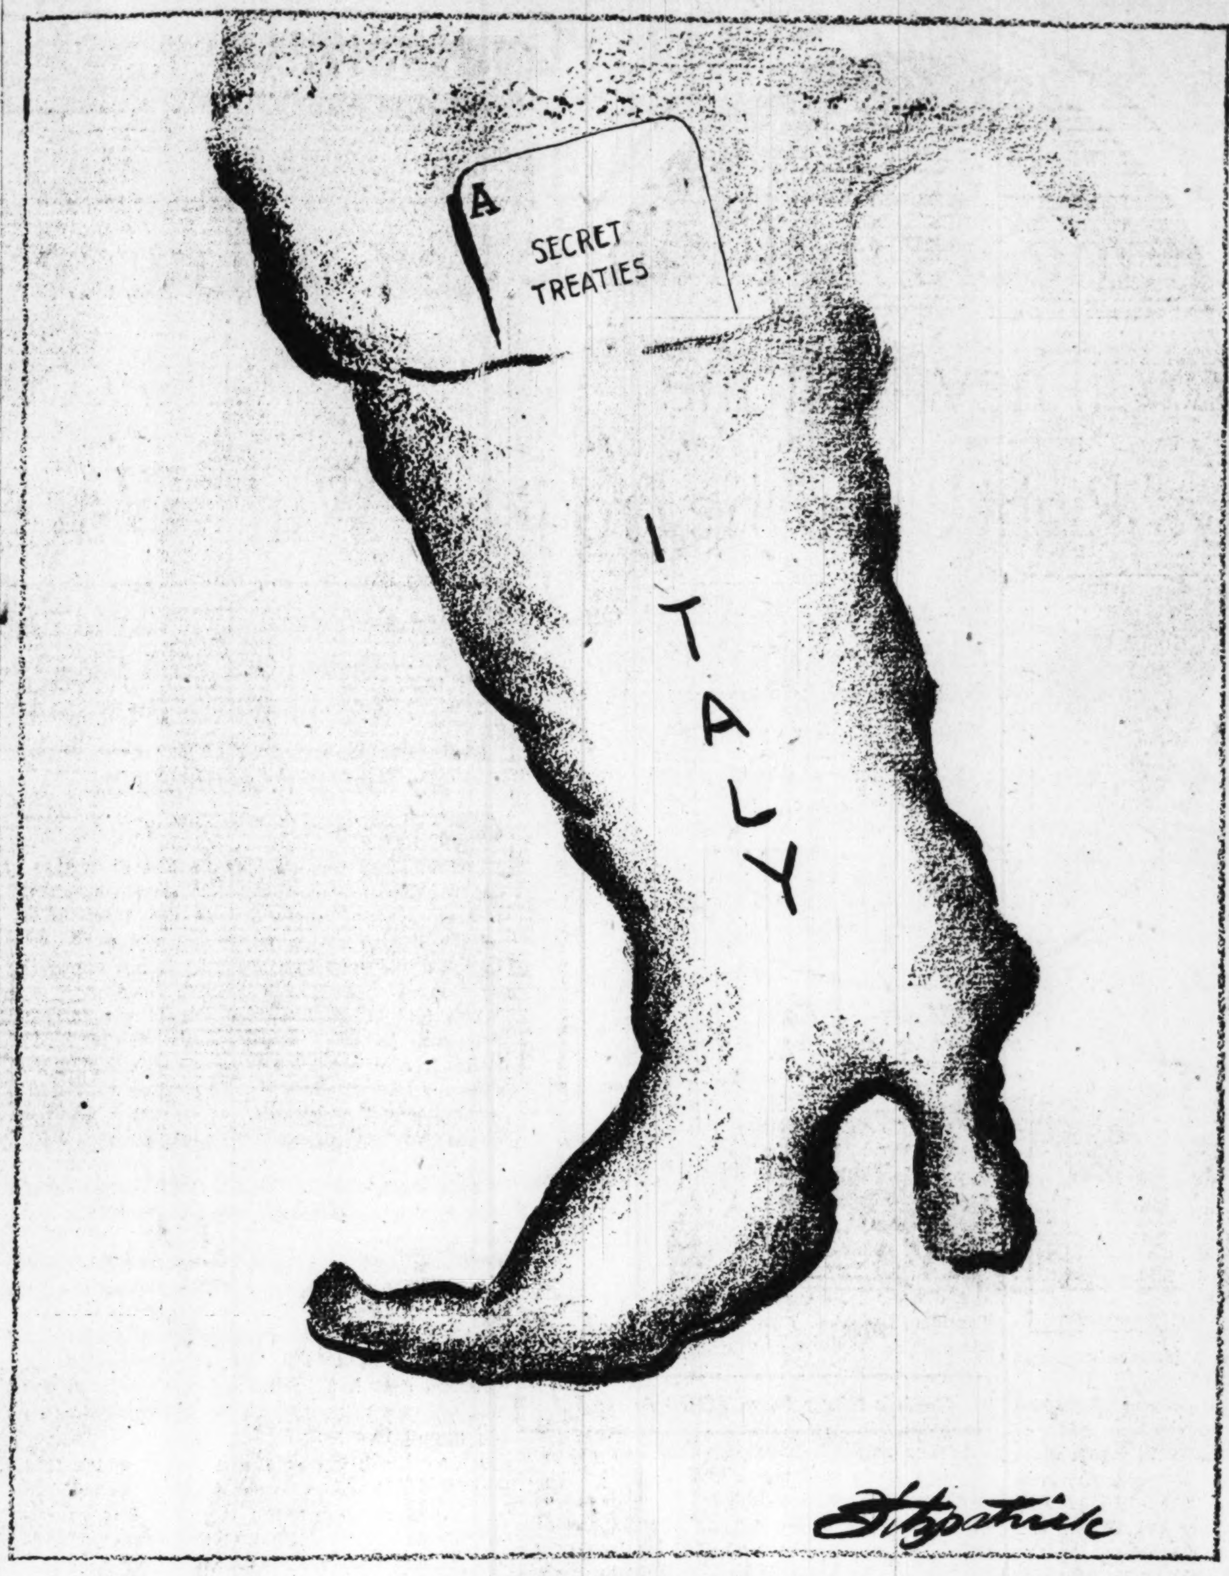
Accordingly, with the problem of the present provided for and solutions offered for the problems of the remoter future, there remains the problem of the near future. Forty barges and power boats of the latest river type will soon be added to the present facilities of the river line, increasing perhaps five times the cargo space and cutting down the time of round trips.

What is being done to utilize this large increase in available carrying capacity? Freight offerings that tax the possibilities of the existing craft will make but a negligible showing in the capacious holds of the new barges.

The barge line as yet is only a temporary, not a permanent success. The chance of lamentable failure still exists. Intensified effort must begin now and be continued to make a five-fold addition to the tonnage moved up and down the river.

Terminals and tonnage are the need of the present summer.

Shippers must learn how to use the rivers. The latter have been neglected so long that the former have much to learn. The possibilities of the rivers are many and their limitations few. Both must be studied with a view to the fullest, most expeditious, most profitable utilization of opportunity. No freight, no boats.



THE OLD "ARMY GAME."

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

RACE EQUALITY.

From the Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The inability of the peace conference to say anything on the race question is the more to be regretted because this is one of the strong points of its rival, the "red league." The Bolsheviki are fanatical in their assertion of the equality of men. They take quite literally the postulate of our Declaration of Independence that "all men are created 'equal.'" To them "all men" means colored men as well as white men, Jew as well as gentile. It is an essential part of their doctrine that neither an individual nor a nation nor a race is to be exploited. This is not the least of the reasons why Bolshevism is so disturbing a force in a world organized at present very much in the interest of certain races and nations.

Take, for instance, the Jewish question, which is especially acute in Eastern Europe because so large a part of the Jewish race found refuge there from the intolerance of the West. It has been wrongly asserted that the Bolsheviki are mainly Jews, which is as wide of the mark as the accusation that the Jews are mainly Bolsheviki. Some Jews are Bolsheviki, and their superior education and mental activity have made a number of them prominent in the movement. But the greater number of Lenine's followers are Russians, and he is himself a Great Russian of noble family, representing neither an oppressed class, an oppressed nationality, nor an oppressed race.

Yet the appeal of Bolshevism to the Jews and other ill-treated peoples should not be ignored. Consider the case reported from Pinsk of the execution of 33 Jews alleged to be Bolsheviki. It is now asserted by the head of a relief agency that they were merely representative Jews of the city who had gathered by invitation to organize a system for the distribution of expected food supplies. The house was surrounded by Polish soldiers, and those captured were shot without a trial. The facts in the case are being investigated by the allies, and judgment may be reserved, but there is unfortunately no lack of proof in regard to other pogroms. In the border countries where the Jews are most numerous they are being very cruelly treated, and these are also just now the regions where the spread of Bolshevism is most feared. Whatever other crimes the Bolsheviki may have committed, their creed leaves no place for pogroms; a Jew may be assailed as a capitalist but not as a Jew, and equality of rights is a matter of course. If unhappily present conditions should continue, the natural effect would be to force a great part of the Jews of Eastern Europe into the Bolshevik camp. Racial intolerance plays into the hands of Lenine and his followers.

"I"—SORES IN THE MODERN SUBSTITUTE FOR POETRY.

Clement Wood in the New York Evening Post.

Poets were once the most modest of men. This was not in a mythical antebellum or antediluvian epoch, but in the more recent past, revealed by anthologies, scrapbooks, and other literary mausoleums of the last 400 years.

Even Mr. Shakspeare, during his long career as the joint George M. Cohan and Harry Clay Blaney of his day, was content to have his plays printed with a simple "By W. S."

But the bards of today are different. They not only admit their offense, they shout it; they not only anounce their name, but often little else.

We have dipped into now this, now that book of modern vers libre, and found that all vie in the I-ob-session. The two volumes of "Others" yield the following—with the inclusive confession that the context may alter the individual intention, but not the general tone:

Alice Groff admits:

Behold me!
The perfect one!
Epitome of the universe!

Wallace Stevens murmurs:

I am what is around me • • •
I find that I am much taller,
For I reach right up to the sun.

Frances Gregg contributes:

I am the possessor and the possessed.

Skipwith Cannell insists:

I will re-create myself.
I will be right. • • •
I will gobble up everything • • •
I am all things and in everything
I am Yahovah the Great.
Nothing is as great as I am. • • •

Feverishly we turn to "My Marjonary," by Robert Carlton Brown, only to discover:

I am asbestos. I am myself • • •
I am so beautiful to myself
I must look very ugly to others • • •
Damn anybody
With cheap ambitions.
I will be
God. • • •

Adolff Wolff's "Songs, Sighs and Coises" (the last word rhymes with "voices") admits:

I am God!
I am drunk with the joy of creating.
At my touch form comes out of chaos.

Alfred Kreymborg, stepfather of the "Others" group, presents these "Mushrooms:"

Before you came—
I was I. • • •

I know I tell you I love you,
But I don't; I love myself. • • •

I am four monkeys;
How many monkeys are you?

Postponing the embarrassing query, we reach Ezra Pound, surely the George Washington of this countryful of Imagists:

I dreamt that I was God Himself
Whom Heavenly joy immerses,
And all the angels sat around
And praised my verses.

The virus has affected Amy Lowell:

My heart is a cleft pomegranate • • •
I will mix me a drink of stars!

D. H. Lawrence becomes hectically self-conscious:

I was the God and the creation at once;
Creator, I looked at my creation,
Created, I looked at myself, the Creator. • • •
I was the loved, I kissed the woman,
And, God of horror, I was kissing also myself;
I was ablaze bursting up,
I was a burst of light, a tiger. • • •

And so on. And on.

There is a good deal that Carl Sandburg is:

I am the undertow, • • •
I am the Law
Older than you. • • •
I am the crumbler,
Tomorrow.

Spoon River's Mr. Masters—My I!

I now can master what you are and see,
What you have been. • • •

My brother, the god, and I grow sick
Of heaven's heights

Though only De Casseres, so far, can equal James Oppenheim, whose "Book of Self" is all about—but judge for yourself:

Self's the monster all-mouth and gorilla-arms.

Witter Bynner, he of the rhythmical name, closes his "Grenstone Poems" with a variation of the familiar note:

I have been waiting long enough • • •
Impossible gods, Good-by!
I wait no more • • • The way is rough,
But the god who climbs is I!

To indicate our impartiality in this diagnosis of the "I"-sore, we quote from a brown volume labeled "Glad of Earth," whose polyrhythmic singer chants:

I shall climb starward, through discarded husks of myself • • •
This I shall do, shaping of them a creator, a god • • •
I am the melodious earth and the shining heavens • • •
I am no man, but a mighty ape. • • •

At least this is more modest than Mr. Kreymborg's four monkeys.

Modern typewriters especially fitted for the production of free verse, contain a whole row of I-keys, and an I-lock that writes a complete line of I's when one key is pressed. Thus science keeps step with the arts.

Poetry is, shall we say, cutting its "I"-teeth.

Viscount Grey, Who Tried to Prevent War, Preparing Story of Work in Memoirs

Former British Foreign Secretary, Now Almost Blind, Was Sponsor for League of Nations Long Before Conflict.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG.

In a little village in Holland is the Man Who Started the War that has caused the world more anguish than anything in its history. In another village, in Northumberland, is the man who, more than any European statesman, tried to prevent it in those last tragic hours of July, 1914.

He failed. And today the leaders of the world's democratic nations are at work on the peace terms which it is hoped will prevent any recurrence of the "bloody sweat," as the President has described the great cataclysm. It is deciding, too, what shall be the fate of the fugitive of Amerongen.

But the man who tried to avert the war—Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, now Viscount Grey of Falloden, is preparing a volume of memoirs which should be one of the most notable contributions to European diplomatic and political history for many generations past.

Grey is Almost Blind.

But the former Foreign Secretary has grown almost totally blind and is learning all over again how to read by the sense of touch. It is one of the greatest misfortunes of his life, and one only of many which have seemed to single him out among great world figures. Except his friends, few nowadays hear or know anything about the man whose activities once attracted the attention of the world.

Political misfortune, but approaching blindness even more, hastened his disappearance from active public life. Fate brought tragedy into his life long before he became perhaps the greatest figure in European chancelleries. The official mortality during the war among Foreign Secretaires, or Secretaries of State, as we in America call them, might well indicate that fate had thrown a shadow across the paths of scores of them.

There must now be a fairly large sized alumni association of out-of-work Secretaires of Foreign Affairs, in which few if any of the big nations of the world are not represented, not even our own, for Bryan succumbed. In the last days of the old Russia they came and went with almost daily regularity.

Wife's Death a Heavy Blow.

But, as I have pointed out, tragedy cut across the path of Grey when he was still Sir Edward, and while he was still a new incumbent in that high post of honor, the Foreign Secretaryship. He was deeply devoted to his wife, a companion to him in his fishing trips and other outdoor excursions. She was injured in a runaway accident in 1906 and died. The blow has left its mark. Always of a retiring disposition, the Foreign Secretary became more so under the poignancy of this domestic tragedy.

A short time before the war a brother was killed by a lion in Africa. In the early days of the war his nephew, who would have become heir to the title of Viscount, which was conferred on him when governmental changes saw him depart from the Foreign Office, was killed. The title therefore may lapse with the death of the first Viscount, Grey himself, for he has no children.

But fate had another score to settle. Some months ago fire broke out in his Northumberland house, and had it not been for some neighbors, all his manuscript and other material being collected for his forthcoming volume would have perished in his study.

Early Sponsor of League.

The culminating misfortune which has come to the late Foreign Secretary in his absence from the Peace Conference, for even his critics admit that he stood sponsor for a league or society of nations idea long before the great nations of Europe became involved in war. It was political misfortune which willed it that he should not be present to advocate the formation of such a league. Instead, he is only a lay exponent along with millions of other Britons and Americans, but a lay exponent having the added misfortune of almost complete blindness circumscribing his efforts.

Only one book up to the present time represents this great statesman's contribution to world literature, and strange as it may seem, it is a small, but authoritative volume entitled "Fly Fishing." I remember once hearing the late Ambassador Page tell of the absorbing interest of Viscount Grey in fly fishing. An American who has frequetly been on fishing trips with the former Foreign Secretary, and is himself an authority on fly fishing and an expert in reproducing the different species of flies, has told me of the delightful outings he had had with Viscount Grey, and of the pride with which the latter exhibited some of the finest specimens he had made. But now that his eyesight has almost gone, he can no longer indulge in this hobby. In fact, just a few days ago he wrote to some friends saying he must now take to salmon fishing, for it did not require the same skill tying the small flies.

Grey an Outdoor Man.

In his devotion to outdoor recreation, Viscount Grey has much in common with British statesmen. Mr. Balfour, though a good golfer, is not such an outdoor enthusiast, but Lloyd George is. Harking back some years one remembers that Gladstone had a passion for tree-felling much as did Col. Roosevelt. Lord Rosebery was a noted horse racer, and won the Derby twice while Foreign Secretary. In more recent years the then Premier, Asquith, had much difficulty playing golf on account of the interference by suffragettes. On one occasion they chased him off his golf course.

The night that war was declared, I remember seeing Sir Edward Grey with a troubled countenance going through Downing street after the fateful Cabinet meeting which threw Britain's strength into the balance against an all-powerful and conquering Germany. He was not then wearing the dark goggles in which I saw him in the Foreign Office some months afterward.

He was then measuring diplomatic swords with President Wilson over the blockade issues, and for the first time correspondents were able to invade the halls of this inner shrine of British diplomacy. We had an almost daily conference with some under-official of the Foreign Office to obtain the British point of view on the issues that conflicted with our own stand on the blockade, and to learn as well the British interpretation of the momentous submarine issues.

War Doomed the Top Hat.

It was quite early in the war that the high hat and the morning coat seemed to disappear from this sanctum of diplomatic effort, and Sir Edward himself frequently appeared in an ordinary business suit. I think the late Ambassador Page was one of the chief exponents of this war-born garb of diplomacy, for he frequently came to the Foreign Office to see Sir Edward in a conventional suit and minus the top hat.

These were days when the Tory hosts were constantly sniping the Foreign Secretary for being too lenient toward America, for they interpreted the policies of the Foreign Office as checking the free hand which they demanded for the navy. The sniping increased, and Lord Robert Cecil was made Minister of Blockade. Lord Robert previously was one of the severest critics of the Foreign Office, but eventually he also became the butt of many Tory shafts for his alleged placating policy toward America.

In the House of Commons Sir Edward was never a striking speaker, but his calm method of delivery and splendid choice of words always commanded an attentive House because he never appeared unless he had something of great importance to say, which is unlike some of the present membership. On one occasion in the intense days of July, 1911, when the Parliament act controversy reached its height and the Unionists refused a hearing to Asquith, the Premier, Grey, arose and strongly rebuked them for the uproar, nor was he interrupted. He has never spoken in the House of Lords since his resignation, and when he was made a peer.

Wilson Cordial to Grey.

When President Wilson visited London one of the most important deputations he received at the American embassy was a league of nations body headed by Viscount Grey, and there was a most cordial greeting from the President for the great British statesman who had challenged the President's contentions in the many representations which came from Washington on the British interpretation of the blockade issues. Those who were present were struck by the whole-hearted friendliness exsibited by both men on their first meeting.

Viscount Grey, perhaps more than any great figure of the war, with the exception of President Wilson, excited the ire of the German cartoonists most. The President was nearly always a knave in professional guise; Grey, nearly always a lanky, supercilious knave with a receding chin. The cartoon and press attacks on the British Foreign Secretary were stilled when the Lichnowsky revelations were published and the former German Ambassador in London had told of the sincere efforts of Sir Edward to prevent the war.

Read His Obituary.

And Sir Edward enjoyed the distinction at one time of reading his own obituary as compiled by the Germans, because they mistook the death of Earl Grey for that of Sir Edward, and not being too unmindful of ordinary decencies, said some things in his favor, though grudgingly.

But if the cartoonists in the enemy countries devoted much space to his physignomy, it is more than the British camera has been able to do, for Viscount Grey is seldom photographed.

He is one of the few great world figures whose life has not been recounted in book form during the war, or, in fact, at any time during his life.

1,832,523 OFFICERS AND MEN RELEASED FROM ARMY TO DATE

War Department Report Shows 676,732 Overseas Troops Returned to This Country.

By the Associated Press.

Orders have been issued for the demobilization of 1,975,000. Oversea troops returned to the United States to date total 676,732.

Enlisments in response to the departmetn's call for volunteers have reached a total of 18,373, of whom 4955 enlisted for service in the Expeditionary Forces, 813 for service in the Philippines, 280 in the Hawaiian department, and 35 in the Pan-American Canal Zone.

Events in the Social World

"Dollar Dance," a Decided Novelty to St. Louis, Which Will Be Held at the Coliseum Next Month for the Benefit of the St. Louis Children's Hospital, Is Expected to Be Very Nearly on a Par With Far-Famed Veiled Prophet's Ball.

ONE of the innovations that is promised for St. Louis in the near future before the close of the social season is the "Dollar Dance" to take place under most comprehensive conditions at the Coliseum. This dance will be given under the auspices of the St. Louis Children's Hospital on Friday evening, May 23, the object in view being to raise the major portion of a fund of $30,000 which is needed for the proper operation of the hospital during the present year. While the "Dollar Dance" is a decided novelty in St. Louis the magnificent proportions on which the affair is being planned and the prominence and well known capability of the women who are sponsoring it will have the effect of placing it very nearly on a par with the far-famed Veiled Prophet's ball.

There will be no formal invitations issued to it, but in a few days an invitation will be issued to all St. Louis to attend. Not only the devotees of the dancing muse, but onlookers as well, for dancing will be but a small part of the many attractions that will be gathered under the Coliseum roof on the eventful night. There will be attractions galore in the galleries and under the seat arches, restaurants and soft-drink pavilions at strategic points and one whole end of the big building will be portioned off for the "Cherry Garden," for which all sorts of delightful surprises and amusing diversions are being planned.

Arrangements for this entertainment are in the hands of Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones, who is chairman of the Hospital directorate and who has selected Mrs. Louis Marion McCall as general manager in charge of the floor, concessions and other details. Committees for the various phases of the project will be announced this week.

NUMEROUS engagement announcements have followed the post-lenten period and one of the most important ones of the season was that of Miss Lila Capen to Meredith Jones, which was announced at an informal tea given by the bride-elect on Monday afternoon. Miss Capen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Capen of the Kingsbury Apartments. She was graduated from Mary Institute and then attended Vassar College where she was graduated in 1917. She did not make a formal debut on account of the war, but took an active part in the social affairs of the debutante set and has been a great favorite. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Jones is the son of Mrs. Meredith Jones, who formerly resided here, but has been making her home in recent years in Chambersburg, Pa. He is a graduate of Washington University and was in the army a year and a half and has recently been discharged. No date for the wedding has been set, but it will probably be an event of the early fall.

ANOTHER important engagement announcement was that of Miss Harriette Krause to Leighton Shields, which was made known on Wednesday at a luncheon given by Mrs. John Fraser of 55 Kingsbury place. Miss Krause is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Krause of the Netherby Hall Apartments, 4540 Lindell boulevard. She was graduated in 1916 at Mary Institute and made her debut the following winter. She has served twice as maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball and has been very popular. Mr. Shields is the son of Judge George H. Shields of 3665 Delmar boulevard and was graduated from Harvard in 1904. No date for the wedding has been set, but it will probably take place in the fall, when Miss Krause returns from her parent's summer home in Canada, where the family expects to go in about a month. Fourteen of Miss Krause's intimate friends were guests at the luncheon.

FROM New York came announcement last week of the engagement of Mrs. Elliott Marshall to Lieutenant-Commander Frank Slingluff, Jr., U. S. N. Mrs. Marshall was formerly Miss Helen Floyd-Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Floyd-Jones of St. Louis and was a popular prominent belle before her marriage took her to Montclair, N. J., to reside. She received her education abroad and is talented and accomplished. Her parents are at present in Jacksonville, Fla., and her sisters, Misses Katherine and Mimi Floyd-Jones are doing Government work in Washington. Another sister Miss Delancey Floyd-Jones is with Mrs. Marshall in the East. Lieutenant-Commander Slingluff is in charge of the U. S. Destroyer Lamberton. The date for the marriage has not been disclosed.

STILL another interesting betrothal is that of Miss Ruth Brown of 6 Beverly place to Maurice Obear. Miss Brown is the daughter of the late Alanson D. Brown. She received her education at Mary Institute and is a sister of Mrs. William D. Collins of 5 Hortense place, Mrs. W. F. McElroy of Forest Park boulevard, and of Miss Vesta Brown, who recently sailed for overseas duty with the Red Cross. Mr. Obear is the son of Thomas S. Obear of Chicago. He is a graduate of Leland Stanford University and was formerly a Captain in the Fourteenth Field Artillery, U. S. A., and has recently received his discharge from the service. No date for the wedding has been set.

ADDED to the long list of engagements is that of Miss Lorena Jamison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison, who was hostess at a luncheon Wednesday at her home, "Red Gables," St. Louis County, when formal announcement of her engagement to Arthur Christophel was made. The cards were attached to Colonial nosegays.

Miss Jamison was co-author of the Pageant of Woman's Progress, which was produced at the Odeon, and of an operatta, the music of which was written by Mrs. Jessie Gaynor. Mr. Christophel is the son of C. J. Christophel, 6320 Washington boulevard.

The wedding will take place in the early autumn. Two out-of-town guests present were Miss Margaret Rosebrough of Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. Robert Blake of Nashville, Tenn.

AN engagement announced yesterday was that of Miss Marie Maull, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Charles Maull of 6315 Waterman avenue, to Connor Shanley, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Shanley of 4258 Harris avenue, which was made known at a luncheon given by the prospective bride for 15 guests. Miss Maull was graduated from Washington University last June and is a member of the Delta Gamma Sorority. Mr. Shanley is also a Washington University graduate and is a member of Theta Xi Fraternity. No date for the wedding has been set.

A WEDDING of the past week which came as a surprise, as the engagement had not been previously announced, was that of Miss Martha Hutchinson and Eugene Douglas Andrews, which took place very quietly Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Church of the Holy Communion, with the Rev. Dr. John Boden, rector of the church, officiating, and only the relatives present. The couple were unattended, and the bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Charless Cabanne. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Randolph R. Hutchinsin, and is related to many of the old and promient families of the city. She resides at 5621 Waterman avenue, and is a sister of Mrs. Lindell Gordon of Lenox place and of Miss Lucy Hutchinson and also of Capt. Archibald Hutchinson, U. S. A., now overseas; Cary Hutchinson of New York, Randolph Hutchinson of Mexico and Mitchell Hutchinson of St. Louis. She received her education at Mary Institute, and during the war was actively engaged in various war relief activities.

Mr. Andrews attended the University of Virginia, and has been engaged in the practice of law here for the past several years.

After a short honeymoon trip Mr. Andrews and his bride will be at home at 5621 Waterman avenue.

THE marriage of Miss Jean Schultz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Schultz of 5545 Pershing avenue, to Milton B. Lowenstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Loewenstein of 5553 Waterman avenue took place Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Statler Hotel, with Dr. Leon Harrison of Temple Israel officiating. Miss Dorothy Schultz, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Milton Stern served as best man. Following the ceremony there was a wedding dinner for about 50 of the relatives and intimate friends. After a honeymoon trip Mr. Loewenstein and his bride will be at home at the Westmoreland Apartments after May 15.

Among the out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Max Abrahams and their daughters, Misses Rena and Henrietta, and son, Bernie Abrahms of Davenport, Io.; Mr. and Mrs. H. Schultz of Evansville, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lehman of Peoria, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Eichel of Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. Barney Joseph and daughter, Miss Hilda Joseph of Fremont, O., and Mr. and Mrs. Mose Schultz of Lafayette, Ind., and son, Bernard Schultz, who has just returned from France, where he served in the aviation corps.

AN event which is being anticipated with a great deal of pleasure is the card party to be given on the afternoon of May 6 at the Marquette Hotel for the benefit of the Guardian Angels' Settlement. Unless immediate funds are secured the important social work in which the settlement is engaged will have to be abandoned. A long list of prominent patronesses assure the success of the entertainment, among whom are: Mmes. George W. Brown, Albert G. Blanke, Charles F. Bates, Charles von Brecht, Leslie Blackmore, R. E. M. Bain, Howard Benoist, J. A. Baer, Edward C. Brady, Paul Bakewell, P. Burns, Benoist Carton, James G. Cahill, Seth W. Cobb, R. S. Colnon, R. E. Conway, J. E. Cramer, L. D. Cabanne, H. J. Thompson, Cornelius Tompkins, Vol. C. Turner, Festus J. Wade, R. A. B. Walsh, George W. Wilson, J. D. P. Francis, W. A. Stickney and J. C. Jones; Misses Emilie Maffitt, Laura Nolker and Jessie Hemp

Miss Ella Maria Hyams, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. G. Hyams of Moser place, Kirkwood, entertained with a luncheon last Saturday for about 16 of her intimate friends at which the announceemnt of her engagement to Ernest K. Sahlmann, formerly of Washington, D. C., was made known. Mr. Sahlmann finished his law course at the Georgetown University and has been residing in St. Louis for the past two years. The wedding will probably take place in the late fall.

One of the interesting weddings of the week was that of Miss Mabel Flood to Hugh Bein Rockaday, which took place Saturday evening at the home of the bride, the Rev. J. Boden officiating. The bride's only attendant was a cousin of the bridegroom, Miss Dorothy Hockaday. Richard A. Byrnes of Kalispell, Mont., was best man. The bride was gowned in white organdie, elaborately trimmed in lace, and carried Ophelia roses. She was given in marriage by her brother, Pat W. Flood. A wedding supper followed the ceremony. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Weightman Hockaday of St. Louis and Wichita Falls, Tex., and is a student of the Washington University School of Fine Arts. At the conclusion of the school term Mr. and Mrs. Hockaday will motor to their ranch on Flathead Lake, Montana. On their return they will be at home at 6030 Pershing avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Terry of 5359 Minerva avenue are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a son. Mrs. Terry was Miss Bernadine Schulze.

Miss Marian Weller of Omaha, whose engagement to Francis H. Murphy of Webster Groves has been announced, is the guest of her fiance's relatives in Webster.

The marriage of Miss Cornelia Souther to Dr. Thomas C. Craig of Brooklyn will take place at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening. Miss Souther is the daughter of Mrs. Eustace Souther of 5118 Westminster place. She is a graduate ofg Mary Institute and Smith College, and is very active in the Y. W. C. A., in which she holds the office of corresponding secretary of the board. Dr. Craig, who is an ex-naval surgeon, is a brother of Mrs. Meredith Jones, formerly of St. Louis, and now a resident of Chambersburg, Pa. The engagement of her son, Meredith Jones, to Miss Lila Capen was announced this week.

The ceremony will be performed by Dr. John McIvor of the Second Presbyterian Church at the bride's home in the presence of close relatives and intimate friends. Following a wedding supper for the bridal party, Dr. and Mrs. Craig will leave for Brooklyn, where they will make their home. The wedding journey will be deferred until August.

Among the out-of-town guests who are expected for the wedding are Dr. and Mrs. Pendleton Tompkins of Roanoke, Va.; Dr. and Mrs. T. W. Lingle of North Carolina, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Morris of Chicago, Miss Ida C. Stewart of Quincy, Ill., and Mrs. Meredith Jones.

Have you some old Photograph —faded, perhaps, or a kodak snapshot of some one dear of whom you have no other picture.

We can work wonders with such pictures in copying them, and enlarging them, incidentally improving them to a remarkable extent. Our work is entirely photographic and will not fade.

We will be glad to tell you what we can do with some precious pictures you have and quote you prices. If you cannot call, send us your picture by registered mail to avoid loss (if kodak picture, send film if you have it.) We will take good care of them, and, should you decide to have nothing done, we will return your pictures to you by registered mail.

Garland's Annual May Sale of Garland's

La Vogue Coats

Capes and Dolmans

Two of the styles included in the $14.85 group.

Begins at 9 A. M. Monday

Three days ahead. Yes, but it will be a "hummer." In fact, being three days ahead of time, if anything, is the very thing that has the effect of making it a "hummer." By our being in a position to make the LA VOGUE CO., a CASH OFFER, in advance of the usual time, for their season's-end surplus, and embodying in that offer an additional offer to take the entire surplus of about one thousand Wraps (half of which generally goes to an Eastern competitor of ours) we got an additional discount of quite a considerable amount, and the entire thousand and more Coats, Capes and Dolmans at an average cost of about

HALF PRICE

Values $20, $29.50 and to $45

And they would readily sell at these prices if we chose to mark them according to their present value, and bear in mind they'll be worth more later as the advance of labor and other items is not yet over. But that's not the Garland way. We sell as we buy, and we are not going to make this an exception. So we've divided them into three sale lots.

CHOICE OF WRAPS IN LOT NO. 1—

$14.85 Values to $29.50

There's a perfect wealth of materials and colorings, light-weight velours that are always welcome in this climate, and just the thing for Spring. Poplins and serges in youthful style that will give a world of service. The new gabardine that is so much sought after. Delhi cloth, so closely allied with velour, is very popular in the light shades of tan. A variety of styles and colors that must be seen to be appreciated.

Values Up to $20

We didn't forget the woman who usually pays $15 and $20 for a Spring wrap, and didn't forget how pleased she would be to get it for $10 or less; and she'll $9.85 have rich picking in this sale and have carfare left out of her $10 bill. Lots of style, and correct colors in the fabric most sure to please her.

Values Up to $45

Here's where, if you want to go $5 higher, you can come pretty near getting any kind of a wrap you can ask for. You know $40 and $45 gets a mighty $19.85 fine garment at GARLAND'S, and you know, too, you're always sure of a big variety of cloths, colors and styles at these prices. All this here tomorrow for $19.85.

CENTRAL HIGH GIRLS TO REPEAT GAMES

Greek Pastimes to Be Given Again This Year in Forest Park by Pupils.

The Greek games, produced by 600 girls of Central High School, last year, will be repeated this year in the Municipal Theater in Forest Park on Saturday afternoon, May 17. As many girls as before will participate in the games, which will consist of tableaux, archery and chariot contests, esthetic dancing and gymnastics. The games will not be a repetition of those of last year, although they are similar. As a general theme the hours of the day will be used, and at various stages Dawn, Sunrise, High Noon, Sunset and Evening Shadows will be depicted.

The costumes and "props" will be the work of pupils of Central High School. Permission for the use of the Municipal Theater has already been obtained through resolution of the Board of Aldermen.

The profits of the performance will be used in paying for the bronze memorial tablet to former Central High School pupils who lost their lives in the world war, and in buying a set of instruments for a band which it is planned to organize this spring.

Sixteen young men who formerly attended Central made the supreme sacrifice. They are: Maj. Otto Becker, Capt. Arthur Y. Wear, Capt. Charles H. Duncker, Harold Becker, Eldone H. Truex, Oliver Guy Vassar, William Everett Simpson, Frank P. Mathews, William Worth Hays, Lieut. William G. Junkin, Edward W. Vaughn, Lieut. Jerome Goldman, Charles C. Kroehle, John Donaldson, McCarthy, Ornie Widman and Ralph Oldham. No record of rank was kept at the school, as none will be placed on the tablet, but a number of those not mentioned as such in this list were officers.

The names will be placed on the tablet, which is being prepared now by Walker Hancock, a senior at the school, and editor of The Red and Black, the school annual, who has done much art work for Central. The tablet measures 28 by 36 inches. It is of solid bronze. It will be unveiled on May 29 and placed on the wall of a corridor near the office of Principal Chester B. Curtis.

The St. Louis high schools will have units of the Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps, U. S. A., in operation next fall.

JUICE OF LEMONS FOR TAN, FRECKLES

Girls! Make harmless bleaching lotion at home for few cents.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.—ADV.

CORONER'S JURY FREES SLAYER OF HUSBAND

Mrs. Bessie Bussen Is Held for Grand Jury Examination by Circuit Attorney's Office.

After hearing 30 minutes of testimony and deliberating five minutes, a Coroner's jury exonerated Mrs. Bessie Bussen, 35 years old, of 2320A Warren street, who on Friday afternoon shot and killed her husband, Henry Bussen, 34, a railroad clerk.

She stated that the tragedy was the culmination of quarrels during the last four years, beginning with a discovery she made regarding her daughter by a former marriage, Ruth Willis, 16 years old.

Mrs. Bussen testified that when the girl was 12 years old she returned from market one morning to find her husband in her daughter's bedroom. He had awakened the child, she said, and frightened her into an attack of nervousness from which she still suffers.

Drove Girl From Home.

Thereafter he took a dislike to the girl, said the witness, and ended by driving her out of the house, together with Mrs. Bussen's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth E. Tracy. They went to live across the street, at 2313 Warren street.

There was a quarrel Thursday evening, Mrs. Bussel related, and her husband went away and stayed out all night. She sat up waiting for him, and was too tired in the morning to go to work. He returned and slept until nearly noon. While shaving he renewed the quarrel.

He got a wagon stake, Mrs. Bussen continued, and said he was going across the street "to brain the whole crowd," meaning her mother and daughter. The witness got a revolver which she had concealed in the house for some time and hid it under a newspaper on the kitchen table. When Bussen advanced, flourishing an open razor and threatening to kill his wife, she shot him.

Verdict of Self-Defense.

The jury returned a verdict of "homicide in self-defense," but the Circuit Attorney's office ordered Mrs. Bussen held for further investigation by the grand jury.

Mrs. Sue Copeland and her daughter, Sadie, who live under the Bussen flat, testified that they heard Bussen, with an oath, shout: "I'll kill you," and then three shots. Mrs. Trady said that during the time she lived with her daughter she often sat on the edge of her bed listening to Bussen's menaces against his wife. During last June, she testified, she heard him say he would cut Mrs. Bussen's throat.

Two of the shots took effect, one striking Bussen in the chest and the other in the throat. He died almost immediately.

W. U. Women Have New Scheme.

The Women's Union of Washington University has started a fund for the construction of a union building, to serve the needs of students at the university. The first get-together meeting to that end will be a dinner at Hotel Statler next Saturday evening at 6 o'clock. Every woman connected with the university as an alumna, former student, undergraduate, member of the faculty or relative of the staff of the institution is invited to the dinner.

CROSS GOT ST. LOUIS SOLDIERS INTO METZ

Sergt. Chaudet Placed Mother's Keepsake on Cap and Was Taken for Chaplain.

When Signal Sergt. William J. Chaudet, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Chaudet, 3928 Lindell boulevard, wanted to see the sights of Metz, Lorraine, last January, he got through the lines with the help of a gold cross which his mother gave him when he went into the service. Wearing it as the insignia of a chaplain he not only got through himself but took two companions with him.

Sergt. Chaudet was in the hospital at Mars-la-Tours, France, a short distance from Metz, recovering from the effects of gas. Two of the men of his signal section of E Battery, 128th (St. Louis) Field Artillery, who are still in the service, were also in the hospital. They were in good condition, if not cured, and wanted to get about a little. They particularly wished to see Metz.

Metz was forbidden territory to American soldiers then. There was a double guard of American and French troops on the border and French troops occupied that section of Lorraine.

Mrs. Chaudet had given her son a small gold cross as a keepsake before his departure. Now chaplains in the army rank as commissioned officers and have unusual privileges. Sentries and M. P.'s do not bother them much. Their insignia of rank is the cross, worn on the overseas cap or on the shoulders. Sergt. Chaudet pinned his mother's gift upon his cap—his spiral puttees corresponded to those of an officer—called his two "pals" to him, and set out from the hospital. The American guards saw the psuedo-chaplain, saluted, and passed the trio, thinking the other two the "chaplain's" orderlies.

The three arrived at Longheim, a suburb of Metz, and there rested in an inn. A German ex-Lieutenant was cultivated for the benefit of his acquaintance, and he lent civilian clothing to the Americans and escorted them through Metz for two days.

The return was accomplished in a similar manner, and they arrived at the hospital after an absence of three days. It is possible to explain such absences to one who is familiar with the "ropes," and no one ever called them to account. Sergt. Chaudet's honorable discharge states that he had "no a. w. o. l. (absence without leave) of record."

POPULATION AT ZOO DOUBLED IN A YEAR

339 Birds, 226 Animals and 88 Reptiles at Forest Park Now.

There are 339 birds, 226 animals and 88 reptiles, a total of 713 occupants, at the zoo in Forest Park, according to the annual report of C. A. Windmuller, secretary of the Zoological Board of Control, submitted to the Board of Aldermen. This is an increase in population of 333 over last year.

The report states that 297 birds and animals were donated to the zoo, while 182 were purchased during the year. There were 165 deaths, mostly of birds, 19 births.

During the year $70,569.62 was expended in the construction of a chain of small lakes, several structures to house the birds and animals and a system of roads and sidewalks. Provisions for the birds and animals cost $14,072.35, and other disbursements brought the total expenditures to $205,175.62, leaving a deficit for the year of $17,000. The present value of the zoo, exclusive of the site, is estimated as $260,761.29.

About 475,000 persons visited the zoo one or more times during the year, the report states, with Sunday and holiday crowds averaging 15,000 to 25,000.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Luster at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—ADV.

PROGRAM FOR MEETING OF STATE CLUB WOMEN

Biennial Convention of Missouri Federation Will Be Held Here May 6 to 8.

Plans are being made for the biennial convention of the Missouri State Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in St. Louis May 6-8. Numerous social, civic and business meetings will take place, as well as the election of officers. While numerous rumors about candidates for the offices have been in circulation among St. Louis club women, it is said that they are unofficially indorsing the re-election of all those who carried the club work through the stress of war activities.

The local Biennial Board will meet at the Planters Hotel at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday, at which time all committee members will receive final instructions. Extensive exhibits are planned to represent the nine district federations of the State, and will probably be in place by the evening before the convention opens.

"Past presidents' night" will be celebrated May 7 with a banquet to all of the out-of-town delegates, attended also by many of the local members. Tickets may be obtained by local members from Mrs. J. T. Keller, 5184 Vernon avenue. Past presidents of the Missouri federation are: Mrs. Laura E. Scammon, Mrs. Ellen D. Lee, Mrs. Ervin Harrison, Mrs. Philip N. Moore, Mrs. W. K. James, Mrs. Edward M. Shepard, Mrs. William R. Chivvis.

May 6, prior to the opening of the convention at 8 p. m., tea will be served in the afternoon at a reception. An incident of the convention will be a view of the city from the roof of the Railway Exchange Building at 1 p. m. May 7.

A pageant with a cast of club women will be held at the Municipal Theater, Forest Park, Thursday afternoon, May 8, from 4:45 to 6 p. m. The Pageant Choral Society, conducted by Frederick Fisher, will take part in the pageant.

HEAD OF BELGIAN RED CROSS COMING TO THANK U. S. FOR AID

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Col. A. Depage, famous Belgian surgeon and head of the Belgian Red Cross, is en route to this country on the steamer Nieuw Amsterdam, according to a cable message received today at Red Cross headquarters here. Col. John Van Schaick Jr., Commissioner for Belgium for the American Red Cross, is accompanying Dr. Depage.

Dr. Depage has been invited to speak before numerous medical societies and replied that as soon as peace came he would visit America to thank personally the people who contributed Belgium relief funds through his wife, who, while taking the funds back to Belgium, was drowned when the Lusitania was sunk.

With the help of the American Red Cross, Dr Depage built a hospital at Vinckem, six miles back of the front line on the Yser. This venture was termed foolhardy by military men, as a small German advance could easily destory it. Dr. Depage determined to take the chance, and developments of the campaign proved that this hospital saved the day for Belgium in the advance of the Belgian army in September and October.

With the hospital Dr. Depage, with the aid of some Belgian soldiers, developed in four months a marvelous rose garden in spite of the fact that for hundreds of years there had been a saying that roses could not be grown in Flanders. In summer months more than 500 roses were cut each day from this garden for soldiers in the hospitals.

Father Vincent Schlempp officiating. Miss Agnes Grimm, the bridegroom's sister, was maid of honor, and Miss Jeanette Maskow was bridesmaid. Louis Grone served as best man, and Edmund Albrecht as groomsman.

Miss Isabel Hackman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank X. Hackman of 5420 Maple avenue, entertained yesterday afternoon for about 30 guests, most of whom were her schoolmates at the Visitation Convent.

Mrs. T. S. Manning of 3867 Delmar boulevard entertained informally on Tuesday afternoon and on Wednesday was hostess at a box party, followed by a tea, in honor of two out-of-town visitors, Mrs. William J. McCarroll and Miss May Shannon.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Sachs of 1284 Hodiamont avenue, are rejoicing over the arrival of a daughter whom they have named Marian Bernice.

Mrs. Devereaux Henderson of 4653 North Market street entertained with a 500 party Thursday afternoon in honor of Miss Masie Barber of Kingston, N. Y., who is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Jewett Wagoner of 1701 Wagoner place.

Miss Mae Gottwald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gottwald of 4239 Cleveland avenue, entertained yesterday with a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Dorothy Chapman of 5842 Plymouth avenue, whose marriage to Archibald Moores will take place on Thursday at St. Phillips Church. Miss Gottwald will be a member of the bridal party.

The Twentieth Century Art Club will meet at Jefferson Memorial tomorow afternoon at 2 o'clock. A new president and one director will be elected.

CONFERENCE THIS WEEK ON AID FOR SOLDIERS

Various Civic and Business Interests to Be Asked to Support Employment Bureau.

A meeting of representatives of all St. Louis civic, business, fraternal and war relief organizations will be called this week by Melville L. Wilkinson, vice chairman of the St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross to discuss immediate measures to aid the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Employment Bureau at 905 Locust street. Wilkinson said that the imminence of an influx of thousands of returning soldiers within the next month requires instant action to place the employment bureau in position to procure a job for every man who needs this help.

"It will not be a trivial matter to place these men satisfactorily," Wilkinson said, "unless the work of the bureau is greatly extended. It is our intention to place this bureau in position to handle the returning soldier problem satisfactorily to the soldier and to the employer as well, but we must have the united support of al concerned to do the work right."

The special committee appointed by the Chamber of Commerce recently to investigate the Government Employment Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines gave its unqualified indorsement of the bureau and its work and recommended that other offices purporting to do the same work be abolished. The only other office of this kind in St. Louis is that operated by the Employers Association at 405 Olive street.

Acting on recommendations in this report, the Chamber of Commerce got back of the soldiers' employment bureau, and all other organizations engaged in soldier welfare work put representatives in the bureau, so that all facilities for soldier welfare would be co-ordinated.

The Chamber of Commerce Committee was composed of Richard S. Hawes, chairman; Aaron S. Rauh and F. W. A. Vesper, who made a careful investigation of the situation and report that the work of the bureau was "surprisingly good" and deserving of the strongest support available. The committee pointed out that 5218 men had been placed at work by the bureau while it was at 902 Olive street, and better work could have been accomplished had the bureau been properly supported.

The approval of the bureau by the Chamber of commerce is interesting when compared with a telegram of the Employers' Association and nine other employer organizations of St. Louis, who made an adverse report on the Government Employment Service, February 26, in a telegram asking Congress not to pass an appropriation measure for extension of the Government service.

CURIOUS ANSWERS TO HISTORY QUESTIONS BY INDIANA PUPILS

Monroe Doctrine Said to Be a "Doctor Who Goes Everywhere."

LOGANSPORT, Ind., April 26.—History always has been a stumbling block for children, explained the Cass County school teachers who conducted an examination of eighth-grade pupils.

While many of the children could explain the Monroe Doctrine and state whether it is still in effect, others made answers like the following: "The Monroe Doctrine is a doctor who goes everywhere." "The Monroe Doctrine is a law made by a man named Doctrine; it is in effect, for about all the Postmasters are Democrats."

"The armistice was signed by the Central Powers at 11 o'clock a. m., Nov. 11, 1918," said another question. "News of the action was received in Indianapolis six hours earlier. State how this was possible."

"The reason they received the news six hours earlier," answered one child, "was because they sent the news there first. They sent the news to Indianapolis because they wanted the Governor to hear about it first."

"What are the three departments of our Government as provided in the Constitution?" brought answers that "the three departments are Republican, Confederate and Democrat; the three departments consist of executive, sympathetic and supreme court. The three departments are Wilson, the state house and the Senate."

"Give a brief sketch of the life of Longfellow," brought this reply from one lad: "He was born in Indianapolis, became a great American writer and wrote some swell poetry."

Explaining the quotation, "The evil that men do live after them, the good is oft interred with their bones," one pupil wrote. "They should do good and carry it on their bones. The good is always on their bones."

Teachers said that the standard of the schools should not be judged by the curious answers.

JOSEPH M. GILL IS AGAIN FINED FOR SPEEDING CAR

Fails to Appear and Assessment Is Fixed at $200 and the Costs.

Failure to appear before Police Judge Ittner to answer a charge of speeding yesterday, cost Joseph M. Gill, 3017 Lafayette avenue, son of the late Congressman Michael J. Gill of the Tenth District, $200 and costs. It was testified that he drove his automobile 30 miles an hour on Lindell boulevard between De Baliviere avenue and Skinker road.

Gill was fined $25 in Police Court on March 24 for speeding, also on default. On March 30 he was exonerated by a Coroner's jury investigating the death of Frank Ryan of the Municipal Lodging House, who was killed when he walked in front of Gill's machine at 718 Chestnut street.

NEW W. U. "MELLER-DRAMMER"

Play by Sack and Agatstein to Be Presented Next Month.

"The Diamonds of Death, or Duncan Dillingham's Dilemma," heralded as a "meller-drammer" in four acts with thrills that will probably exceed even the "Poisoned Gumdrops, or the Candy Woman's Revenge," will be presented by the Thyrsus Club of Washington University in its theater on the campus, May 30 and 31.

It is the joint creation of Alfred N. Sack and Sylvan Agatstein, students at the university. It is announced that an "all-star" cast of seniors will have the play in keeping, and the freshman class will be used to clear the stage of blood and wreckage between acts.

"Mud Road" Sponsors to Speak.

BURLESON AUTOCRATIC, DECLARES GOMPERS

"Out of Sympathy With Trend of Thought Today, and Must Walk the Plank."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, assailed the administration of Postmaster-General Burleson in a statement issued here today, declaring that he must "walk the plank sooner or later."

Gompers' statement follows:

"The troubles of Postmaster-General Burelson, which in a recent statement he attribuates to a plot or a conspiracy on the part of the American publishers, are not due solely to any dispute there may have been between the postmaster general and the publishers, to whom he refers. The most recent example of Mr. Burleson's autocratic nature deos not come as a surprise to tohse in the labor movement who have come in contact with his administration.

"Out of Sympathy With Eevent."

"Labor was long ago forced to the conclusion that Mr. Burleson was completely out of sympathy with the trend of American thought and was totally unable to comprehend what America meant when it declared war upon autocracy everywhere. Mr. Burleson needs only a wider field and a better oportunity to fit him for succession to some of the world's best-known but unlamented ex-dictators. The only difficulty in Mr. Burleson's way is that the world has reached the decision that it wants no more dictators. The United States post-ofifce department is one of very few places in the world not yet in accord with that decision.

"Long before the United States government took over the telegraph systems ofthe country, Mr. Burleson's cold and autocratic treatment became known to the workers engaged in the postal service. Naturally resentment has followed this course and this resentment has increased in volume exactly in proportion tothe increased field over which Mr. Burleson rules.

"The workers in various branches of the Postmaster-General's department have come to understand thoroughly that democracy and the Post-office Department have nothing in common except that they exist under the same Government. Time after time these employes have endeavored to secure the opportunity to be heard by the Postmaster-General through their representatives, for the purpose of presenting grievances or just causes for complaint. They have sought to lay before hm their complaints in order that they might have his consideration and in order that an adjustment might be brought about through the democratic procedure of negotiation. These pleadings for an opportunity to be heard have been in vain as they have been frequent.

"My own experence with the Postmaster-General has been of a simiar nature. Acting for the workers, I have had a number of conferences with him, in which I have endeavored to induce him to grant the opportunity to his employes to be heard through their representatives. These efforts of my own have also been in vain.

"Adopts Reactionary Course."

"It has been rather a favorite pose with the Postmaster-General to appear as a high-minded person, generous and sympathetic with his employes. Always, however, this sympathy has been defined by him to mean that if any one of the employes had anything to present to him that he might come and present the case. Under any circumstances such a course would be unsatsfactory and intelligent employers nowhere attempt to deceive anyone with that ancient and long-since exploded idea. Only the most reactionary and brutal employers still endeavor to deal with the workers as individuals.

"In the case of the postoffice department, however, where the employes are scattered throughout the United States, such an attitude as that assumed by the Postmaster-General becomes not only ridiculous and preposterous but constitutes an affront and an insult to the intelligence of the men and women in his department and to the citizenship of the country as well.

"No Impression on Him."

"The position taken by the secretaries of the War Department, the Navy Department and various other Government departments in dealing with the workers, the declarations of the War Labor Board, approved by the President of the United States, concerning collective bargaining, have failed to make the slightest impression on the mind of the postmaster-general and he has insisted upon a line of conduct as completely out of harmony with the balance of the Government as it could well be.

"Mr. Burleson's troubles cannot successfully be laid by him at the doors of those whom he may assume are his enemies for political purposes only, because their source is in something deeper. Mr. Burleson's troubles arise from the fact that he has attempted with singular zeal to carry out an archiac, autocratic policy in the conduct of the postal telegraph and telephone services of the United States. Any postmaster-general who will follow the same policy will inevitably face the same public comdenation and eventually walk the same plank that Mr. Burleson must walk sooner or later."

BAND THAT PERSHING PICKED IN FRANCE PLAYS HERE TODAY

There Are 110 Pieces and Men Represent Every Unit That Helped Win War.

"Pershing's Own Band," which Gen. Pershing has praised as a model for all American military bands and which led President Poincaire's entrance into Metz last Dec. 7, will play two concerts in St. Louis today. The first will be at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park between 3 and 5 p. m., and the second in Tower Grove Park, between 8:30 and 9:30 p. m.

The band consists of 110 pieces, including a drum and trumpet corps of 42 members. The members were picked from all the bands of the American Expeditionary Force, and all saw active service in the trenches as stretcher and dispatch bearers. The drum major, Willis S. Ross, who has been in the army 14 years, led the band before the crowned heads of England, Italy and Belgium, the President of France, the Prince of Monaco and the peace conference. A St. Louis member of the band is Sergt. William D. Cavallo, 5210 Theodosia street, formerly of the Eighty-ninth Division. He is a nephew of P. A. Cavallo, leader of "Cavallo's Band."

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

"MIDGET ORATOR" AIDS LOAN

Post-Dispatch Newsboy in Belleville Is 43 Inches High.

One of the most enthusiastic boosters of the Victory Loan in Belleville is Commodore Albert Vahlkamp, 16 years old, 43 inches in height and 45 pounds in weight. Albert is a Post-Dispatch newsboy on the public square in Belleville and is known as the midget orator. Commodore Vahlkamp, the name given him by other newsboys appears in the streets and at factories for talks on the Victory Loan, and when he can boost the drive he does so while selling papers.

When making his talks he appears either in a dress suit or in a sailor's uniform.

"I'm going to help put Belleville over the top as I have in all drives," is the way the midget orator puts it. He has been selling the Post-Dispatch for about three years.

SYSTEM IN RECONSTRUCTION

Isaac Lippincott, associate professor of economics in Washington University, has written a book on "Problems of Reconstruction." He suggests that guidance of the industrial and economic reconstruction of the nation should be in the hands of an organization consisting of a central commission and sub-committees, the membership of the central committee being drawn in part from the Senate and House of Representatives and in part from the leading industral activities.

The problems which would confront such a committee, together with those dealing with governmental finance, are discussed.

FIUME ALWAYS AN OBJECT OF CONTENTION

City Is Not in New Position Before the Peace Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Fiume, the Adriatic coast city, which has gained the distinction of being the biggest single stumbling block in the peace negotiations, has been a city of disputed sovereignty since its beginnig. The position it occupies, with both the Italian and the new Jugo-Slav nations contending for it, is not new. Two things it has in abundance, nationals among its citizenry and rulers in its history.

Before the war Fiume was regarded as the Hamburg of the Hungarian kingdom and was a close rival with Trieste for mastery of the brisk Adriatic trade, according to a National Geographic Society Bulletin. The bulletin continues:

Fiume is another of those footholds on the Eastern Adriatic where Italians clung fast despite the steady influx of Slavs in the interior and, in this case, even into Fiume itself. Thus the city bears evidence of early Italian culture, it figured as a potent Slav factor in the turmoil of Balkan politics, and it felt strongly the influence of Hungary upon its thriving industries and fast growing commerce.

Magyar gerrymandering caused it to be annexed to Hungary in 1870, despite the protest of Croatia, to which it belonged since the revolution of 1848-49. Tender consideration for its value as a seaport, rather than for its citizens, prompted its establishment as a royal free town, making it a geographical slice of about seven square miles cut out of Croatia.

Italians Slightly Predominant.

"Despite the Hungarian interest in the city, its pre-war population was 90 per cent Italian and Slav, with the Italians slightly predominant. Only about half the remaining tenth were Hungarians. The Slavs included Croats, Serbs and Slovenes. As important to Hungary as are New York or Boston to the United States, Fiume's total population is not much greater than such suburbs of those American ports as East Orange, N. J., or Brockton, Mass.

Fiume is situated on the northeast shores of the Gulf of Quarnero, only 70 miles by rail southeast of its trade rival, Trieste. Across the bay is the popular summer resort, Abbazia, famed for its evergreen laurel and profusion of roses, to which tens of thousands of visitors formerly thronged each summer.

"The older town, distinctively Italian, is built on the hillside, overlooking the gulf. The newer city lies nearer the water front. There are three harbors. The largest, accommodating 150 large vessels, is protected by a breakwater half a mile long. The quay is nearly two miles long.

Factories and Fisheries.

"Before the war Fiume's manufacturing plants included a Government tobacco factory, the Whitehead torpedo works, a rice shelling factory, a petroleum refinery, and many smaller plants, among which were sawmills and paper mills. Its fisheries constituted an important industry. It exported sugar, grain, flour, horses and timber.

"Fiume had a Governor, who was a member of the Upper House of the Hungarian Parliament, four Representatives in the lower house, and two Representatives in the Diet of the Croatians and Slovenes.

"Originating in Roman times, Fiume was destroyed by Charlemagne in 799. The Franks ruled it for a considerable period. Then it passed to feudal lords until the Emperor Frederick III made it a part of Austria.

"This Emperor, who was Frederick V, as Archduke of Austria, was the son of Ernest, the 'man of iron,' and Cymburga, a Polish woman, from whom the Hapsburgs are thought to have inherited the protruding lower lip which sometimes became a disfigurement. His long and inconsequential reign is recalled chiefly because he puzzled lexicographers by leaving on his books, pottery, and having inscribed on his tomb, the initials, 'A. E. I. O. U.,' a promissory note of future Austrian greatness which Frederick did little to realize. The most generally accepted explanation is that the initials stood for the Latin, 'Austriae Est Imperari Orbi Universe,' meaning, All the earth is subject to Austria.'

"Charles VI proclaimed Fiume a free port. Maria Theresa first united it with Hungary. Successively occupied by the French and British it reverted to Austria, and later was restored to Hungary before it was ceded to Croatia."

FALSE BILLS OF LADING USED

Trickery Viewed in South America as "Yankee Method."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Charges of grand larceny and forgery against members of a bankrupt trading firm brought to light here today an alleged piece of trickery said to have been cited by foreign competitors of American business men in South America trade as an example of "Yankee methods."

David L. Herman and James D. McQuade, officers of the insolvent Herman Trading Co. were arrested on an indictment charging that they had obtained $5700 by means of a false bill of lading bearing the name of a Buenos Aires concern. In a series of such operations, detectives declared, the prisoners had collected $75,000.

DIPLOMA IN VOICE AND PIANO

The graduating class at Forest Park College this year contains a girl who, for the first time in the institution's 58 years, received a diploma of Master of Music in both piano and voice. She is Miss Irene A. Hargrave of Ashley, Ill. Her commencement recital was given at the college Thursday night.

Her program alternated piano numbers and vocal groups. The most brilliant piano number was Weber's Concert piece, Op. 78, and one of her songs was the Bolero from Verdi's "Sicilian Vespers." Her teachers were E. R. Kroeger for piano and Mme. Nordstrom-Carter for voice.

WHAT THE TWELFTH ENGINEERS DID WHEN IN FRANCE

of the American army and the staff of the French army, and our plant was built at that location on plans which I prepared. This was 35 kilometers from the nearest point on the front prior to the St. Mihiel drive of Sept. 12. It became very desirable to connect these shops with the front line system of light railways, so we located and built a line running from the shops up to our previously established railroad at Sorcy, a line which was 18 miles, or 28 kilometers, in length—the longest single stretch of light railway which our army built.

How the Line Was Built.

There are many interesting problems in connection with the building of a line of this kind, as no grade crossing of standard-gauge railroad is permitted, the line must be located to do as little permanent damage to the country as possible, and it must be made as inconspicuous as possible, so as not to afford a good target for bombing operations; and as we had the main line of the Eastern Railway to cross and recross several times, and the Marne-Rhine Canal, we had work requiring considerable engineering skill.

In the building of this line, we followed the usual American railway practice. We laid this track of 25 pound rails to the yard, on wooden ties which were 4x6x4 feet long. Grading was done largely by pick and shovel, but horses and scrapers were used in some places, as is customary in this country. We built the line very much quicker than the French expected it to be built, and laid in one day 2.7 miles of track. In the crossing of the canal, on which there was considerable traffic, it was necessary to provide a lift bridge, for which I designed a counter-weighed structure, so that one man could open the bridge in a very few minutes. Another important structure on the line was the crossing of the far-famed Meuse River, which at the point of crossing was about 125 feet wide and 14 feet deep; here we used the ordinary pile trestle, so common on American railroads. A still more interesting structure was our crossing over the main line of the Eastern Railway at Sorcy, where two deck trusses 48 feet long, built up of road plank and other small timber, were erected in five days.

The light railways were of the same gauge on all of the army fronts—British, French and German—and this was a very material advantage to us, because immediately after the German retreat in September we built conections over what had previously been No-man's Land, and were able to use a very extensive system of light railway which the Germans themselves had built. Their retreat from the St. Mihiel sector had been so hurried that they were not able to destroy their lines.

The WANTS are close to the home life of thousands—they seek opportunity in them every day.

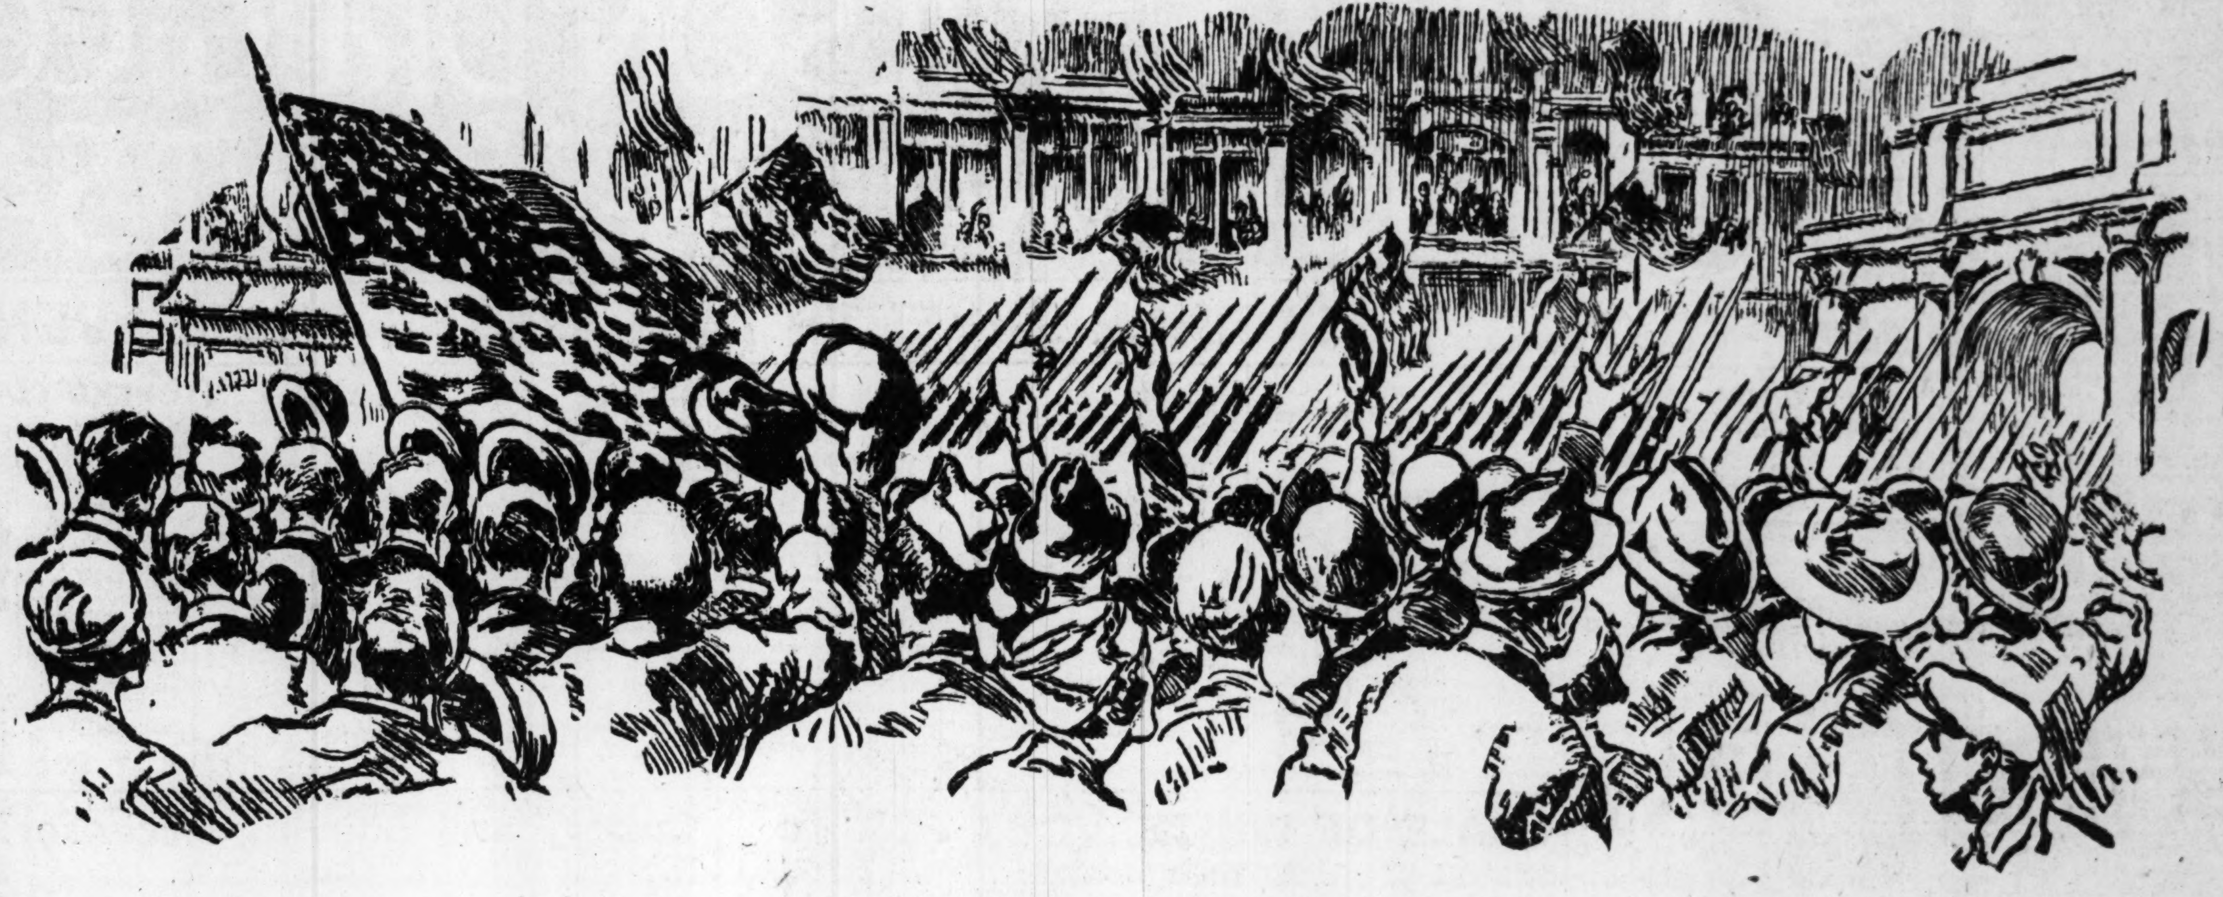
Coming Events This Week

See the Soldier Players

Shubert-Jefferson Theater

April 28 to May 3

A splendid company of artists (not amateurs) who gave their exceptional talents to keeping up the morale of the American soldiers. These artists, many of them overseas men, will present a repertoire of excellent plays, such as the "Perrie of the Plains," "The Bells," etc. They are giving their services without compensation to aid the Victory Liberty Loan. The proceeds will be used to advertise the Victory Liberty Loan. You will help the loan and enjoy a splendid performance by seeing the Soldier Players. Prices, 50 cents to $1.50. Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday, 25 cents to $1.00.



Are you ready to welcome "the boys"

They will be here Tuesday. Down Washington Av. they will march—out Olive and over Twelfth, with flags a-flying and bands a-playing; just as they would have marched through Berlin if the Kaiser hadn't quit—these boy veterans who marched to Victory.

A year and more ago they marched away and left their homes and happiness and friends behind to go to France to fight for us. They fought—they won—and now they're coming home again.

They've done their part, those boys of ours—they saw it through.

How about you? Have you done your part--have you kept the bargain made when these boys left to give up their lives if need be, to see the job through?

You bought Liberty Bonds and helped to equip these boys to whip the Kaiser. Are you going to stop there or are you going to do what these boys did--see the job through?

Subscribe to the Victory Liberty Loan--get a Victory Loan button--it's a clear receipt for your obligation to these boys.

It will give you a mighty comfortable feeling to wear a Victory Liberty Loan button on Home Coming Day.

Victory Liberty Loan---Let's see it through!

Finish the Job!

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

ARGUMENTS MADE BY THE ITALIANS

Contend Some Indicated Settlements Are Not on Principle of Self-Determination.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, April 26.—The real disagreement between Mr. Wilson and the Italians lies in the doings of the conference, which have been more or less shrouded in mystery, but are now coming to light.

Upper Silesia, which is known to have been granted to the Poles, the Italians claim is German, and not even a pretense of a referendum has been provided. Italy, however, is more deeply interested in the Austrian and Balkan settlements. She claims that the Czeco-Slovaks have been allowed to incorporate in their country 4,000,000 Germans and that Serbia and Czecho-Slovaka is being allowed to do the same to Hungary that Prussia, Austria and Russia did to Poland at the period of the first dismemberment of that country. This, according to the Italians, does not look like a peace of international justice based on a self-determination of people, but rather like a peace of military imperialism.

Montenegro and Albania.

The question of Montenegro, Albania and Macedonia, the mother of European conflicts, has not been considered by any peace conference committee. The Italians also say that Serbia has incorporated territory including 1,000,000 Albanians, which population the Serbian army is now harassing. In proof of this, the Italians cite a dispatch from the British Ambassador in Rome suggesting allied intervention in Belgrade to prevent these Serbian abuses. They also cite a dispatch from Gen. Franchet d'Espray to the Italian commander in Albania, requesting the latter to protect the Albanian refugees, who were fleeing south by the thousands.

Continuing the argument, the Italians point out that the conference assigned Thrace to Greece against the avowed wishes of the majority of the Turkish population and a minority of the Bulgarians. Serbia has been allowed to annex territory and population within the original frontiers of Bulgaria. Rumania takes the Dobrogea, including that part inhabited by Bulgarians. Asiatic Turkey is dismembered and assigned to the allies under mandates, which do not even veil the real purpose of imperialistic colonial expansion.

When told that the conference had not finally sanctioned the action of which they complained, the Italians replied that the facts hereinbefore narrated constitute a de facto situation in Central Europe and the Balkans, which the peace conference made no serious effort to prevent, and which the allied Governments secretly favor and will be unable to remedy, should they wish to do so. The Italians further declare that the leaders of the conference and their principal agents know that the peace they are formulating is quite inconsistent with the self-determination of peoples and so imperialistic that it will require a military campaign to enforce it.

Peace in Balkans.

The Italians sa ythat a peace requiring in the Balkans alone 15 divisions to enforce it is not a peace of disarmament, which Mr. Wilson speaks of in his proclamation. The Italians conclude by saying that, if other nations, even those which compose Austria, are to be allowed such full scope for their imperialism, why should Italy be required to give up he rclaims in the Adriatic because of principles, which find no genuine application elsewhere. Why should Fiume alone be considered as belonging to the hinterland, when the conference shows no disposition to apply this formula to Salonika, Dedegatch and Constantinople, whose commercial situation is similar to that of Fiume? Why should Italy not be allowed to protect herself on the eastern Adriatic shore against the continuing Balkan conflicts, which, i spite of Mr. Wilson's declarations, the progress of events makes inevitable, they ask.

EX-WARDEN'S SON IS SUED

Wife of Carl J. McClung Accuses Him of Mistreating Her.

A divorce suit, charging Carl J. McClung, son of former Warden D. C. McClung of the Missouri Penitentiary, with associating with other women, frequenting dance halls and resorts, was filed yesterday here by Mrs. Jerene McClung, to whom he was married Dec. 4, 1916. She also alleges that he mistreated her.

The petition states that McClung had an ungovernable temper and called his wife vile names. They separated Jan. 22, 1918, since when she has been living in St. Louis. She seeks the restoration of her maiden name, Lartonoix.

Illinois Newspaper Change.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 26.—The Illinois State Register, published here as a Democratic morning paper since its purchase in 1881, by Henry M. C. Lendenin and Thomas Rees, will quit the morning field, except Sunday, and will be issued as an afternoon newspaper beginning within a few days, according to an announcement made today by George M. Clendenin, managing editor. The history of the paper under different names and management goes back 83 years.

"Korea One of America's Biggest Problems," Says an Observer From the Orient

Dr. Edmund Soper Tells How It Is Related to Us and Gives a New View of Newest Aspirant for Freedom—Praises What Japan Has Done for It, but Laments What Is Done to It.

By CHARLES W. WOOD,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 25.

FIVE years ago Americans still talked of our "splendid isolation." The phrase sounds silly today. We were not interested, we thought, in European squabbles, but before we could catch our breath 2,000,000 American boys were fighting the battle of the world in France. We wanted to let the world alone, but the war wouldn't let us alone. Our intentions concerning the world at large had not perceptibly changed. But something had happened to the world at large. It had moved into our neighborhood, while most of us weren't looking. That is, Europe had.

> THERE are two points from which to look at Korea, each of which will bring a different conclusion—what Japan has done for her and what Japan has done to her—DR. SOPER.

"One of America's biggest problems today is Korea," I heard an unusually keen student of world affairs remark the other day. Ten years ago such a statement would have seemed insane. But that was before a Serbian boy shot an Austrian Archduke and caused China to go to war with Turkey and put the question of the sovereignty of Bessarabia squarely before the United States Senate. In other words, that was before we discovered time and space had been annihilated and that you could not hit any part of the world very hard without hitting it all.

The man in question was the Rev. Dr. Edmund D. Soper, professor of comparative religion in Drew Theological Seminary. He had just returned from an extensive tour in the Orient for the Joint Centenary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Whole Orient in Ferment

"The whole Orient," said Dr. Soper, "is in a ferment, and Korea is the center of the disturbance. Just to illustrate how closely the world is now knit together, let me say that it is hardly safe, even in America, to express an opinion these days concerning Korean politics. I made a few remarks on the subject when I first landed in America—remarks which were evidently interpreted as anti-Korean—and within a few days I received a dozen letters, ranging all the way from expressions of disappointment to threats. The threats were doubtless from cranks and I have not been worrying about them, but a few years ago even the most insane crank would not have been disturbed by what some Methodist minister in New Jersey thought about the news from Seoul.

"Korea," he explained, "is an exaggerated Irish problem, and there are those who think that the Irish problem is sufficiently complicated to keep our statesmen busy for some time to come. When I left Korea everything was as quiet as a firecracker with the fuse just smoldering. I had hardly landed in the United States before I heard that an explosion had happened. The extent of that explosion no one seemed to know. What will follow and how soon the fire may sweep through the whole Orient, is just now a matter of the starkest speculation.

"Korea has a population of 16,500,000. It came under the sovereignty of Japan as a result of the Russo-Japanese War. There was little resistance on Korea's part and if Koreans in those days had any general pride of nationality it was not apparent to the casual visitor. They had been exploited to the limit by their own rulers and to accept a foreign yoke, in the light of what they had already endured, was not an unmixed hardship. To judge by the ordinary expression of opinion (a thing which intelligent men will generally avoid doing), Korea did not wish, did not even dream of independence.

A Puzzling Party Situation

"Today in Korea there are two distinct parties. One openly advocates co-operation with Japan—and means it. The other openly advocates co-operation with Japan—and not even a Japanese spy can tell what is meant.

"I was assured by prominent Koreans that self-government for Korea was unthinkable. And the next day one of the same men might be arrested for treason. Who wanted self-government? And why? There was no way of answering either of these questions. And yet, in spite of the strict silence which obtained everywhere, it was plainly evident that all Korea was seething with inarticulate rebellion. When Korean delegates appealed to the peace conference, demanding that Korea be included in the self-determination rule, it was obvious to everyone that they were not merely representing themselves.

"Strategically, Japan cannot consider the independence of Korea. Korea is Japan's closest neighbor and whoever holds that peninsula holds a sword pointed directly at the breast of Japan. And although the Japanese statesmen may contend that Koreans do not desire independence, they have no thought of proving the point by putting the matter to a vote."

Dr. Soper, intensely concerned in the outcome of the present struggle and intensely conscious that the welfare of the whole world is wrapped up in the problem, still refrains from being a partisan. Partisans, he says, see but one side to a problem, whereas it would not be a problem if it did not have at least two sides. But the Oriental problem has many sides. It is so complicated as to be absolutely unsolvable by any rule of statecraft which the world has as yet adopted.

2 Views With Differing Conclusions

"If one approaches the question," he said, "by noting what Japan has done for Korea he is quite apt to reach one conclusion. But if he begins by noting what Japan has done to Korea, he is quite apt to reach another. In either case, his conclusion will almost certainly be superficial; for by 'Japan' this sort of investigator means the particular governing group in the saddle. He may forget that Japan, too, is in a state of transition, and that the ascendancy of a military party does not mean that Japan is permanently doomed to militarism. Democracy is making itself felt in Japan. Christianity is making itself felt. And the Government, autocratic as it may be in principle, is feeling the pressure of these new ideals."

Dr. Soper then reviewed some of the things Japanese sovereignty had done for Korea. In 1905, he said, modern sanitation and hygiene were almost unknown throughout the country. Illiteracy was general and there was no school system worthy the name. There were no modern industries and the ancient craft by which Koreans had thriven were in a way to be forgotten. The country was almost without means of transportation, while agriculture and forestry were at the lowest ebb.

"About the first thing the 'conquerors' did was to introduce modern sanitation. Next, a general school system, both academic and industrial. They built roads and they built railroads. They began the economic development of Korea. They introduced modern methods of agriculture and began a scientific system of reforestation. In Seoul they went so far as to establish an industrial school for the resuscitation of the almost lost Korean arts.

"I do not speak of these achievements as an argument against freedom, but those who speak of freedom for Korea should remember how far from free Korea was when she was nominally self-governed."

Japan's Work Not Appreciated

"Don't the Koreans appreciate these benefits?" I asked.

"Did you ever hear of a case," he asked in reply, "where a human being was thankful for being forcibly uplifted. People appreciate food, but they inevitably look upon forced feeding as an atrocity. Children uniformly want to learn, but they rebel against too much discipline in the process. You even have to be careful how you save a drowning man; if you don't use a lot of tact he will pull you down. All that Japan did along these lines was admirable, but all these material benefits could not compensate Korea for the loss of political freedom.

"That brings up the other side of the question. For with all the uplift which Japan brought to Korea, she brought an insufferable tyranny. The tyranny was so obvious that any sensitive person felt the presence of rebellion, even though he were assured on all hands that there was no thought of separation from Japan.

"Take an ordinary Christian service as an example. Until some of its omissions are explained to you, you would not know that the service was different from a church service in America. The congregation sings some familiar hymn. The minister preaches—perhaps an impassioned plea to complete consecration in the Master's service. Perhaps a simple recital of God's great gift to man. Suddenly a Japanese gendarme appears at the door. He stays only a moment and is gone. But it is a tense moment. He looks over the whole congregation. He sizes everybody up. Everyone knows that he is trying to scent sedition, and though he leaves satisfied that there is no sign of it here, he leaves a wave of suppressed resentment behind.

"Then it may be explained to you that many of the hymns known to Americans cannot be sung there. A Korean congregation, for instance, would not dare attempt 'Onward, Christian Sol-

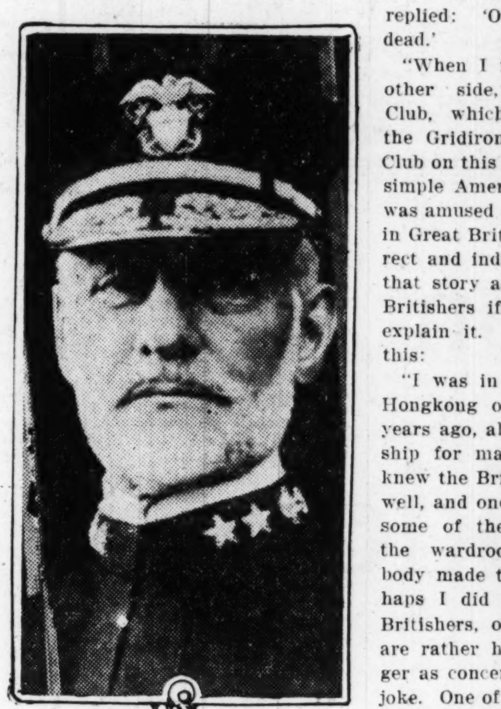
ADMIRAL SIMS ON THE BRITISH SENSE OF HUMOR

HOW HE FOUND IT WANTING IN TEST

Officer Who Commanded Our Naval Forces Abroad During the War Reviews Some Stories to Show How He Strove Vainly to Make Our Cousins Across the Water Grasp the Point in American Jokes.

THERE will jolly well be a stir in the London clubs when they hear what Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., is saying on the time-worn, but still tender, subject of British appreciation of American humor.



REAR ADMIRAL SIMS.

Rear Admiral Sims, who was Vice Admiral Sims for the year and a half that he commanded the American navy in European waters, is one of the heartiest "hands" that this country has ever stretched across the sea to England. He is Canadian-born, educated in the United States and has an international appearance and air. In blue uniform and gold braid he would pass for a British or a French naval officer as easily as for an American.

Nearly four years before war began, Sims, then commander of the battleship Minnesota, stood before a British and American naval audience in London and pledged the support of the United States, with every ship and every dollar and every man, to England, in case England should be threatened by a European coalition.

He told his audience at the Coliseum, Thursday night, of this colossal "indiscretion" of his, and how, as he believed, it would have been the end of his naval career, but for the intervention of Charles Nagel of St. Louis, then a member of President Taft's Cabinet, in his behalf.

Said Same Thing to Their Faces

Indiscreet as he was, his prediction came true, though the aid of America was not extended with such promptness as he had indicated, and though the menace to England was not the chief reason why it was extended finally. But since, in the end, England and the United States did fight side by side, Admiral Sims thinks they should understand each other better now.

So he gave the last few minutes of his Coliseum speech to stories about his friends, the English. "Of course," he explained, "I wouldn't be poking fun at my British friends here if I had not done so to their faces very frequently, on the other side, and got back as good as I sent.

"Unfortunately," he said, "the British did not make a sufficiently close study of the psychology of war, and they did not appreciate the extreme importance of telling the people in America what they had done and were doing. By not doing so, they left us a perfect field for the propaganda of the enemy.

"There is a little book that has been printed on that subject, and it is entitled, 'Explaining the Britisher.' It is written by an American who has lived many years on the other side. You can probably buy it for a quarter. I advise you to get it and read it, and I defy you to read that book without getting up from it with a very high admiration for the courage and fortitude of that nation, that fought three years for us before we began to fight for ourselves.

"The Britisher and the American are not the same. The Britisher is a downright sort of an individual. He is very seldom facetious. He usually means what he says, and he says what he wants you to believe. He doesn't understand the American in his lighter moment, when he makes a facetious remark that he never expects any other American to believe at all.

The Sultan's Asbestos Shirt

"I had an instance of that when I first went to London. I went into a haberdasher's store to buy some shirts, and the man wanted to impress me with the importance of his business, and he began to enumerate the distinguished people he made shirts for. Among others he mentioned the late Sultan of Turkey. I remarked, idly and casually, 'Oh, he's wearing an asbestos shirt now.' That was a feeble enough joke, but the good man leaned across the counter in the most interested way and said: 'Indeed! And why is he wearing an asbestos shirt now?'

"There are marked differences in taste. This is a little yarn illustrating the difference in the taste in music. A Scotch soldier was brought, very desperately wounded, into an American hospital, and the doctor told the nurse he could live but a little while. He said: 'If he wants anything, you see that he gets it right away.' So the nurse asked: 'Sandy, is there anything you would like to have?' And he said he would like to hear the pipes once again; so she sent out and got three bagpipers to come in and they played for three hours, and Sandy went off into a refreshing sleep. The next morning the doctor said: 'Well, when did poor Sandy pass away?' The nurse said: 'Pass away nothing; he has been asleep all night and is all right this morning, and is going to get well.' The doctor said: 'That's fine. How are the rest of the patients?' She replied: 'Oh, they are all dead.'

"When I first went to the other side, at the Savage Club, which corresponds to the Gridiron and the Clover Club on this side, I told a very simple American story, and I was amused all the time I was in Great Britain by having direct and indirect reference to that story and requests from Britishers if I would please explain it. The story was this:

"I was in the harbor of Hongkong on a ship many years ago, alongside a British ship for many weeks. We knew the British officers very well, and one evening we had some of them to dinner in the wardroom mess. Somebody made the remarks, perhaps I did myself, that the Britishers, or some of them, are rather hard on the trigger as concerns the American joke. One of the British Lieutenants, by the name of Shackles, hotly resented this. I said: 'Shackles, if you don't mind, I'll just try you with an easy one.' Shackles said: 'All right.' So I told him this simple story:

"A traveler in a small New England hotel, up in the pie belt, came down to breakfast one morning, and the little waitress said: 'Beans, fish, hash and sausage; cranberry, mince and apple pie.' And the traveler said: 'I'll take some beans and some fish and some hash and some sausage and some cranberry and mince pie.' And the little maid said: 'Well, what is the matter with the apple pie?'

How He Tested a Britisher

"I looked over at Shackles, and his face bore the expression of a concrete image. I said: 'Shackles, you don't know now what was the matter with that apple pie.' He said: 'No, I'm damned if I do.'

"Just before I left London one of the newspapers published this yarn and stated that a good many Englishmen didn't know what it was about.

"I received on the letterhead of a more or less important business firm in the city the following letter, which you will note by its brevity and phraseology, contains a certain amount of irritation:

"'Admiral Sims—Dear Sir: The real joke about that apple pie story is that it is English and has been known in England for the last 30 or 40 years. Very sincerely yours.'

"To this I replied: 'Dear Sir: I am, of course, aware that the apple story is an English one, and has been known here for 30 or 40 years, but I believe you to be mistaken in supposing that that constitutes the real joke. The joke really is that although the apple pie story has been known in England for the last 30 or 40 years, there are still a good many Englishmen who do not yet know what was the matter with the apple pie. Very sincerely yours.'

"I don't claim that we had perfect co-operation," he said in speaking of his relations with the British navy, "or that there were not causes of friction. The people of different nations are really different. You possibly have heard the saying that a Britisher enters a drawing room as if he owned it, and an American walks in as if he didn't give a damn who owned it."

Admiral Sims also spoke in a satirical way of some of the stories printed in American newspapers as to naval matters, particularly submarines, and talked humorously of the experiences of correspondents whom he had known.

Some "Tall" Submarine Yarns

"There are many attractive stories that have been told about the submarine," he remarked. "The third mate of the first transport that comes into New York goes ashore, and after he has gotten about three whiskies under his flannel shirt, he begins to expand. To hear him talk, you would think that they had difficulty in getting across the ocean, so thickly was it studded with submarines. Of course, he says they shot down a good many and scared away a good many.

"I remember a particular instance of an American boy in the navy, who, on arriving at a port in the south of England, wrote a letter to his best girl, and said: "I am going to take this letter ashore in my pocket and drop it into a post-box, so the ship's censor won't see it." The ship's censor didn't see it, but the British censor

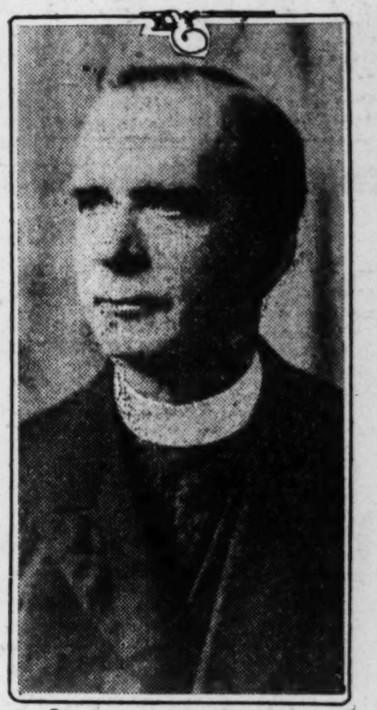
FATHER BRENNAN TELLS OF HIS 50 YEARS AS PRIEST IN ST. LOUIS

Recalls the Time When What Is Now Tenth and Olive Streets Was a Cow Pasture—Calls Astronomy His "Side Line"—"I Work in the Church and Play With the Stars."

ON a hill in Carondelet, from which the shimmering expanse of the Mississippi River can be seen through the trees, stands the old red brick house, in a tangle of flowers and shrubbery, where the Rev. Martin S. Brennan, priest, astronomer and kindly philosopher, lives and works.



The Rev. Father MARTIN S. BRENNAN

He sat before a wide window, through which the scent of lilacs stole on the warm spring air, as he told a Post-Dispatch reporter some of the things he has seen and learned before and during his ministry, which will have continued 50 years on May 7, when his golden jubilee will be celebrated here.

It is more than 70 years since his parents brought him, then 3 years old, from Ireland to St. Louis, which then was little more than a river settlement. He remembers the cow pasture that used to begin at what is now Tenth and Olive street, and recalls how farmers used to camp in the prairie around "the big spring" at Twenty-second and Market streets.

"Yes, I guess I've seen about everything of importance that has happened in St. Louis," he said. "I remember when Lincoln was stumping the country for the presidency. I was much impressed, even as a boy, by his tall, gaunt frame, his dark face, with the deep wrinkles, and particularly by the extraordinary high stovepipe hat which he wore.

Watched Horse Race With Grant

"Then, when Grant was President, I sat by him at a dinner they gave him here, and later watched a horse race with him. He didn't have much to say at the dinner, but he certainly did chuckle during the race.

"When I was at the old St. Malachy's Church, at Twenty-seventh and Clark, Mrs. Sherman and Nellie, wife and daughter of Gen. Sherman, used to come to me for communion. I've known most of the people who have played an important part in the affairs of St. Louis.

"It is a fine, big city now," he mused. "It has grown slowly and solidly, like a good character grows. Yes, St. Louis is like a good character; there has been nothing flashy about its development, but it's substantial.

"There is no better place to live. We are all neighbors. Everybody knows everybody else. I see people go away from here to some other city that is booming, but they like to come back, where they are not lonesome. We all grew up together here.

"I remember, now, how little Henry Kiel used to run up and down the old Manchester road, kicking up the dust with his bare toes. There was a dirt road there. I guess that would be close to where Grand and Laclede is. Henry was a lively boy; not a bad boy, but full of mischief.

"There isn't much that has ever gone on here that I didn't see, in the last 70 years.

Astronomy Is His "Side Line"

He glanced about his room. It is an interesting room, very large and very old-fashioned as rooms go nowadays. Against the walls were antiquated cases filled with books, some very old and some very new. In the middle of the brightly flowered red carpet, designed in a time gone by, stood a very businesslike desk, on which the papers and correspondence were neatly arranged, and by the side of which were large stacks of daily newspapers and magazines.

There stood in one corner the only available evidence of what Father Brennan calls his "side line"—the study of astronomy. It was a large, brightly polished, brass telescope, mounted on a tripod and trained on a window.

He sniffed the odor of lilacs; the deeply furrowed face under the thin white hair smiled and the kindly blue eyes twinkled in the bright afternoon light, as the reporter's next question broke across the lazy chirping of a bird in the garden.

"My philosophy of living?" he repeated. "It is an easy question for me to answer. There is only one way to be happy and successful. That is have an aim and to keep pegging away at it. It doesn't sound very startling, or very new, but, after all my experience, is the one best thing I can tell you.

Choose What You Like to Do

"A man must settle on something that he really likes to do; something that his heart is in; something that will always be uppermost with him. It is a sort of anchor that holds him straight when cross currents and winds are buffeting him about. It must be the work that he prefers above all others, and it will be a North Pole to him.

"Then he must keep pegging away at it. That's the only word—pegging away. There will be a lot of times when he wonders what's the use, and when he can't see through the fog, but he must keep right on at it, and he'll find that it will lead him through all right. Yes, sir, he's just got to keep pegging away."

The reporter glanced inquiringly at the telescope, but Father Brennan shook his head.

"My work is the church," he said. "That is what I have preferred above all things. I was inclined that way when I was a boy. I love it; it is my work," he said simply.

"But," and his eyes twinkled, "we all must have our side lines. Nothing is as good for a man's profession as for him to have a side line. Now, my side line is astronomy. I work in my church, but I play with the stars. I have the biggest playground there is—the heavens.

"No matter how much a man's heart is in his work, it will get montonous if he doesn't have a side line. That's human nature—to get tired of one thing." And that reminded him of the fable of the monk who became apprehensive lest he should tire of heaven. The legend was something like this:

It was in the old days when the Cistercian monks were one of the greatest and severest of orders, and they had a great monastery on the Rhine. Among the most pious was Brother Martin. He had but one temptation—he feared heaven would grow monotonous.

One day he went into the forest to gather some firewood. Suddenly he straightened, as he heard the quick song of a bird. Then the song ceased. "How beautiful!" he exclaimed, "but, oh, how short." He gathered up his sticks and returned.

A strange monk opened the door. "Who are you?" he inquired of the astonished Brother Martin. When the latter replied, the gatekeeper shook his head and declared no brother of that name belonged there, but invited him in.

Then some of the older monks were called in, and the oldest remembered having heard in his youth about a Brother Martin who had gone into the forest and never returned. In short, when they figured it out, Brother Martin had been listening to the song of the bird just 150 years.

Girls Better Than Ever Now

"That's human nature," soliloquized the speaker. "Now human nature is getting better," he continued.

"I hear a lot of talk about the women and girls of this age, about their short dresses and their painting and dancing and the like. I want to tell you, the girls are better now than they ever were. Yes, sir, they are, and that's the honest fact.

"You hear some people talk about the good old-fashioned girls of grandmother's time. Well, I remember those girls. They simpered, they posed, they affected a diffidence and a shyness that was all make-believe. They were affected. The girls of this day are natural. They say and act like they feel. There isn't any of that mimicry that we used to see.

"Oh, a lot of things have changed in the last 50 years. Now take your case," he went on. "I think the newspapers have changed more than anything. When I was a boy they were little private establishments, run on a personal basis. Today they are great public institutions, run on a public basis. It used to be that the newspaper was merely the mouthpiece of the editor. Why, today, half the readers don't even know what the editor's name is!

"The newspapers are responsible for most of the other changes, too, in my opinion. While there are some exceptions, I believe on the whole that the newspapers have always fought for what is best for the comunity. Yes, sir, they have. If they hadn't, I don't believe they would have succeeded.

"Yes, human nature is getting better all around. I remember after the Civil War, everybody hated everybody else, it seemed. There was a terrible lot of bitterness. There was no talk then of getting returned soldiers jobs. There weren't half enough men alike to do the work.

"Of course, there was one change that wasn't for the best. It wasn't long after the war that people began to talk a whole lot about money, and how to pile it up. Before there hadn't been any of that. Everybody had plenty—money didn't figure much in people's affairs. It's too bad they got those wrong ideas about the value of money, too bad."

"If you had it all to live over again, what would you do differently?" asked the interviewer. Father Brennan leaned back, and closed his eyes.

"I would still be in the church; there'd be no change there," he said slowly, "but," and he brightened, "my side line would be chemistry instead of astronomy. I love chemistry; it is so full of wonders; there are so many opportunities to discover something that will help the race. I couldn't afford to have a laboratory, and so I couldn't study it. All one needs to study astronomy is a little telescope.

"Outside of that, I don't believe I'd change a thing—No, not a thing that I can think of. I've had a pretty good life."

He looked out over the blooming tangled garden to the glistening ripples of the Mississippi, and the far prairies of Illinois. "And this is a pretty good place to live the last part of it, too," he added.

did. He sent it to me for such disciplinary action as I might judge necessary. The boy told about the trip across the ocean, he said that they had not only shot down a number of submarines, but they had discovered three spies on board and hung them at the yard-arm. Then he used this expression: 'When we arrived off the port where we went into France, we found no less than 18 submarines waiting for us. Can you beat it?'

"Seas Swarming With Submarines."

"I know there is an impression in the public mind that the seas have been swarming with submarines. I have seen that very expression in the American papers frequently. Nothing could be further from the truth. On several occasions, bunches of the American editors were sent to the other side, rather late in the war, to investigate things for themselves. They were given every facility. They were entertained by the Governments of the allies. Usually they were entertained by the Ministers. They were usually given luncheons or dinners and, being the principal dignitary of the American navy, I was always invited, and I used to amuse myself asking them questions. One of the questions was, 'What is your estimate, from your general reading of the American press, of the number of submarines that have usually been operating to the westward of Ireland and England and France? No one of them said less than 50, and some up as high as 150. Even that, considering the length of the coast lines of a thousand miles, could hardly be called having the sea swarming with submarines. As a matter of fact, the average number that the enemy was able to maintain to the west of those islands was about nine or 10. Sometimes it ran up to 15, sometimes down to five or six. The rest of them were on their way back or on their way out or in port being overhauled.

"The correspondents are permitted to tell about what is going on at the front, the positions of the armies and their operations, because those things cannot take place without the enemy knowing all about them.

And the correspondents tell you all about the movements.

Hard Sailing for Correspondents.

"What is more, they tell you the mistakes that are being made, and what they think you have to do right away quick to win the war. A correspondent at the front who can't inform his editor as to just what is wrong, and just what ought to be done, would promptly get fired off the paper. That is what he is there for.

"Fortunately they can't get at the navy out on the water. We receive them. We let them see everything we want to do, if they have got the nerve to go out and see it. We overhaul their stories, and cut out all the interesting things that we don't want the enemy to know. The enemy has no other means of finding out.

"Of course we send the correspondents out when they want to go on destroyers. Now, a destroyer is a vessel that has the engine power of an ocean liner in it, and the smallest and lightest hull around that engine that you can build. When you drive that vessel 30 knots, I have seen them jump out of the water so you could see under them as far back as the smoke pipe. You have to lash yourself into your bunk if you want a chance to stay there. It is liable to pop you out if it strikes a wave suddenly.

"If you get a large and more or less spherical and well-fed correspondent on one of those destroyers and he happens to strike heavy water in the Irish Sea, he usually goes to the front and writes about the army thereafter. One such correspondent, whose name was Wile, asked me to give him a passage across the channel to Brest to report the arrival of Admiral Wilson. I sent him on a destroyer, and after he reported to me the circumstances of the trip, I wrote him the following limerick:

"There was once a quill-driver named Wile,
Who was sent to report Wilson's smile,
He took passage by sea, singing 'Nearer to Thee,'
And praying for death all the while.

"When he got into Brest the slack of his vest
Was flapping to leeward a mile,
And for more than a week he would not even speak
Of the navy, except to revile."

2,000,000 IMMIGRANTS A YEAR, IS ONE PREDICTION

Y. M. C. A. Man Says This Will Include Those From Japan and From China.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Immigration of 2,000,000 foreigners, mostly Chinese and Japanese, to this country every year for the next 50 years was predicted here today by Abraham Bowers, Immigration Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., in the course of an address before the Illinois State Americanization Committee.

Bowers based his prediction on the assumption that the growth of the United States for the next half century will require hordes of common laborers.

"Before the war," he said, "we assimilated about 1,000,000 immigrants [illegible]y were mostly used common labor. As our country grows the need for labor increases in ration. There is only one place for it to come from now, China and Japan. Therefore, they are bound to come, and I believe that they will inter-marry with our people as other immigrants are doing. Japanese and Chinese students now marry our university girls. They will override racial prejudice, literary tests and every other obstacle."

90 RUSSIANS JOIN BOLSHEVIKI

Accept Marushewsky's Offer, and Pass Through Lines.

By the Associated Press.

ARCHANGEL, Thursday, April 24.—Approximately 96 soldiers of the North Russian army who accepted the offer of Major-General Marushewsky, commander of the Russian forces, and Governor-General of the region of the North, to permit them to join the Bolsheviki if they had objections to the Archangel Government, have been sent through the front to the enemy lines.

A dispatch from Archangel, April 3, said Gen. Marushewsky had startled Archangel with a proclamation intended to call the bluff of the Bolshevik sympathizers in that territory. The General offered these persons the choice of a safe conduct to the Bolshevik line up to April 10, on their written application, with the alternative of a trial by military court if found within the allied military zone after that date.

Furnace Heat for Every Home

Old Homes, as Well as New, Now Can Enjoy the Advantages of a Modern Furnace Heating System at a Cost Within the Means of All

Don't spend another winter shivering and freezing, when at reasonable cost you can have a home with every room warm and comfortable. At last a heating system has been devised to take the place of heating stoves, that gives you the warmth and comfort of Warm Air Furnace heat. This wonderful heating system is the which requires no wall piping, and only a single floor grate, yet it is designed so it circulates heat to every room where heat is allowed to enter.

Made in 5 Sizes—Models for Burning Soft Coal, Hard Coal, Coke or Wood

Installed In a Few Hours without trouble or muss, in any old or new home with a cellar or basement in which to place the furnace.

4 to 6 Tons of Coal Heats the Average Home for the Season

Costs little more to operate than a heating stove, because the greatest heat value of the fuel is obtained, free from waste or loss. For fuel economy, no heating system accomplishes such marvelous results.

INVESTIGATE!—Over 20,000 Homes Now Being Successfully Heated—Every Owner Enthusiastic!

The Detroit Jewel Pipeless Furnace was designed and perfected by heating experts. It possesses features and advantages not found in other furnaces of similar type. That is why thousands of owners so enthusiastically endorse a Detroit Jewel. If your home is properly planned for pipeless furnace heating, you can be assured of satisfactory heat, and Detroit Jewel Dealers will investigate this point before recommending you to buy.

Write for Free Booklet Which Tells the Full Facts

This booklet tells all the special features of the Detroit Jewel Pipeless Furnace—explains how it is installed—how it heats and why it is so easy to operate and burns so little fuel. Write for this booklet without delay, or call upon the local dealer. Now is the time to decide how your home will be heated next winter.

KOREA IS ONE OF AMERICA'S BIG PROBLEMS, HE SAYS

diers.' That would be altogether too militant and the meeting would surely be dispersed. 'Jesus, Lover of My Soul,' 'Rock of Ages' and 'Abide With Me, Fast Falls the Eventide' are permissible, but not 'Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus, Ye Soldiers of the Cross.'

"The Koreans are possibly the least militant people on the globe. They have generally been called docile. One Japanese soldier can terrorize a crowd. It seems sometimes that they almost invite oppression by their excessive humility. One might jump at the conclusion that rebellion among such a people cannot amount to much. This seems to me poor reasoning; for when such people do rebel, it means that the very depths of human nature have been fathomed. The worst strike in America is not the strike of the most self-respecting, highly-paid workers; it is the hunger strike of the most exploited, most down-trodden section of the proletariat. Among all Europeans, the Russian people endured the worst oppression most uncomplainingly. A great many westerners could not sympathize with their sufferings simply because the Russians were so everlastingly patient under it. But when Russia did strike, she struck so violently that she has shocked the whole civilized world. This should be a lesson to everyone who is banking on the natural servility of the Orientals."

Japanese Attitude Toward Yellow Men.

Dr. Soper understood, of course, that no one would think of the Japanese as servile. "Every Japanese," he said, "is an aristocrat in his attitude toward every yellow man of another race. Even the private soldier is cocky, superior, full of the dignity of his position. Japan to him is the natural leader and governor of the Orient politically, educationally and industrially, and it cannot be denied that he has all sorts of scientific backing for his claim."

What, then, is the solution—the solution of this problem "unsolvable by any rule of statecraft which the world has yet adopted?"

Scientific formulas cannot save anybody," he said. "Surely it cannot save the world in such a crisis as threatens it now. There is nothing that can save the world except salvation, and there is no salvation except in uniting mankind with God. Christianization is the only solution. It is either that or chaos."

"Christianization of Korea?" I asked.

"Christianization of our nominally Christian countries first," he said. "The practical application of Christian principles in our diplomatic and commercial intercourse with the Orient. We cannot look upon the yellow men longer as objects of exploitation, nor as merely as a downtrodden race whom we have a right to uplift according to our western formulas. That is the reason why all the denominations in America are just now uniting for home and foreign missionary work on a scale which no one has dared propose before. The Orient cannot be saved through dogma; and Korea is teaching us that it cannot be saved only through materialistic civilization.

"Next, we dare to hope for the Christianization of Japan. Scientifically, Japan has taken a most advanced attitude in her attempts to 'civilize' Korea. Actually she has failed, for militarism, the militarism the world over, is stupid; mere force is futile; the materialism which does not take into account the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man must end in failure.

Sees No Sinister Japan.

"One does not have to be anti-Japanese in order to recognize this failure. One does not have even to commit himself to the theory of Korean independence. The true friend of Korea is that of the deep sympathy with the Koreans in the loss of their liberty and in the injustices from which they have so severely suffered at the hands of Japanese officials. The other is an attitude of sincere good will. The wish that Korea may be led to look into the future and see herself developing in all that civilization can bring, as an integral part of the Japanese empire. I sincerely hope that Korea may retain all the physical advantages which Japanese sovereignty has given her, and I see little hope for that except through real co-operation with real Japan.

"Real Japan, the Japan I have believed in and learned to love, is not the sinister, plotting, scheming war party of today. The Japan I knew is a friendly, warm-hearted, liberty-loving nation, already influenced by the ideals of Christian democracy. That Japan is not asserting itself in direct rebellion toward the Government. It is most loyal to the Mikado and it is now aiming to work out its freedom according to American models. But it is heading toward democracy nevertheless, a democracy under the Mikado more in the manner in which England achieved her freedom without upsetting her ancient institutions. This real Japan will utilize all the genius for organization and leadership which the nation has but it will not utilize it for its own aggrandizement. It will use it instead for service, for the reclamation of the Orient from poverty and ignorance and disease, and for the establishment of universal brotherhood.

"How much America may assist in this solution depends altogether on how far America is willing to adopt Christian instead of mere materialistic and commercial standards. We can conquer the Orient with unselfish service and the Orient will not rebel. If we try any other solution whatever, we are doomed to failure from the start; and failure in this unprecedented world crisis means chaos for the whole human race."

RED GUARDS IN NETHERLANDS

Wynkoop Signing Passes as First President of Soviet Republic.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

THE HAGUE, April 26.—Despite the reassuring outcome of the elections, the Bolshevist danger is not yet ended. At frontier places in Gelderland it is asserted that German red guards with armored cars are awaiting to cross the border as soon as they receive a sign from David Wynkoop. Wynkoop already signs himself "First President of the Netherlands Soviet Republic" on passes issued by him to Russian and German Bolshevists who have been arrested while trying to enter or leave Holland.

Het Vaderland declares that Wynkoop has organized a small but active group of Dutch red guards and should the German red guards cross the border the Dutch reds would meet them and make common cause. From the border it is reported that the reds are pressing forward and that the German Government troops cannot prevent them from reaching Holland.

Five World-Renowned Makes—the

Sohmer, Kurtzmann, Brambach, Acoustigrande or Fischer Baby Grand Piano

brings the artistic beauty of the Grand Piano within the available space of modern homes. The Grand Piano is one of the inheritances of beauty that have come down to us from the eighteenth century.

¶ The elegance of the instrument, its graceful form—its practicability in the service of art already were foreshadowed in the harpsichords of our grandsires.

¶ For many years the Grand Piano remained a luxury. Everyone admitted its desirability and envied those who possessed it.

¶ The above celebrated makes of Baby Grand Pianos have all the elegance and nobility of the larger instruments—yet they occupy but very little more space than the average upright piano.

¶ Prices are moderate, ranging from $585.00 for the exquisite little Brambach Baby Grand upward.

Terms as low as $25.00 Cash and $15.00 Monthly may be arranged. On this fair basis, almost every woman who has been longing for a Baby Grand Piano may purchase one at Vandervoort's and pay for it out of her monthly allowance.

Floor Patterns

Let us send you a paper floor pattern (no charge). With it you can measure your floor space and better visualize the effect of adding a Baby Grand Piano to your furnishings.

SLAYER OF BAVARIAN PREMIER SAID TO HAVE BEEN LYNCHED

Dragged From Hospital by Spartacan Mob, Berlin Political Agent Reports.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Friday, April 25.—Count Arco Valley, who assassinated Kurt Eisner, Bavarian Premier, at Munich, Feb. 21, and has since been in a hospital there after an attempted lynching by a mob, was recently dragged from the hospital by a Spartacan crowd and killed, according to a political agent who has reached Bamberg from Munich.

On witnessing this development, Herr Auer, the former Minister of the Interior, who was wounded during the outbreak in the Bavarian Diet in February, and also has been in the hospital, left that institution in fear of his life. Former War Minister Rosenhaupter has fled from Munich and arrived at Bamberg.

Many wealthy residents of Munich, according to the same source, have been arrested by the Munich extremists, some of them, however, afterward obtaining their release by money payments.

Kolchak Outlines His Aims for New Russia

Would Free People From Bolshevism, Save the National Wealth and Reconstruct the Country Politically, Economically, Morally.

By the Associated Press.

OMSK, Siberia, April 1, via San Francisco, April 25, by courier to the Associated Press.—Admiral Kolchak, Supreme Ruler of the All-Russian Government, sends a message to America urging support of the Omsk regime in a statement to the Associated Press, giving in detail his ideals for Russia and the Russians. He declared in his statement that his Government's aims were to free the people from the "Bolshevik lash," "save the last remains of the national wealth," and reconstruct the country politically, economically and morally. He advocated "free participation of the people themselves in the organs of the general state and local Government."

Education he urged would be necessary to restore the morals of the "population which has lost under the influence of Bolshevism and anarchy its comprehension of the difference between good and bad."

Increased productivity, settlement of the agrarian question in favor of the working peasantry, attraction to Russia of much capital and restoration of justice he cited as among the prime needs of the country.

What He Advocates.

"The aim which the Government set for itself," Admiral Kolchak said "should be the general aim of the loyal citizens of Russia.

"At the present time the Government is operating on the basis of support of broad social groups, and this authority is consistently growing stronger. It is sufficient to mention the resolution of the block of political parties and social organization uniting all factions beginning from 'workers' organizations, and seeks to the Right Wing and ending with the Cossack and the commercial-industrial groups which have declared the full support of this Government.

"As my main task I set the establishment of an army with fighting capacity, victory over the Bolsheviki and the establishment of law and order. Constant and continuing successes at the front against the Bolsheviki proved in action that in the establishment of a fighting army much already has been done. If, at the time of my acceptance of the power of Government the front was being held in the main, thanks to the presence there of Czecho-Slovak troops, at the present time all successes are being attained exclusively through the efforts of Russian troops alone. Aid from the allies is represented only in the furnishing of the Rusian army with weapons, ammunition and uniforms.

Wants Democratic Foundation.

"I very strongly hold the idea that states in our days can exist and develop themselves on a firm democratic foundation.

"Only then will the farmer on Russian land be safeguarded soundly under just conditions, only then will Russian industry revive and better conditions of work and life be guaranteed for Russian working men.

"Deprived of the opportunity to enact new laws through a rightly organized popular representative government the all-Russian Government feels very keenly this fault and is striving to prepare the country for elections to an all-Russian national convention.

"For the accomplishment of such a broad task, in all governmental offices there is proceeding energetic efforts unified by the one general binding idea of a national and governmental rehabilitation of a single great Russia.

Fundamental Propositions.

This work and the principles upon which it is based can be reduced to these fundamental propositions:

"The impossibility of a return to the old regime.

"All the peoples of Russia without distinction of religion or nationality should have equal rights.

"To all nationalities according to their desire should be granted cultural autonomy.

"At the basis of internal government of the country is laid the principles of the broadest decentralization imperatively dictated by the immensity of expense of the Russian land and variations in local conditions. The principle of local self-government, independent and democratic, should be widely introduced.

"To separate regions distinguished from each other by ethnographic, historical and other conditions there should be guaranteed an organization which corresponds to the local character and a development under the form of autonomy or federation. But, however widely may be introduced local and district self-government, the principle of the national unity of Russia must be observed, as an essential condition of national strength.

Education Badly Needed.

"Without the widest extension of enlightenment among the whole population it will be impossible to establish the blessings of culture and civilization.

"The extremely important agrarian questions should be decided in favor of the broad factions of the working peasantry. As a security of social peace and economic prosperity in the future there must be a just regulation of the process of forced expropriation which has taken place in connection with which there should be attained fuller utilization of cultivated lands and further development of agricultural industry."

In the sphere of economic rehabilitation, Admiral Kolchak declared, "the Government is striving for the development of the productive forces of the country and the increase of productivity of labor on a basis of working discipline.

"Together with measures for the re-establishment of industry," the supreme ruler continued, "the Government finds a strong support for its activities in the co-operatives. It is important to keep in view that the co-operative movement, which has embraced all Russia and which began long before the war, has attained fabulous successes in the period of war in the sense of a development and a growth of its operations.

Immense Capital Wanted.

"But it is clear that for the re-establishment of the economic life of the country it is necessary to have immense capital which Russia at the preent tsme does not possess. A process of amassing national capital would take a very long time and necessarily would impede the rehabilitation of the country. That is why it is necessary to attract foreign capital.

"The establishment for this purpose of favorable conditions guaranteeing the integrity and profitableness of capital invested in the enterprises of reviving ruined industry will be one of the immediate tasks of the Government. In view of the immense expanse of Russia and the variety of her natural riches, the field is actually limitless and accords with the strength only of the richest world states such as the United States of America. Aside from financial capital she might with advantage both for herself and Russia, furnish Russia with intellectual and technical capital also by means of sending staffs of engineers and instructors.

"Finally, in the sphere of financial policy, measures for just and equal distribution of taxes, regulation of the exchange of currency disturbed by the war and completely disorganized by the Bolsheviki and for the re-establishment of national credit, will have first place."

"Such in their main general outlines," Admiral Kolchak concluded, "are the aims for the attainment of which this Government is striving."

TRADE CONVENTION ADOPTS PROGRAM

Comprehensive Business Policy Decided Upon at Exports Convention in Chicago.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—A comprehensive business policy and legislative program for the development of export trade of the United States was adopted today at the Sixth National Foreign Trade Convention which concluded its deliberations and adjourned.

Business and legislative needs for the extension of the country's foreign trade were outlined in the report of the convention's General Committee, which was presented by James A. Farrell, chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council and president of the United States Steel Corporation. A summary of the recommendations of the committee report follows:

The earliest possible completion of the Government's present ship building program.

The Government should immediately remove all restrictions now placed on American shipbuilding and permit the free construction of vessels for sale to foreign interests.

There is imperative need of a revision of our shipping navigation, classification and measurement laws that American vessels may be placed on a more equitable pasis. Opposition to any continuance of Government operation of the United States merchant marine.

It is urged that consistent with recognized war emergency needs the Government-owned vessels be allocated to suitable trades and trading routes for operation by any qualified competent American shipping enterprise, under conditions of sale or charter that will permit of their sending the American flag to any port of the world on a fair trading competitive basis with that of any other maritime nation.

Coal and Oil Deposits.

Establishment of necessary coal and fuel and oil depots on all the great foreign trading routes so that American shipping shall not be dependent upon foreign owned facilities for such vital service.

American built ships for American foreign trade, freed from all burdensome restrictions is the crying need of the day if the United States is ever to win its rightful place in international commerce.

Adequate telegraphic facilities with all foreign countries for the benefit of the American exporters.

Creation of a separate department of the Federal Government for the development of aerial navigation and the promotion of airship service to overseas countries.

Local chambers of commerce are asked to build public airdromes in large centers in order that prompt delovery of plans and specifications, blue prints and invoices may be made by airplanes from sea port to the interior.

AMERICAN CORRESPONDENTS WA ATTEND FINAL NEGOTIATIONS

Desire to Interview Enemy Delegates: Some Others Are Opposed to Meeting Germans.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, April 26.—The American correspondents accredited to the peace conference, met to protest against arrangements to exclude the press from the negotiations with the Germans except the final session when the treaty will be actually signed. The American delegates are said to favor full publicity.

The correspondents were informed that no journalists would be allowed to meet or confer with the enemy delegates. The majority pointed out that British and American correspondents already in Germany were daily interviewing German leaders and faithfully reflecting German opinion, and hence there would be no point in preventing statements of the German views on the ground.

The minority felt that Germany's culpability in the war and the horror of German atrocities were such that no faithful allied citizen could desire to meet the German delegates until after peace was signed. One former Washington correspondent expressed fear that, if the correspondents were allowed to confer with the enemy, the latter would use the press to spread German propaganda.

"Did Count von Bernstorff ever put anything over on you when he was in Washington? somebody asked.

"Yes," admitted the speaker, "and in the suavest and most convincing way imaginable."

A committee was appointed to ask the American delegates to secure for the American correspondents the right not only to be present at the Versailles conferences, but the right to receive communications from the spokesmen of the German delegation directly.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

DEFENSE COUNCIL TELLS HOW GOOD ROADS AID

Send Out Speech of Member of Committee Showing Fine Highways Benefit Country.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—What good roads mean to the country is told in a statement issued by the Council of National Defense, quoting an address delivered at Philadelphia by John S. Cravens, chairman of the Highways Transport Committee of the council, before a convention of the National Association of Motor Truck Sales Managers.

The council, said Cravens, is not trying to sell trucks but to sell ideas, and one of the purposes of the Highways Transport Committee has been to educate people as to the value of the motor vehicle as a means of transport. He believed that the vehicle and the road must be demonstrated to be inseparable parts of a great agency of public service.

"It is a fact," he said, "that the people are beginning to understand what roads mean—not as a means of enjoyment nor as a convenience, but as a great factor in the economic growth of the country. They realize that poor roads mean restriction of the social as well as the commercial opportunities of life, and that good roads mean quicker transportation, cheaper transportation, a saving of labor, and the consequent opening of new channels of employment, broader and nearer markets, and that they are the avenues for a wider and better social relation.

Farmer Needs Good Roads.

"It is being realized, moreover, that to no class does road improvement mean so much as it does to the farmer. Let the people once understand that, and we need have no fear concerning road construction.

"No less important than road construction is provision for road maintenance. To build roads without adequate provision for maintenance is an economic waste.

"How is this to be brought about? Without particularizing too far, it might be taken as a fair working basis that in the future the maintenance charge should be imposed upon the traffic and the capital expense involved in the construction should be extinguished by taxation. If at the end of the retirement period our roads were still good, we would have gained that much; and if they were not, we would at least have free credit with which we might build again.

Chances for Motor Trucks.

"There is another feature of our work that is of interest to you who are concerned with the future of the motor truck. It is the declared policy of the United States Railroad Administration greatly to curtail the construction of spur or feeder lines. This at once opens possibilities to the motor truck, for the demand for transportation is constantly growing. Some of the railroad authorities openly advocate the establishment of country truck lines, especially those running at right angles to the main rail routes, and I believe this entente could be fostered to the mutual benefit of both parties.

"Some have even invoked the aid of ourselves and our state committees in a study of the short-haul problem, in order that relations of both rail and truck thereto might be better understood, and the economic field of usefulness of each be better determined.

"We have also endeavored to codify all we learn on this great subject, to co-ordinate the efforts of different bodies all working to the same purpose, and to act as a clearing house in which may center the knowledge of the activities of various state highway departments which may again be disseminated in order that all may receive the benefit of that which is developed by one.

"I am hapy to state that under the authority of the council the committee is to be continued and is now composed of representatives of those Federal departments most closely connected with road use and road construction—the Postoffice Department, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Commerce. J. I. Blakslee, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General; J. M. Goodell, consulting engineer of the Bureau of Roads; J. H. Collins of the Bureau of Markets; Dr. Roy S. MacElwee, assistant director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; G. B. Clarkson, director of the Council of National Defense, and myself, as chairman, constitute the committee.

"This composition is a warrant that the committee has the co-operation and support of the Government departments named, and, I think as constituted, it is singularly well chosen for the work of the post-war period, and I believe its labors will be broader and more useful even than heretofore."

VALLEY HISTORICAL SOCIETY TO MEET HERE NEXT MONTH

Matters of Historical Interest to Be Discussed During Three-Day Session.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Historical Society will be held in St. Louis, May 8, 9 and 10, upon the joint invitation of the Missouri Historical Society and Washington University. The majority of the sessions during the three days will be held in the Jefferson Memorial, Lindell boulevard and De Baliviere avenue, but one session will be held at St. Louis University on May 9, and the sessions May 10 will be at Washington University.

Matters of historical interest will be discussed during the three days' meeting, as will questions pertaining to the teaching of history. Speakers from the leading universities and colleges in the Mississippi Valley will participate.

Membership in the association is open to all who are interested in the history of the Mississippi Valley, and the sessions will be open to the public.

Included in the entertainment features planned for the visitors are luncheons to be given by the Missouri Historical Society, the City Club and Washington University. The Convention and Publicity Bureau of St. Louis has made arrangements for the automobile trip about the city, and some of the suburbs on May 10, to be followed by an interurban trip to the Cahokia Mounds, between East St. Louis and Collinsville.

Dance for Returning Soldiers.

The Relatives' Auxiliary of A Company, 138th Infantry, is planning a dance and home-coming party to be held in honor of the returning soldiers at the Armory the night of June 7. Several new members were enrolled at a meeting held Wednesday night at Weltner's Hall, 3622 Finney avenue. Mrs. H. C. Stewart, 3642 Flora boulevard, mother of Capt. George Stewart, A Company, presided.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let your sore, swollen, aching feet spread out in a bath of "TIZ"

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. They use "Tiz," and "Tiz" cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "Tiz" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. It instantly stops the pain in corns, callouses and bunions. It's simply glorious. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel after using "Tiz." You'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" now from any druggist. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.—ADV.

PROTEST BOUNTY ON OWLS, HAWKS, EAGLES

Department of Agriculture Issues Statement Against Bill Proposed in Missouri.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Protest against Missouri's contemplated bounty upon owls, hawks and eagles as a menace to agriculture and especially to fruit culture was made by the United States Department of Agriculture today through Dr. E. W. Nelson, Chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey. The bill fixing such a bounty has passed the Missouri Senate, and is now before the House. Dr. Nelson issued the following statement:

"With the lesson which [illegible] experience has taught us, it is surprising that general bounties on hawks and owls are still considered. It is safe to say that in trying to control the few species which feed upon game and poultry, fully 90 per cent of the birds destroyed are the ones which feed almost exclusively on noxious rodents and insects. The cooper hawk, sharp-shinned hawk, and great horned owl, which are the true destroyers of game, are shy and elusive and are hard to observe; while the larger, useful species such as the red-tailed hawk, red-shouldered hawk, rough-legged hawk and a number of the smaller owls are often in plain sight and comparatively easy to approach.

"The Bureau of Biological Survey has examined 2260 pellets of the barn owl, which lives in the Smithsonian towers, and in this mass of material have been identified the skulls of over 5000 small mammals. Of this number 3800 belong to meadow mice and pine mice, 800 to house mice and 430 to the common house rat. When we consider that one pine mouse is capable of destroying an apple tree worth at least $100, the valuable services of this bird must be evident to everyone.

"In Virginia, where State and county bounty laws on hawks and owls have prevailed for a series of years, pine mice have become very destructive to apple and other fruit orchards. In the vicinity of Winchester, it is estimated that trees valued at $250,000 have been destroyed during the past two winters. It is almost a certainty if the hawks and owls and smaller predaceous mammals had been allowed to live, a large portion of this damage would have been prevented. It may be truthfully said that in an attempt to save a few hundred dollars worth of poultry and game, hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of fruit trees have been destroyed by the removal of the rodent-eating birds and mammals.

"Any State that is blacklisting all species of hawks and owls is doing itself a grievous wrong."

MODES OF LIVING OF SEVEN RACES WILL BE EXHIBITED

Whole Families, With Their Houses, to Be Taken to Columbus, O., for the Methodist Celebration.

A feature of the Methodist Centenary Celebration at Columbus, O., June 20 to July 7, will be the establishment of representatives of seven races in seven exhibition buildings there, according to information received by the Rev. Dr. W. T. Wright, executive secretary for the St. Louis area.

Whole families will be transported, with their houses and house furnishings, from their native lands. They will carry on their daily life, work and play, just as they do on their own corner of the earth. Mission activities of the Methodist church among these races will be depicted.

Two special pageants will be given, the first patriotic in aspect, in which several thousand persons will participate. The second, a climax of the celebration, will be symbolic of the drawing together of all nations of the earth.

The Centenary Celebration will commemorate the founding of Methodism, and will be the culmination of a campaign to raise a fund of $105,000,000, to be paid in five annual installments, for missionary work at home and abroad.

"Bob White Minstrel Show."

The "Bob White Minstrels" will give a show tonight at Sacred Heart School Hall, Twenty-fifth street and St. Louis avenue, the proceeds of which will go into a fund providing free tuition for poor children of the parish.

Make Finest Lager Beer In Your Own Home

One of the large breweries which, until recently, made an extra fine quality of beer, has now turned its excellent equipment over to the making of Blue Ribbon Malt Extract. The same men who for years have been engaged in brewing beer and are past masters in the art of making barley malt are now devoting their time to the making of this malt extract. Of itself this malt extract is non-alcoholic and can be sent to any "dry" section. With its use and by following the simple and easy-to-follow directions you can make, right in your own home and without any special apparatus, the finest quality genuine malt and hops beer you ever tasted. Not a "near beer," but the real thing, with sparkle, creamy foam and as delicious a taste as any beer that was ever drawn from a keg or poured from a bottle. Improves with age just like any other beer.

Blue Ribbon Malt Extract is so highly concentrated that a very small quantity goes a long way. Your beer will cost you less than one-third the average cost of brewery beer, it is purer, more wholesome, better tasting than any you ever bought.

Here's a wonderful opportunity for agents in any territory. Be first in your section to introduce Blue Ribbon Malt Extract. Enormous sales and big profits for you if you act quick. Don't let anyone get in ahead of you. Write at once for full particulars and easy instructions for brewing. $1.00 brings you a 2-pound can and hops. Make 5 gallons or more and see for yourself that it "hits the spot" and has all the zip and tang of your favorite brand of beer. Write today—sure. DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL EVENTS OF THE WEEK

NOW FOR OLD BILL, ALF AND BERT, IN A PLAY

Heroes of Bairnsfather Cartoons in "The Better 'Ole," Tonight at American.

Memorable among the war cartoons of Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather—which had their first American publication in the Post-Dispatch, beginning with the Sunday Magazine of Oct. 14, 1917—was one picturing Old Bill, hero of the series, squatting in a shell-hole, with his walrus-tusk mustachios fiercely pointing. Beside him was the friend of his bosom, Alf. They were caked with mire, and shrapnel cracked about their ears. Alf was grousing bitterly about the general unpleasantness of their situation. Quoth Old Bill, with savage joviality: "Well, if you knows of a better 'ole, go to it."

From this bit of repartee was taken the title "The Better 'Ole," for a play which was made from the cartoons by Capt. Bairnsfather and Capt. Arthur Eliot, with musical interludes by Herman Darewski. The production had little enough of a plot, but the eyewitness veracity of its incidents, and best of all the humanness of its three British musketeers—Old Bill, Alf and their lovesick pal, Bert—won the heart of England, as Capt. Bairnsfather's drawings had done before. The play ran more than two years in London. In the meantime, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn put it on at the Greenwich Village Theater in New York, the habitat of unpopular drama. "The Better 'Ole" soon escaped into Broadway, where it enjoyed one of the substantial successes of last season. Several companies are now on the road, and one of them, with De Wolf Hopper in the part of Old Bill, opens at the American Theater tonight for a week's engagement.

Old Bill Encounters a Spy.

Such thread of story as there is hangs upon Old Bill's encounter with a German spy and his charging over the top against orders, with the issue in doubt as to whether he will be shot for disobedience or decorated for gallantry. What counts is the comments, invincibly good-natured and humorous after the style of the British Tommy, made upon the war and upon life in general by Old Bill and his pair of inseparables. According to all accounts, there is not a moment of war horrors or hate. A chorus of war service girls, and Bert's succession of inamoratas, provide the feminine ingredient. The play is described by the authors as "a fragment from France in two explosions, seven splinters and a short gas attack."

De Wolf Hopper is said to have found one of his happiest characterizations in the burly, kindly and not overly intelligent Old Bill. Bert and Alf will be played by Harry McNaughton and Percival Vivian.

Soldier Players in Six Plays.

The Camp Zachary Taylor Soldier Players come to the Shubert-Jefferson Theater tomorrow night for six performances, beginning with "Pierre of the Plains," by Edgar Selwyn, a melodrama of the Canadian Northwest. A different play will be given at each performance. The others will be "The Bells," Leopold Lewis' version of Erckmann-Chatrian's "Le Juif Polonaise," a favorite vehicle of Sir Henry Irving; "The Seal of Silence," by Frank A. Crippen; "The Rising of the Moon," by Lady Gregory; "Food," by William C. Demille; and "Waterloo," by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

The proceeds of the engagement will be for the benefit of the Publicity Fund of the Liberty Victory Loan Association. The Soldier Players are not only soldiers, but former professional actors, who were organized last June at Camp Taylor, Ky., by Foxhall Daingerfield of the Army Y. M. C. A., himself an actor who has played in the companies of Mrs. Fiske, Robert Hilliard and other stars. The entire personnel of the troupe, including the executive staff and stage crew, are soldiers; and soldiers constructed the lighting effects, scenic furniture and properties.

At the camp a Corporal of infantry took the female parts with success; for the present the company has enlisted the services of Miss Catherine Vesey, who was formerly on the stage and who acted as a Y. W. C. A. hostess during the war. Miss Julia Daingerfield of Lexington, Ky., will take the part of Catherine in "The Bells."

Mabel McCane at Orpheum.

After this week the American will inaugurate a short supplementary season of motion pictures, beginning with "The End of the Road," made to assist the social hygiene campaign of the Government.

The Orpheum's stellar acts this week are those of Mabel McCane, a St. Louis girl, in a revue of songs and dances; and of Jack Norworth, for several seasons a popular entertainer on the legitimate stage, with a list of new songs. Miss McCane, who was born and reared in this city, has appeared as co-star with Joe Howard in several musical shows, and returns now at the head of her own act. Another St. Louis girl on the bill is Janet Adair, in song recitations. Other acts will be given by Tom Smith and Ralph Austin, Hampton Blake, Dorothy Brenner, who supported Mme. Bernhardt during her vaudeville tour; the Ramsdells and Deyo, and the Garcinetti brothers, acrobats.

At the other downtown theaters: Columbia, the Bobker Arabs, athletes, at the head of a bill of vaudeville and pictures; Grand, "The Territorials Quartered," a pantomime in three scenes; Garrick, Nat Carr, in comedy songs, and a troupe of Hawaiian dancers and singers; Gayety, "Oh, Girl," and Standard, "The Pace Makers."

HIGHLANDS TO OPEN SUNDAY

Forest Park Highlands will open next Sunday, for its twenty-fifth season, it is announced.

The familiar amusement features will be resumed, including the vaudeville theater, and there will be a concert band under the direction of Prof Lemcke.

Recital in Webster Groves Tuesday.

Leo C. Miller, pianist and director of the Chaminade Choral Club, and Miss Mary Noble, soprano, will give a joint recital Tuesday night at the Monday Club Auditorium in Webster Groves. He will play a series of numbers ranging from Bach to Cyril Scott, and from Beethoven to John Alden Carpenter. Miss Noble will offer two groups of songs.

CARUSO TO SING THREE WORLD-FAMOUS ARIAS

"Celeste Aida," "Una Furtiva Lagrima" and "Vesti la Giubba" on Program.

Enrico Caruso's program for his concert Friday night at the Coliseum will present three world-famed tenor arias which are peculiarly associated with his interpretation of them. They are: "Celeste Aida," from Verdi's "Aida;" "Una furtiva lagrima," from Donizetti's "Elisir d'Amore;" and "Vesti la Giubba," from Leoncavallo's "I Pagliacci." These are the only numbers formally programed for the Metropolitan Opera Co. star, for the purpose of leaving scope for encores. Caruso is unusually generous in this respect, he having given 18 added numbers at a recent concert.

He will be assisted by an orchestra of some 70 St. Louis musicians, under the direction of Roberto Moranzoni, chief conductor at the Metropolitan Opera House, which will play a series of orchestral selections and the accompaniments to the tenor's arias. The complete program is announced as follows:

Overture to William Tell	Rossini
Aria, Celeste Aida	Verdi
(a) Intermezzo from Jewels of the Madonna	Wolf-Ferrari
(b) Traeume, a study for Tristan and Isolde	Wagner
(c) Rhapsodie, Espana	Chabrier
Aria, Una furtiva lagrima	Donizetti
Suite, L'Arlesienne	Bizet
Aria, Vesti la giubba	Leoncavallo
Overture to Vespri Sicilianni	Verdi
Star-Spangled Banner	Smith

Enrico Caruso and Orchestra.

Ceremonies on Thursday.

The tenor, with Mrs. Caruso, will arrive at 8 o'clock Thursday morning from Nashville, and will be met at the Union Station by representatives of the Mayor and Police Board, and conducted to the Jefferson Hotel. After breakfast he will be escorted to the city hall for exercises in which he will be presented with a flag on behalf of the city. Acting Mayor Aloe will be in charge of the ceremony, and United States Senator Spencer will make the presentation speech.

From the city hall Caruso will be taken to Police Headquarters, where the Police Board, in special session, will swear him in as an honorary Captain of Police, and decorate him with a gold star.

PERSONNEL OF SCOTTI OPERA COMPANY NAMED

Several Singers Popular Here in Troupe Which Comes to Odeon in May.

Antonio Scotti, the eminent baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Co., leaves New York tomorrow on the tour which is to bring him, at the head of his own opera company, to St. Louis on May 11 and 12, for two performances at the Odeon. On one evening will be given a double bill, consisting of "Cavalleria Rusticana" and Leoni's one-act opera of San Francisco's Chinatown, "L'Oracolo," in which Scotti will appear in the role of the sinister Chim-Fang. The second evening will be devoted to "Madame Butterfly."

The names of the principal singers in the company are announced as follows: Florence Easton and Francesca Peralta, sopranos; Jeanne Gordon and Mary Kent, contraltos; Orville Harold, Francis Maclennan and Giordano Paltrinieri, tenors; Antonio Scotti and Millo Pico, baritones; and Charles Gallagher and Louis D'Angelo, basses. The conductor will be Carlo Peroni.

Several of these singers are familiar in St. Louis. Jeanne Gordon is the Canadian contralto whose Azucena and Amneris, both in singing and acting, were the feature of the recent engagement of the Creatore Opera Co. in this city, next to Creatore's conducting. She had then been on the stage only 10 weeks.

Francesca Peralta was soloist with the Symphony Orchestra at the first pair of regular concerts of the season just ended, and has sung in opera at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park. Orville Harold, if memory serves, sang here last with Mme. Melba in a recital at the Coliseum. Millo Pico has sung here more than once with the San Carlo Opera Co., and made his last St. Louis appearance in Homer Moore's "Louis XIV." Charles Gallagher has been a soloist at a Symphony Orchestra "pop" concert, and has sung here repeatedly in oratorio. Florence Easton and Francis Maclennan are of high station among American singers.

The company's first visit will be paid to Atlanta, after which it will travel to Shreveport, Houston, San Antonio, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia.

What Is the DUO-ART?

SUPPOSE you owned a Steinway piano on which Paderewski had played the great masterpieces of music—compositions of Liszt, Chopin, Beethoven, and all the other immortal composers. And suppose that, right in your own home, whenever you desired, this miraculous instrument would repeat these performances as the master himself had played them.

This the Duo-Art does.

REV. DR. LEE ON BOARD OF HOSPITAL IN FRANCE

Will Represent St. Louis in Direction of American Memorial Institution at Rheims.

The Rev. Dr. James L. Lee, chaplain of Barnes Hospital, has been invited by the directors of the American Memorial Hospital Committee to become a member of the Advisory Board of the American Memorial Hospital at Rheims, France, and has accepted the position. It is the object of the Hospital Committee to have all the larger cities in the United States represented on this board, and Dr. Lee has been asked to represent St. Louis.

The American Memorial Hospital at Rheims is in the center of the devastated region of France. Its purpose is to provide a fitting memorial to the American soldiers who gave their lives in the service of their country and who lie buried in France, and to stand as an evidence of the love and sympathy which united France and Amerca in the war.

The American Fund for French Wounded has given the necessary funds for the erection of the hospital building. The municipality of Rheims has given the site.

The scarred and battered Cathedral of Reims will overlook the hospital, which will stand in a region of ruins where there are no hospitals and, at this time, scarcely a place for the sick or the well to inhabit. Teh hospital building will cost $100,000, and will be one of the first structures of importance erected in the devastated regions. The project has the warm appreciation and support of the French Government.

It is desired that the sospital shall be representative of the whole United States. Endowments may be made either by individuals, or organizations or by communities. The bronze memorial tablets will be sculptural in design, and a careful record will be kept of contributors to endowments. The amount necessary for the endowment of a bed is $6,000. Only the income of this sum will be used. The principal will be invested in the United States, under the supervision of a trust company, and the revenue paid to the Board of Control of the hospital in France.

4 SQUADRONS TO SCOTT FIELD

Units Ordered to Proceed There Upon Arrival From Overseas.

Four observation squadrons of the Air Service, teh First, Twelfth, Fiftieth and Eighty-ninth, have been assigned to proceed to Scott Field, near Belleville, upon their arrival at Eastern ports from overseas. The First squadron is the oldest in the service, all of the earliest American flyers having received their training in it. Brg.-Gen. Benjamin D. Foulus of the Air Service, was its first commander, then as a lietenant.

Appeals are being made to young men to enlist at Scott Field. A recruit ship will be flown to Forest Park Tuesday at 9:30 a. m. and again at 4:30 p. m. Recruits will be carried back to the field in it, a "joy ride" of 26 miles.

You can find the house you are looking for through Post-Dispatch WANT ADS.

Will Address Credit Men.

Lewis E. Pierson of New York, a vice president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and former president of the American Bankers' Association, will address the meeting of the St. Louis Association of Credit Men tomorrow at 6 p. m. at the City Club on "Industrial Issues of the Times."

Machine Gunner of 89th Division Says Whole A. E. F., and No One Unit, Won War—Men in His Division "Not as Good Reporters."

E. J. Scally of D Company, 341st Machine Gun Battalion of the Eighty-ninth Division, in a letter to his mother, Mrs. E. Scally, 3438 Arsenal street, deplores the fact that certain units of the American expeditionary forces are being given more credit for the victory attained than others, and says that no single individual, unit or division was solely responsible for the defeat of Germany.

His letter was in reply to one written by his mother asking why the Eighty-ninth was not receiving the same recognition as other divisions. His reply, in part, reads:

"You ask why our division is receiving very little recognition. It is very simple. We of the Eighty-ninth are not as good reporters as the men of the Thirty-fifth.

"However, I would not care to be misunderstood. Not one man or one division over here but deserves full credit for the victory. Every mother's son over here had but one thought when he started after the Hun—the thought of the dear ones at home and a burning desire to end it all in the shortest possible time and get home again. The task has been accomplished. How? Every man put his shoulder to the wheel and pushed with every ounce of strength that God gave him.

"Each Performed His Task."

"Each individual, each unit, each division, went after the task assigned to it with vim. Some did not have so great a task assigned. But all know that only in the faithful discharge of every little duty alone lies the greatest success.

"It was only by faithful co-operation in every detail that the men of the American expeditionary forces accomplished the great objective.

"I am rather surprised that all space should be given to the Thirty-fifth, while, as a matter of fact, the Eighty-ninth is entitled to as much consideration. My own outfit, as well as every unit in the division, contains the names of St. Louis boys. Many are in hospitals, many have made the supreme sacrifice. True, it is a National Army division, composed mainly of drafted men, while the Thirty-fifth is a division mostly of National Guards. But why any distinction?

"The Government makes none. National Army, National Guards and regular army fought side by side with the true spirit of loyal sons of America. Where was the Eighty-ninth in the St. Mihiel drive? She had on her left the Forty-second (Rainbow) Division; on her right were the Marines. The other unit of the Fourth Corps was the First Division. Rather fast company for a green division. Did the Eighty-ninth make good? After the memorable Sept. 12, the Eighty-ninth was made made a division of shock troops.

"In the Meuse-Argonne drive the Eighty-ninth had the Marines on their left, with the Ninetieth on their right. According to an article captured from the Germans, they had warned their soldiers they were opposed by one of the best divisions in the American Army—the Eighty-ninth.

"As for solid facts, the Thirty-fifth landed May 11, 1918, and has made an official front line advance of 12½ kilometers, captured 13 officers, 768 men, 24 pieces of artillery and 85 machine guns. The record of the Eighty-ninth follows: Landed, June 21, 1918; made an official front line advance of 36 kilometers, captured 192 officers, 4869 men, 127 pieces of artillery and 455 machine guns.

Tells of Own Experiences.

"These figures can be considered and should be weighed only in the scale of tasks assigned and accomplished. Apparently the Eighty-ninth was given a bigger task. But the simple facts should not lessen the glory of any division, for, as I have said, each had a task assigned and it was only in the earnest effort of every man that the big job was accomplished. Hence equal honor should be given to each man, each unit and each division in the American Expeditionary Forces.

"If there is to be a remembrance in St. Louis to her loyal sons and daughters, she should not forget the 'Rose of No Man's Land,' the enlisted man, the National Guardsman and the drafted man."

The letter concluded with an account of Scally's personal experiences and the statement that German prisoners, captured during the course of a trench raid, said that they were ready to sacrifice an entire regiment to get one prisoner from the Eighty-ninth Division. They did not get the prisoner, he said.

VICTORY PAGEANT NEXT MONTH

Will Be Presented in Forest Park by Woman's Council.

A "Victory Pageant," expository of the universal American appreciation of the blessings of peace with victory, will be presented in the Municipal Theater at Forest Park the afternoon of May 8, by the St. Louis Woman's Council as part of the program of entertainment that will be offered by St. Louis women to the visiting delegates of the State Biennial convention of Woman's Clubs, in session here that week.

Miss Agnes Ruth Hoffinger of the St. Louis Parliamentary Club, will portray "Victory," the outstanding character in the pageant.

Child Dies From Hydrophobia.

The funeral of Robert Lowry, 6 years old, of 5820 Pershing avenue, who died Friday night at St. Luke's Hospital of hydrophobia resulting from a dog bite suffered on March 17, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the residence to Valhalla Cemetery.

Also Went Away Without a Pair of Crutches and a Note for $450—Memory Fails Him.

J. M. Gibbons, who is 79 years old and lives "somewhere over in Illinois," took a few toddies while visiting St. Louis Friday afternoon, and while going from bar to bar in the process, left $691.65, a note for $450, a suitcase and a pair of crutches lying on the bar of a saloon at 1841 Market street. It took the police two hours to run him down and give him his belongings.

When the police caught up with him, Gibbons was in the bar of the Portland Hotel, taking another one. He couldn't remember where he got the crutches, or whether he had ever used them. He was not entirely steady on his feet when the police found him, but this did not appear to be due to any defect. He didn't remember where he lived.

Charles E. Fitch, owner of the saloon where Gibbons left his things, turned them over to the police, and Gibbons was taken to the inebriate ward until the effect of the toddies died down.

Our Women Doctors in Balkans.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Nineteen American women doctors from the Women's Hospital at New York are assisting the American Red Cross in its work of caring for the sick and destitute in the Balkan States, said a report received at Red Cross headquarters today from Nish. A number of the women, it was said, have received decorations or been cited for conspicuous service among the soldiers and refugees. Dr. Dora E. Bowman, Kansas City, Mo., is assisting the Red Cross in Montnegro.

ARM OF SYMPHONY VIOLINIST HURT IN ROW WITH MOTORMAN

Ellis Levy Precipitates Altercation by Pocketing List of Witnesses of Accident.

Ellis Levy, a violinist, and Bert Thornton, a United Railways motorman, clashed over the possession of a list of witnesses who saw the street car hit Levy's automobile on Boyle avenue, Friday, and the violinist is nursing a sprained arm. The motorman was not hurt.

The machine of Levy, who is a first violinist in the Symphony Orchestra and lives at 4537 McPherson avenue, was flung against the automobile of Theodore Blonault, 1479 Washington avenue, by a Maryland car, which was going north.

Thornton, who lives at 1468 Blackstone avenue, said he took the names of the witnesses down in his memorandum book and passed it to Levy to get his . Levy, he said, calmly put the book in his pocket, averring that he would just keep it. The altercation followed. The men entered cross charges of peace disturbance.

DIES AFTER A COLLISION

U. R. Employe Succumbs to Injuries After Few Days.

Harry Lautch, 4251 Sarpy avenue, a lineman employed by the United Railways, died at St. John's Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered Wednesday, in front of 3100 South Grand avenue, when a street car knocked him from a trolley repair truck. He was 32 years old.

Before you build have your lumber dealer contractor architect tell you about

Bestwall TRADE MARK

instead of lath and plaster

The only alternative for lath and plaster which bears the Underwriters Laboratories label of approval.

GYPSUM UNDERWRITERS' INSPECTED LABORATORIES WALL BOARD

Your Lumber Dealer
will recommend Bestwall because he knows that if you buy it from him you will become a satisfied customer and a Bestwall booster.

Your Architect
who knows Bestwall will recommend it because it makes a better wall—will take any kind of decoration—will retain its appearance indefinitely—is fire-proof—damp-proof—warp-proof—and lasts as long as the house. Many architects have Bestwalled ceilings and walls in their own homes.

Contractors
like to use Bestwall because it is easily and quickly applied with nails, hammer and a saw and makes a first class job. No idle lathers waiting for the studding to be finished—no idle carpenters waiting for the plaster to dry before finishing the wood work.

Real Estate Men
specify Bestwall because it saves time—and time means money. There is no waiting for plaster to dry and so the house can be occupied weeks sooner.

In a large number of apartments the extra rents secured thru having the house ready for occupancy sooner sometimes amount to thousands of dollars.

SALESMEN
WANTED—Even our large road sales force cannot handle the exceptional Bestwall demand from dealers all over the country. So we like to hear from travelers with or without building material experience, who are interested in a "live" proposition.

BESTWALL is better than lath and plaster because it won't chip, crack, fall off or show lath stains. It is better than any wall board because it won't bulge, warp or shrink. There is no danger of falling ceilings—no unsightly cracked walls.

Bestwall is fire-proof—the only alternative for wood lath and plaster which bears the Underwriters Laboratories' label of approval. It is warp-proof and moisture-proof—a leaky roof or a broken radiator will not spoil a Bestwall ceiling. Bestwall takes any kind of decorations—paint, paper or calcimine—takes them better than lath and plaster does and the decorations last longer on Bestwall.

It is not necessary to use panel strips with Bestwall—you can put them on or leave them off, whichever you prefer. Your walls will be more pleasing, more lasting and more economical. And they'll be vermin and germ proof.

Ask your local lumber dealer, or call our St. Louis office, 302 Wright Bldg., Phone Olive 698.

DUCHESS ATTENDS DOUGHBOY MINSTRELS

Private's Invitation to Maid Brings Ruler of Luxemburg and Four Sisters.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DIEKIRCH, Luxemburg, April 25.—Royal women are just like other country girls in little Luxemburg, at least so far as the boys of the Thirty-third Division are concerned. When the division after the armistice settled down for an easy life in Luxemburg, Brigadier-General Edward L. King of Washington, commanding the Sixty-fifth Brigade, said to Maj. Albert L. Culbertson of Delavan, Ill., commanding the 123d Machine Gun Battalion, "Can't you take a few of these huskies of yours and organize a show to entertain the gang nights?"

A week later the "Blackface Minstrels" made their bow and eventually started on the road for a tour of the different Luxemburg villages, where the men were billeted, and a few days ago reached Colmarberg, where the 19-year-old Grand Duchess and her four royal sisters live in a summer palace.

After the rehearshal for the evening show the amateur actors wandered to a little lake near the town to se how the fishing was. Several native Luxemburg girls were already there and socially greeted the newcomers. The fishing seemed good and the girls talked good English, mentioning that they came from the royal palace nearby. "Come and see our show tonight," said Private Paul Pittges to one of them. "That will be lovely," declared the girl, the same as any American village maiden would do. "Bring all the other girls, too, for there is plenty of room for them," added Pittges, indicating the other fisher maidens.

"I am only a maid, but I will see whether they will come," said the girl, running away. "Yes, they will be very glad to come," she declared, when she returned. In a few minutes the boys went back to get their evening chow and prepare for the show.

Invitation to Royalty.

About the same time a dignified factotum appeared at the building used as a theater and with much formality informed Lieut. Francisco Ballentine of New York, director of the show that the Grand Duchess and the royal family, having accepted an invitation to attend the show, desired to know at what time it started. The prospect of royal visitors was almost too much for the lieutenant, who wildly appealed for advice to Col. Milton J. Foreman of Chicago, comanding the 122d Artillery, billeted in that area, and who was more or less acquainted with the Duchess. Col. Foreman being a former alderman who once wore a silk hat as a member of a committee receiving a visiting prince, is considered an authority on royal questions.

"An invitation to the royal family should be given only by the President of the United States or his military representative , the comamnder in chief of the expedition," said Col. Foreman.

"But this invitation was given to one of the palace maids and what is more, everybody is coming, so what shall we do? insisted Lieut. Ballentine.

Show Appreciated.

"If they were invited through a maid it isn't formal, so let them come and enjoy the show,," ruled Foreman.

Before the curtain was due to rise upon the badly awed troupe, the royal family filed in and took the front bench which had been reserved for them. Everybody in the audience stood at attention as instructed. A military escort and two Luxemburg gendarmes came as far as the door, where Private Pittges was stationed to receive the guests he had invited and escort them to their seats.

The Duchess and her sisters showed a thorough knowledge of English as soon as the show started, laughing and applauding enthusiastically at the jokes and other horse-play acts. A sketch in which Corp. William Farrar of Chicago impersonated a mule while a blackfaced driver explained the animal's deviltries threw the ruler into peals of laughter. After the show she insisted upon shaking hands with every member of the company.

TELEGRAMS USED AS MEANS TO DEFRAUD MOTHERS OF SOLDIERS

Mrs. Victor E. Williams Tells Post-Dispatch of Her Experience and That of Neighbor.

Apparent attempts to defraud mothers of soldiers by means of fake telegrams have been reported to the Post-Dispatch by Mrs. Victor E. Williams, 3304 Vista avenue.

Mrs. Williams received a telegram Monday from her son, Sergt. Victor E. Williams Jr. of C Battery, 129th Field Artillery, saying he had arrived in New York from overseas and needed some money. She telegraphed him the amount asked for. Wednesday noon she again heard from him by wire, and in the meantime had received a letter from him acknowledging receipt of the money. Thursday afternoon, to her surprise, a downtown telegraph office telephoned her a message, supposed to have been sent by her son from Camp Taylor, near Louisville, Ky., asking that $25 be wired to him.

Unable to understand the sudden transfer to Louisville, Mrs. Williams wired back: "If you need money wire your full name and your mother's maiden name." No reply was received, and she is convinced the message was an attempted fraud.

Mrs. Williams said that one of her neighbors, who has a son in the same regiment, had a similar experience nearly two weeks ago. She received a telegram in her son's name saying he had arrived in New York and wanted some money wired to him. Knowing the regiment was not scheduled to land until a week later she heeded the advice of friends and did not send the money.

VALLEY TRADERS' MOTTO IS, "WE MEAN BUSINESS"

New Association President Outlines Program for Making Midwest Serve Own Financial Needs.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 26.—When James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, came to Chicago this week to preside over the National Foreign Trade Council, one of his first questions was: "What is this Mississippi Valley Association? It has been sending me the most aggressive batch of we-mean-business talks I have ever seen."

He was told that the Mississippi Valley Association was a new organization in the country between the Allegheny and Rocky Mountains, determined to get a greater share of the profit and recognition due a section that produces 75 per cent of the nation's wealth and contains 52 per cent of its population.

"And the first to feel the hardness of this determination will be you fellows in the East and Congress," he was warned. The West is going to conduct more of its own financing, do more of its own exporting, do more of its own importing and do more demanding of Congress and less asking. That wasn't we-mean-business talk. It was we mean business."

What Merrick Said.

His informant was Harry H. Merrick, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, vice president of the Central Trust Co. of Chicago, first president of the Chicago branch of the National Security League, president of the Illinois Draft Boards and the man who drove more business into the one-day convention of the Mississippi Valley Association than the average convention accomplishes in two.

Ask Chicagoans who Merrick is and they tell this story:

The Black Hawk Division, the first containing Chicago men to return from overseas was to pass through Chicago to Camp Sherman for demobilization. Chicago telegraphed Secretary of War Baker asking to be permitted to entertain the Black Hawks and went into meeting to plan the reception. While still in session, the answer of Secretary Baker was received. "Regret to state division cannot detrain in Chicago."

Merrick got to his feet. Bang, went his fist on the table. In his peculiar manner of speaking under great feeling that sounds almost like a hiss, he said:

"By the gods, the Black Hawks will stop in Chicago." And 24 hours later they did.

Merrick was elected president of the Mississippi Valley Association last Wednesday. Almost his first announcement was: Your president wants no convention resolutions from this gathering. What he wants is resolutions that are orders. He will carry them out."

Later on he said: "Of all conventions in which I have participated in the last 15 years, I think this is the most remarkable. There have been all sorts of jealousies up and down the valley in all countries where there are men with red blood. That is the way they have gone forward. But today, only three months after we began to form this association in New Orleans, isn't it fine that St. Louis is here with 83 men, that there are 40 men from Minneapolis and St. Paul, that Kansas City is here and Louisville and Cincinnati, that Waterloo, Ia., sent 32 men and Denver came and Paris, Tex. Now that means that we are going to do this job and our 52 per cent of men in Congress are going to do what we tell them to do or there will be hell to pay and I hope it is hot."

A Driving Force.

That is the sort of driving force that is behind the Mississippi Valley Association. It is apparent, also, that the association itself is unwilling to be a sort of glorified Chamber of Commerce, but is intent on becoming a force and becoming a force quickly. It was decided that the first thing to do was to form a foreign exchange bank in the valley, powerful enough to give valley industry the same support and service in foreign trade that heretofore the valley apparently has believed is obtainable only in New York.

Notices were mailed out to valley bankers, notices of the sort that caused Farrell to exclaim. A bankers' conference was called for 9 o'clock on the day on which the association convention was to come to order at 10:30. When the bankers were assembled it was found that 90 had responded. A committee was appointed. There were 20 members, including men from New Orleans, St. Louis, Kansas City, Cincinnati, Des Moines, Louisville, Omaha, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Waterloo, Io., Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Kansas City.

The committee immediately went to work. Two days later it brought word to the board of directors that it had formulated a plan, appointed a committee to pledge stock and that the bank could be a reality in 30 days if necessary.

It was decided that the association shouldn't go ahead in the dark. The first thing to know was what the economic problems of the valley were and how best they could be dealt with. The usual thing would have been to give a speaker or two a place on a program to contribute a little to the free circulation of talk so common to conventions.

That wasn't Merrick's idea. Merrick had charge of this phase. He cast about for the best economist he could find and picked Dean David Kinley of the University of Illinois.

"You're drafted, get busy," he wired Kinley. "We want facts."

The result was that when the convention assembled, Dean Kinley was on hand with an exhaustive survey of the industrial transportation and agriculture problems of the valley in printed form, a copy for each delegate. He did not even read his report—"too little time and I see you're here for business," he said. He merely called attention to the fact that transportation was discussed by a vice president of a railroad, that other portions of the report were the result of expert investigation by a former head of the United States Reclamation Service, one of the most distinguished engineers in Chicago, an army officer who in private life was a known authority on railroad rates and others of their class.

When it came to information on lands to the South, the association was not willing to take the word of some book student of the subject. A delegation of 35 men was sent to Mexico to have a report ready for the convention. It was ready—a printed pamphlet, the consensus of the 35 on what was to be done by the valley in Mexico.

"We will send two similar delegations to South America and one to China," it was announced at the conclusion of the report.

Even John Barrett, director-general of the Pan-American Union, well known for his oratory, succumbed to the spell, shed all oratory and expounded brass tacks and figures.

F. Ernest Cramer of St. Louis had the news for the convention that a trading company, as necessary to the valley as a bank, was in the process of formation—a $5,000,000 institution ready for the participation of valley cities.

On Jan. 1 of this year, the Mississippi Valley Association had no being. The Chicago accomplishments were the result of work since that time.

The immediate undertaking for the next few weeks is a campaign for members. It is the aim of the association to enroll every commercial and civic organization in the valley, to gain several thousand representatives of business firms in or about to enter foreign commerce and to gain thousands of private citizens who feel an interest, aroused to the "Forward, Valley" movement.

It is not the intention to contsrict the activities of the associtaion. It is for all valley problems. Representatives of labor and agriculture have been named on the board of directors—George W. Perkins of Chicago, president of the International Cigarmakers' Union, is labor's representative. R. D. Bowen of Paris, Tex., secretary of the Cotton Growers' Association of the South, is the agriculturist.

"Go home and get to work," was the goodbye of Merrick to the 500 delegates.

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

Stories Gathered From Destroyer Fleet on Its Return From War

Ceaselessly on the Jump Chasing German Submarines or Convoying Troops Through Zones Infested by Them—Work and Glory Enough for All of Them.

NEW YORK, April 23.

CEASELESS vigil during long months of storm and wind and ice, each moment scanning the pitching seas and mist-dimmed horizon for the menacing periscope, living nervous hours day after day when no U-boat disturbed the waters, yet instantly at the guns to smash the undersea assassin when it did show itself.

That was the lot of the men on those destroyers that are now serene at anchor in the Hudson River, brass polished, decks cleaned, guns in dress trim. The navy's traditions have been upheld by them.

Some of the spirit with which these men maintained American ideals in European waters are conveyed in the subjoined paragraphs from notes made here and there by a correspondent for the Post-Dispatch who has visited several ships of the fleet and has talked with many of its men.

They account their gold stripe or stripes of service abroad as prizes of glory. And the destroyers whose funnels are marked with chevrons of service in Europe are the envy of the craft that didn't get abroad to show their mettle.

How necessary were these warships now in the Hudson to the naval program of the war is shown by the orders under which they operated In the 12-month that our vessels were a unit of the Grand Fleet the ships were never, with one or two exceptions, permitted to be in port longer than four hours. More than once a warship had to speed back to the open seas on sudden orders received as shortly as two hours after docking.

Always, 60 seconds to the minute, 60 minutes to the hour, all day, all night, week in and week out, month after month, constantly and eternally, these vessels that are now anchored in the river have had to be on the alert, in trim for immediate action. Gun crews were always standing by for battle. Decks were always cleared for action.

Hard Work for the Destroyer.

Particularly trying were the tasks assigned the destroyers. They were constantly on the go, nervously whirling hither and thither to the rescue of ships imperilled, hauling survivors back to port, darting around the Irish Coast to ferret out submarines.

After a tour of duty escorting troopship convoys, the destroyers were sent to port for overhauling and repairs. Seldom was this work completed, for there never failed to come a call for help from some vessel at sea.

The men on the dreadnoughts "lived the life of Reilly" compared with the hardships endured by the gobs of the low-lying and hard-pitching destroyers. Often the men had to lash themselves to the ships to avoid being washed overboard. Heavy woolen underwear, wind and rain proof trousers and jackets, rubber sea boots and the like comprised the uniforms.

The sailors on the battleships could sit down with a fair degree of comfort to mess tables for chow. The gob aboard the destroyer often had to snatch a bit of cold meat from a can, gulp down a swallow of cold coffee and call it a meal, hanging on with one hand to brace himself against the ship's rolling. Cold soup—also in cans—was a luxury.

Sleep, when it was possible on the destroyers, was in shifts of four hours. The wartime watches through day and night called for "two hours on and four hours off." They didn't think of changing clothing until the ship tied up again at port.

U. S. Work Against Submarines.

Yet, as solace for these trying months, the personnel of the destroyer force has the knowledge that a total of 40 submarines were sunk by allied craft after we entered the war, including scores made by vessels flying the Stars and Stripes.

Except as obtained from a coastal view, few of the men on the destroyers have seen much of Europe. Leaves were so few and brief as to make inland sightseeing trips impossible.

When not hunting U-boats or rescuing survivors, the destroyers escorted transports. Six would go to sea together, meeting the transport convoys about 300 miles from England or France. Then the six destroyers would form into a V-shaped protection in front of the troop ships. Frequently the destroyers flung back dense billows of smoke, screening the precious transports from view. When a periscope was spotted by a lookout, the transports, which had been zigzagging, were ordered to proceed at full speed in further zigzag, while the destroyers remained behind to spank the bogey boats of the under sea.

Zigzagging, Pitching, Rolling.

The ordinary convoy trip for the destroyers was a five-day cruise, zigzagging, pitching, rolling all the time. On one trip last summer 10 destroyers went out together from an English port. In the night they received a number of messages that ships had been torpedoed. Five destroyers rushed to the aid of survivors, the others changing course to intercept the stricken convoy.

At 8 o'clock in the morning, just as the convoy was sighted, the destroyers also sighted a U-boat on the surface ahead. A barrage was laid with uncertain result. But the German disappeared. The convoy reported the loss of an American ship. Later in the day the survivors of a torpedoed French cruiser were picked up.

On the afternoon of the next day the destroyer Tucker sank or badly damaged a submarine. In the next two days there were four U-boat attacks on the convoy. The destroyers now in the Hudson defeated each attack with depth charges. In one of those attacks two transports, rated at 18 knots speed, almost outran a destroyer, making 20 knots. "She's raising clouds of dust," remarked a destroyer sailor.

The McCall and the Sterett, two destroyers, were escorting an oil tanker when the McCall saw a tug five miles off the bow. Just then the Sterett spotted a periscope astern and dropped six charges over the boche, remaining over the place where the periscope had showed for 15 minutes, dropping a barrage of 15 charges. The foe, poking his mechanical eye out of the waves for another squint, directly in the center of the barrage area, the Sterett got real mad and chased full speed ahead in the direction the periscope wake had indicated.

Sinking 'Em by Arithmetic.

It became evident after a time that Fritz, shoving the periscope up brazenly for a hasty glance, would change course when the Yankee put on more gas and would linger around lazily when the Sterett slackened. Computations were made of the submarine's knotage, the Sterett's speed and the time required for the submarine's oil bubble to reach the surface. These computations enabled the Americans to determine how far ahead of the visible wake the enemy was at any time. However, clever maneuvering by the German commander fooled the Sterett time and again, until only two of the destroyer's 33-depth charges remained at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, nine hours after the scrap began. At night the Sterett lost track of the sub, but caught it again in the morning by the smell of oil. "Stand by to ram!" went the command around the Sterett. She missed the U-boat by 20 feet. A moment later the conning tower appeared astern, and this time the U-boat was hammered with a six-inch gun that left nothing of the submarine but fragments of steel and patches of oil.

WHAT THE PEACE COUNCIL HAS DONE

Simonds Says It Has Achieved Stern But Just Results in Spirit of Compromise

Writer Says It Is False to Say President Has Taken Europe by the Throat to Enforce His Demands or That He Has Sacrificed Any of His Points to Gain His End.

Equally Is It Untrue to Call It an American, a French or a British Peace Since It Is a Little of Each—France Gets Ample Guaranty of Security.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,

Author of "The Great War" and "They Shall Not Pass."

PARIS, April 18.

ONE week ago I reviewed the circumstances of the greatest crisis of the Paris conference, and discussed the fashion in which the British Prime Minister was compelled by public sentiment in his own country to change front and support the legitimate claims of France. It remains now to indicate the successive steps by which we have reached what must be regarded on the whole as a thoroughly satisfactory accommodation of the differences of opinion which temporarily prevented progress towards peace.

At all times, it was certain that the basis of real peace must be the security of France, and no one so eloquently stated this necessity as the President himself in one of his earlier speeches in France. But in the progress of negotiations the settlement of the just claims of France was postponed, while English and American purposes were discussed and acted upon. Thus the transfer of German colonies to Great Britain under a mandatory system, and the formulation of the principles of the league of nations, which, under Mr. Wilson's guidance, comprehended American desires, had reached an almost permanent settlement, while France found herself without any adequate assurance of reparations for devastations in her territories, relief from the immense burden of pensions placed upon her finances by the German attack and what was of even more importance to guarantee against future attack by Germany.

Until these things were settled satisfactorily to France, there could be no prospect of peace and no prospect of settlement. Mr. Wilson, with his attention fixed upon the league of nations, was perhaps slow to understand that no French, nor for that matter British, Government could endure which placed upon French and British taxpayers all the burden of paying for the German attack, save that portion immediately comprehended in reparations for devastations.

League of Nations Fortified

We had for a week a natural collision between Mr. Wilson's idealistic conception of a peaceful settlement under the league of nations, which would be self-guaranteeing, the French demand for a settlement which should be guaranteed by the allies of France in the last war, and the English attitude, which lacked coherence, but seemed to incline rather to Mr. Wilson than to the French.

As I pointed out last week, the voice of the English people suddenly made itself heard, compelling the British Prime Minister to take his stand with the French, restoring the situation in which the rights of the French and the aspirations of the Americans could both find an equal place in the treaty of peace. It now remains to set forth the compromises out of which is coming assurance of agreement and invitation to the Germans to come to Versailles.

Substantially, this is what has been agreed upon. Mr. Wilson's league of nations, with its amendment designed to meet American criticism, has been accepted by the Paris conference, but this league of nations settlement has been fortified by two guarantees—one precise, the other contingent. The British have agreed that if the Germans shall violate the terms of peace as they have now been agreed upon and send troops across the Rhine, the British army will move forth to the continent to the support of France. Mr. Wilson has promised to appeal to the American Senate to give a similar pledge for America. He has not gone outside of his constitutional rights. He has made no promise which would subject him to criticism. He has done nothing but promise to place the situation before the Senate and ask it to agree to underwrite the treaty to be designed by the Germans in a fashion which the British have already promised to underwrite it.

No Sacrifice by the President

We have, thus, at least two conditions of peace, essential in lay minds, brought into harmony. We have the American idea, that is, President Wilson's conception of the league of nations, which would be a guarantee against war adopted in accordance with his desire by the Paris conference and bound to be included in the treaty of peace. We have, on the other hand, recognition of the French demand that there should be assurance, in fact, against German aggression, that France, as the outpost of civilization, should have something more than another scrap of paper. We have the pledge of England to support France at the moment of any new attack growing out of Germany's bad faith in observing the terms of this treaty, and we have the American President pledged to use his great influence in his own country to procure a similar American gauarantee.

IT is not true, as has been asserted over and over again, that Mr. Wilson has taken Europe by the throat and compelled it to lay aside its selfish and chauvinistic aims and accept American idealism. It is not true that Europe has forced Mr. Wilson to compromise every principle or any essential principle which he advocated in America and came to Europe to champion. The terms which Germany will receive are not American terms or French or British terms. They do not represent personal triumph for anyone of the Big Four, but they contain substantial recognition of the legitimate claims of each of the four on behalf of his own country. For those who believe in the League of Nations as the ultimate solution of international relations, the treaty of peace must represent a long forward step. To those who believe that in the presence of the Germans no scrap of paper, however sacred, can avail unless it has a military guarantee, the commitment of the British Prime Minister and the conditional pledge of the American President will carry corresponding reassurances. The treaty which the Germans will be asked to sign on April 25 is not a treaty of violence. It creates no new Alsace-Lorraine, it recognizes the just rights of several peoples hitherto enslaved by the Germans, but it deprives Germany of no German populations permanently, it requires only partial payment for the material injuries Germany has done and it leaves Germany free to resume her own life and her true pathway of greatness if she chooses. The true measure of the justice and moderation of the peace terms is the peace imposed upon Russia at Brest-Litovsk and upon Rumania at Bucharest only a little more than a year ago.—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

It will be said, and has been said already in quarters hostile to the President, that he has sacrificed his principles and made compromises in contravention of his 14 points, but viewed from Paris this is hardly a fair criticism. He has, in fact, seen the necessity of interpreting his 14 points,, which were in themselves abstract and academic in the light of the realities of the European situation. He has avoided destroying the chance of real peace by insisting on a too literal translation of his previous utterances, a translation urged against him at least once by the British Prime Minister, whose hostility to the creation of a real Poland has been one of the most amazing circumstances of the whole conference.

At all times the President has consistently fought for his 14 points. The treaty which will be formulated contains no essential break with those principles, but in the end he has wisely and generously recognized the special claims of France and the justice of the French demand for other assurance than that supplied by the league of nations against German attack during the period in which the world would have to discover whether Germany is to follow new pathways or return to the old.

Fate of Europe in Settlement

And so, after four months of debate and five and a half months after the armistice, the Germans are to come to Versailles to learn their fate, and locked up with their fate is the fate of Europe for the future, for we have come to one more of the historic settlements of Europe, like those of Westphalia, Utrecht and Vienna. As Europe at the beginning of the eighteenth century, and again at the beginning of the nineteenth century, reorganized itself after a successful repelling of a French attack, she has now to reorganize herself after a German attack, which aimed at world domination, predicated by European hegemony. This settlement carries with it five distinct phases. Germany is to be deprived of the territories seized by her in other wars of aggression and held against the will of their inhabitants. She is to be disarmed on land and sea, and subjected to regulations designed to prevent new aggression. She is to be compelled to repay the costs of war in destruction to property and, in part, to life. In addition, she is to lose her colonies outside of Europe, colonies in which she has expressed the same spirit of savagery and brutality which marked her European conquests in the recent war.

To these terms which affect Germany alone there are to be added the provisions which create the league of nations, which is designed to be the vehicle for international intercourse in the future and the tribunal in which international disputes will be settled without war. Behind the league of nations covenant will stand the allied strength of Great Britain, France, and, presumably, Italy, and, if Congress shall assent, of the United States also, so that if Germany refuses to regard the moral forces of the league of nations, she will be confronted by the military force of the liberal nations.

Versailles Peace One of Compromise

Like every peace that has ever been made, the peace of Versailles will represent compromises, but more than any peace that has ever been made in the past, it will also represent the earnest desire of the nations making it to found their decisions upon justice, and fortify them by proper recognition of the rights of the various races. No European territory will be taken from Germany to which her claim is valid for the profit of any of the great Powers who have combined to conquer her. Alsace-Lorraine is French again, but the French moral claim to these provinces has never been disputed save by Germany. The Saar coal district, half of which was once French, has been erected into an independent territory like Luxembourg, simply to provide reparation to France for the destruction of her own coal regions and the return of the territory to Germany after 15 years is assured if the inhabitants so desire. Aside from these changes, Germany will lose a tiny region inhabited by Danes in Schleswig and most, but not all, of the territory which Prussia stole from Poland in the successive partitions. In all of her wars, Prussia has taken territory inhabited by people who did not wish to be Prussian. In this new peace the enemies of Germany, although victorious, have declined to follow even German precedents. Whatever else is to be said of territorial changes in Europe, so far as they affect Germany it cannot be argued that they are founded upon injustice or a refusal to recognize German rights.

A Stern but Just Peace

In the matter of financial reparations Germany will have to pay as much as she can of the costs of the war, but the maximum sum that has yet been aimed at is $30,000,000,000, and hardly exceeds the conservatives estimate of what it would cost to restore the devastated areas of France. As a consequence of the German attack, French and British taxpayers will still have enormous burdens to bear for many years to come. No indemnity, such as Germany exacted from France in 1871, will be asked of the nation which deliberately and wantonly brought all the destruction of the present war and carried fire and sword into Northern France and Belgium for the express purpose of wrecking the industrial life of this region and thus increasing that of Germany. On the side of disarming Germany, much has been written into the treaty, but little effective work has been done. We have fixed the army of Germany at 100,000, and we have taken away her ships, but we have provided no machinery for compelling Germany to stay disarmed if she chooses to imitate the example of Prussia after Tilsit, and there is frank recognition that all efforts to limit German armament can have but a temporary effect.

As to the military barrier of the Rhine, the Paris conference has decided that all fortifications along the river shall be razed, that the allied armies shall occupy the left bank and bridgeheads during a certain period of time, contingent upon Germany's observations of her obligations under the treaty of peace, but a guarantee for the preservation of this military barrier must be found in the British pledges to give military aid to France whenever Germany shall send troops against it. Even this guarantee may prove insufficient if the United States fails to give a similar promise.

It is an idle thing and a dangerous thing to attempt to interpret the decisions of the Paris conference in terms of personal or national victory. It is also an inaccurate thing. The three great nations who have fought Germany, assembled in conference, have naturally presented different and at points conflicting views. But in the end compromise has been reached. Mr. Wilson has recognized the right of France to some other guarantee in addition to that of the league of nations which Mr. Wilson has advocated. The British, while by the elimination of the German fleet securing an insurance against a new German menace, have by supporting both American and French claims at various points, contributed to preserving the more essential contentions of each.

Odd Stories About German Officers Told by Mayor of Louvain

One, Who Was Ready to Shoot Every Man in City, Demanded That Guinea Pigs Be Given Back to Belgian Children—Another Insisted That Street Cars Resume Operation Though Germans Had Wrecked Equipment.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

AFTER four years of enforced contact with the German military mind. Dr. Albert Nerincx, acting Burgomaster of Louvain, Belgium, came to the conclusion which he expressed while in St. Louis Wednesday:

"We Belgians could never had stood it, but for our sense of humor and our consciousness of the superiority of our civilization."

MAYOR NERINCX.

Before he was burgomaster, Dr. Nerincx was professor of law in the famous old University of Louvain, which the Germans destroyed by fire on the night of Aug. 25, 1914. And in his service as official spokesman of the people of Louvain, he found that his rank of professor commanded a respect among the German private soldiers, which was not accorded to him as Mayor of the prostrate city.

"I learned," he said, "that the easiest way to get about the streets without interference from German soldiers was to tell them, in German that I was a professor in the university. They would then say respectfully, 'Jawohl, Herr Professor,' and would let me pass.

"But what about the university professors of Germany, the men who had such ascendancy over the minds of these soldiers? What about those 93 professors, celebrated scientists among them, who signed a document declaring that the 'bombardment of Louvain' was a necessary war measure?

Truth About Bombardment.

"The fact was, as the whole world knows, that the 'bombardment' of Louvain was an inside affair exclusively. It was conducted, not with artillery from a distance, but with gasoline, kerosene and incendiary tablets, for the burning of residences and places of business, the university and cathedral, and with dynamite for blowing safes. These incendiaries and safeblowers were German soldiers, under the direction of German officers.

"The declaration of these 93 professors still stands to their shame. Some of them said, later, that they regretted having signed it, and that they had accepted the statement of the military authorities for the things to which they gave their names. But not one of them had the courage to withdraw his name from the list of signers.

Vain German Regrets.

"German officers, in the latter part of the war, told me that they 'would have given anything' if the destruction of the university library had not taken place. Prince Ratibor, who held a position under the German Government in Brussels, inspected the university ruins in my company, and said to me that, whenever a fund should be raised to rebuild the university, we could get plenty of subscriptions in Germany."

But the usual attitude of the German officer, Dr. Nerincx found, was that expressed in the reply which was frequently made to his complaints as to the acts of soldiers. This reply was, Das ist festgestellt" (That is settled). This formula, he said, was uttered by army officers as regularly and mechanically as the formula of the German private soldier, who, while looting and burning, would say, "Man hat geschossen. (Someone has fired a shot).

In an interview at the Westmoreland place home of his host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus, and in his public talks, at the City Club and St. Louis University, Dr. Nerincx told of the German entrance into Louvain, Aug. 9, 1914, the five days of comparative quiet, the day of suspense, when the city's impending fate was known to German officers in other parts of Belgium, and of the burnings and slaughter which began Tuesday night, the 25th, and lasted until Sunday.

During the latter period, Dr. Nerincx was one of a small group of university professors and medical men who remained in Louvain, in spite of an official German warning that the city was to be bombarded, and cared for 240 wounded and sick persons in St. Thomas' Hospital, whom it was impossible to remove. The threat of bombardment was not carried out, although the German military authorities, to account for the destruction of 1100 houses in Louvain, long persisted in the fiction that the city had been bombarded.

"On Sunday, Aug. 30," Dr. Nerincx related, "after the German soldiers had drunk, by a German official estimate, 35,000 quarts of wine, they were too drunk to continue the looting for the time being.

"The streets of Louvain were piled with debris, in some places 20 feet high—the fallen walls of burned houses. The water mains, opened by the fire, were running, and it was useless to pump more water to the water tower until we could stop the hundreds of breaks.

"Some of us held a council of war, and we decided that something must be done, or as soon as the soldiers got over their drunk, the looting would be resumed.

After the German Orgy.

"So we conferred with the military command, and we promised to administer the city, on condition that there should be no more burning and looting. This was agreed to, and the agreement was printed on handbills, and was sent out through the country, wherever our people had scattered after the order to vacate the city before the bombardment which never took place.

"As the people read these bills, they began to return to Louvain, and we started the slow work of putting the city in order. It took months. I served as burgomaster, and a number of others who had stayed for the 'bombardment' acted as the Notables—a term of municipal office in our country.

"There, first of all, were scores of dead horses, whose bodies had lain in the August sun for days, to be disposed of. Then the water pipes must be repaired, so that there could be drinking water again. The whole city was dependent on a few wells.

"The bodies of the citizens who had been slaughtered in the square adjoining the railroad station were dumped, side by side, in a shallow ditch dug at the foot of the Van de Weyer monument in the square. Not until the middle of January were we permitted to remove the thin covering of sand that lay over these bodies and give them Christian burial.

"The pretext on which we had to seek permission to remove the bodies was that, in the place where they were, they would be dangrous to the

STORIES TOLD OF THE DESTROYER SERVICE IN WAR

Olympic, in company of several other Yankee destroyers, in December, 1917, the Davis sighted a submarine coming up ahead. Before the Davis could fire, the crew of the U-boat came on deck and showed evidence of desiring to surrender. The U-boat commander explained that he had been preparing to attack the mighty Olympic, which was running at high speed and zigzagging. But the troop carried suddenly swerved toward the U-boat, which attempted to dive under the Olympic's side. One of the liner's propellers ripped open the entire side of the submarine. The U-boat sank shortly after her officers and crew surrendered.

The Cassin's Misfortune.

The destroyer Cassin was not so fortunate. She sighted a U-boat several miles away on the surface off Ireland in October, 1917. The Cassin made speed toward it, but the German submerged. A torpedo came at the Cassin, broaching and making a surface run. The Cassin's rudder was put over sharply to swing her stern clear. The torpedo suddenly broached and fell off to the right, striking the Cassin while still in the air. The last 30 feet of the Cassin's stern were taken away by the explosion, including the rudder and both propellers. The submarine departed immediately, and the Cassin managed to keep afloat until aid came. She was towed to drydock. In a few weeks she was out chasing submarines again.

The Fanning was the first American destroyer to capture a submarine. While a convoy was forming off the Irish coast, in November, 1917, the Fanning dropped depth charges on sighting a periscope. The explosions injured the enemy so badly that she was shortly out of control, the skipper finally coming to the surface. Thinking the U-boat was about to attack, the destroyer Nicholson attempted to ram. The U-boat plunged and avoided the ramming, but had to come up again instantly, this time the officers and crew making haste to indicate their surrender. The Fanning took them aboard and tried to tow the U-boat to port. But two of the submarine crew had opened the seacocks and it sank in a few minutes.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent asked an ex-soldier gob on the Nevada why he had turned sailorman. He replied: "There aren't any filthy trenches with cooties on a battleship. Besides you get three square meals a day. In France we sometimes went days with only one meal a day. The ship is clean, and, besides you don't get chased around from one billet to another; you get to feel homey."

public health after the winter should end.

"When I was taken before the German officer who had the power to grant this permission, I represented, as best I could, the need, for sanitary reasons, that the bodies should be removed and buried.

"He seemed to be impressed by this argument. 'But,' he asked, 'what about the impression on our troops? Our soldiers who come here must see evidence of the revolt of Louvain, and its punishment.'

"'Excellency,' I replied, "that is not necessary. All the world knows what was done in Louvain, and if your soldiers need to have evidence of the number of dead, they can go to our cemetery, where they may see the fresh white crosses over rows of civilian graves.'

Bodies Bore Bayonet Thrusts.

"There were 37 bodies removed from the station square. Those bodies which were still recognizable bore traces of bayonet wounds. Among them were the bodies of two women and a boy of 15 years.

"Including these 37, the number of those slaughtered in all parts of Louvain, whose bodies were found in the streets or in the cellars of houses, was more than 200.

"Although it was agreed that the burning of houses should cease, the Fifty-third battery of Landwehr burned several more houses, and when an officer from headquarters went to see about it, he was driven away. The soldiers, in all these cases said that the body of a German soldier, with the eyes torn out and the hands cut off, had been found in the basement of the house. The mutilation described was the same in each case. No body was ever shown, and it was always declared that the body had been buried without notice to headquarters.

"A new local commander came in October. I had advance information about him. 'He is very stern,' I was told. 'Don't argue matters with him. Say as little to him as possible, for your own good and that of the people."

"Well, the first communication which I got from this commander gave a measure of the mixture of cheap sentimentality and cruelty in the German military character.

Queer Sentimentality.

"'In the house where I am staying,' he wrote, 'I have found two guinea pigs. I presume these to be pets of the family living in this house. As I myself know of the fondness of children for their pet animals, I have given orders that these guinea pigs shall not be interfered with.

"'These animals will be kept here until 8 o'clock tomorrow morning, at the expense of the German army. At that time, I command you to have them removed, and to notify the owner to get them.'

"I obeyed the command. I sent for the guinea pigs at the hour specified, and had them taken to the uni-

Is It Fair to Make Comparisons?

Without comparisons we could not know values. We say a thing is good or bad, better or best, poorly made or well made, ordinary or distinctive, because we compare the one with the other.

By comparing we gain knowledge, we protect ourselves from errors in judgment, and in the market place we save money.

You have been reading in the national periodicals about certain superiorities of material, invention and design in the Waltham Watch. These superiorities are being demonstrated by comparison. We have made statements, claiming the Waltham Watch to be superior to the Swiss watch, and in many respects superior to any watch in the world. Is this fair?

This is an age of enlightenment — we want to know — to know for certain. When we therefore take the mystery out of the "works" of a watch — explain each part — in what and wherein it is superior — why it is so — are we not doing every prospective watch buyer a real service — a profitable and protective favor?

Watches look alike — but to buy a watch upon looks alone is poor business. A watch cannot be any better than its "works." And because the Waltham Watch can frankly and truthfully claim leadership in material and invention, in those advancements well known to skilled horologists, but necessarily hidden in the works — because of these distinctions — why shouldn't we tell the people all about them?

It is not a question of competition, but of information; not a subject for hearsay or prejudice, but for facts. We believe that taking the public into our confidence, throwing the door wide open, is good business. At least, it is honest business.

It is time to sweep vague ideas out of the watch industry. If a better watch is made at Waltham than in Switzerland, or anywhere else in the world for that matter, let us say so, and prove it.

For instance, the hairspring is the brain of the watch. The Breguet, or overcoil (named for its inventor, a famous old watchmaker), is used on every Waltham watch. And the most important part of the complete operation in making a hairspring is the forming and tempering of this Breguet overcoil.

At Waltham, instead of being formed or bent by hand as a separate operation, the entire completed hairspring is formed at one and the same time, after which it is hardened and tempered in form — an exclusive Waltham invention. Indeed, no other watchmaker in the world claims this perfect method of making the Breguet hairspring — not even Breguet himself.

The Swiss watch has a hairspring that is first formed in the flat, then hardened and tempered in the flat. Then the outercoil is bent to form the Breguet overcoil, which, if the flat spring were as hard as the Waltham and properly tempered like the Waltham hairspring, it could not be bent to correct form and would be liable to break in the attempt.

Therefore in this vital part, upon which largely depends the time-keeping quality of the watch, we see by comparison where Waltham excels, but you would not know this unless we told you.

Go to any Waltham dealer — and that means the leading jewelers in this city — and he will show you Waltham Watches ranging in price, for gentlemen, from the Cadet Strap Watch, with gold covered back, at $22 up to the Waltham Premier Maximus at $530. And, for ladies, the Jewel Series from $31.50 upward to that exquisite watch (its movement is actually smaller than a dime in diameter) which sells from $150 to $1,000 or more — according to the case.

Be sure to follow closely the remaining advertisements in this series. They will make many more comparative statements — and give you facts which it is to your interest to know before investing in a watch.

How Fat Folks Reduce Weight

Many are Losing Several Pounds a Month

Fat persons, particularly those from ten to sixty pounds above normal weight, will be interested to learn that they may reduce their weight without starvation diet or tiresome exercise.

This can best be done by getting plenty of fresh air, by breathing deeply and by taking a few drops of oil of korein four times a day, also in following the other simple rules that come with the box.

Oil of korein may be obtained from any good druggist in capsule form. Even a few days' treatment is likely to show a pleasing reduction in weight. The step becomes lighter, the flesh more firm, the skin smoother in appearance; work seems easier and a more buoyant feeling takes possession of the whole body and mind as superfluous, unhealthy fat disappears.

If you are overstout and have tried various methods of fat reduction in vain you may now be very thankful at having found a genuine system. It is safe, pleasant and healthful.—ADV.

versity laboratory, where they did their part later on.

"The new commander sent for me, the same day, and made a talk which was designed to impress me with the qualities of which I had heard.

" 'You will perceive the silver plate here,' he said, pointing to the household plate, which was on display. 'It must stay here,' he continued. 'There is no risk—it is under the care of a German officer.'

"This was very reassuring, as I knew of the excellent care which German officers and soldiers had taken of silver plate and everything else which could be carried away and shipped to Germany.

"Then he said, 'I have here cavalry, infantry, artillery and machine guns. If anything happens in this town, I will shoot everyone in sight, and will destroy the town.'

"Resuscitating City's Economic Life"

" 'Certainly, Excellency,' I replied. 'We have been through that once. We know you can do what you say, and that you will probably do it. Now, what we are trying to do is to restore this city. We wish to get its streets clear, its water and light service revived, and to make the town inhabitable once more. I mention these things, merely because I hope that, after you have had us all shot, you will take care of the city.'

"Afterward, I learned that he said, 'I like that man. He means what he says.'

"At another time I was summoned at night before the military commander, who informed me, with great show of pride, that he had just been appointed District by his majesty, the Emperor, this appointment being a part of the parceling of Belgium into German administrative districts.

"The information left me cold, and I asked what, if anything, was desired of me. Then the new District Chief informed me that, by the Emperor's especial command, he must endeavor to 'resuscitate the economic life' of the district.

"I fear I displayed no enthusiasm. At that very time the Germans were systematically looting our factories, shipping the machinery to Germany, and handing the owners requisition blanks calling for payment for so many tons of 'scrap iron.' They were destroying what they could not carry away, razing walls and blowing up concrete foundations, so that the eventual economic recovery might be as slow as possible. Then they talked of resuscitating our economic life.

Wanted Street Cars to Run.

"I asked again just what was desired of me, and he then got to the point. His idea of 'resuscitating' Louvain economically was that the street cars should be started to running again.

"I replied that I did not control the street car service, that it was owned by a private company. Its property, like everything else in Louvain, had been wrecked and looted, and its owners estimated that it would take 600,000 marks ($150,000) to restore it to a condition for doing business. An especial difficulty, I suggested, would be getting copper wire, the trolley wires having been part of the Germans' loot.

"He did not seem to take my objections seriously, and asked me why copper wire was necessary. 'The power can be transmitted through the rails,' he said. I thought he was jesting, but I learned afterward that he really knew no better. He was a cavalry officer who had hardly been outside his barracks before the war.

"So he continued to insist that I, as burgomaster, ought to see to it that the cars were started to running, although street car service was, of all things, what Louvain then needed least. The people had nothing to do, no occasion to go anywhere, and no desire to go anywhere, and were not allowed to go out after dark, and our compact little city covered only about 1000 acres. Most of our people had a hard enough time getting enough centimes to buy bread, without paying street car fare.

Impressed by Quaint Argument.

"My final argument was, 'Suppose, excellency, that a street car has an accident and gets stuck in one of our narrow streets, when an artillery battery has to go past without delay. Would not that tend to make trouble for your excellency?'

"This argument seemed to make an impression. I was dismissed, and the demand for street car service was not renewed.

"Early in November I received a communication from a Lieutenant-Colonel, containing a long description of his dog, which he had brought from Germany, and which had been 'wrongfully captured.' On the occasion of the dog's first 'capture,' he had returned, but without his collar, and with a piece of rope about his neck. This was proof that he had been 'wrongfully captured.' The officer had kept him indoors several days, and as soon as he let him go out, he had been 'wrongfully captured' again.

" 'The dog,' his communication read, 'had a high value, not less than 120 marks, besides which it was very close to my heart. For this reason I must require that your city replace my dog, or pay me its value.'

"That was a sample of the kind of communications that we used to get, and were strictly required to answer. Our salvation, in those cases, was that the officer was usually moved to some other place within a short time. They would keep writing back, repeating their demands, but that didn't worry us, after they themselves were out of sight.'

Abuse Continued to the Last.

"The policy of harsh, arbitrary acts and made-to-order explanations continued to the last. After the armistice, and when the Germans were awaiting orders to leave, the German commander planted machine guns in the window of the fine residence which he and his predecessors had occupied, without paying rent, for four years, and dug a trench in front of the house. The story was then spread among the soldiers that the people had plotted to massacre them, and that 500 rifles had been placed, for that purpose, in the house

(ASSOCIATED PRESS DISPATCH)

NEW YORK, December 31.—Accused of having manufactured and sold to influenza sufferers thousands of boxes of aspirin tablets, principally composed of talcum powder, Joseph M. Turkey, head of the Verandah Chemical company, of Brooklyn, was found guilty yesterday of violation of the sanitary code and sentenced to three years in prison with a fine of $500. The sentence was the most severe ever imposed in the country for such an offense.

And You Wake Up With Beautifully Curly Hair!

(Town Tattler)

This is a secret that will, I know, be appreciated by my lady who dislikes the tedious and "nervous" task of twisting her locks around a heated iron, perhaps singeing the hair, burning off the ends, and blistering fingers or scalp in the operation. From any druggist procure a few ounces of pure liquid silmerine and at night pour a little onto a clean toothbrush and draw this down the full length of the hair. A simple thing to do, but remarkably effectual, as will be apparent in the morning.

The hair will have a wonderfully soft, fluffy curliness, much more natural looking, glossier and livelier in appearance than where a waving iron has been used. Silmerine doesn't make the hair sticky or greasy, and there will be no trouble doing it up in any style desired—Olga Ormsbee.—ADV.

Famo Grows New Hair

It Dissolves Dandruff and Kills the Disease that Kills the Hair

Science has learned that Seborrhea produces the bacilli of dandruff.

And it is known also, now, that dandruff does produce baldness.

In Famo, a well known laboratory has founded a formula which destroys Seborrhea.

Constant application of Famo grows new, healthy hair by keeping the scalp in a state of perfect health.

And although every other person has Seborrhea, which is as deadly to the hair as Pyorrhea is to the teeth, you need no longer be afraid of this plague to baldness.

It not only dissolves dandruff, the cause of baldness—it actually kills the germ that produces the dandruff.

Famo contains no alcohol.

The evaporation of alcohol on the scalp dries out the natural oil of the hair. It hastens grayness.

Famo penetrates and nourishes the roots of the hair.

It aids nature to improve the natural lustre and waviness of your hair — and quicken its growth.

Try Famo today on your scalp. Note how quickly the dandruff dissolves and disappears.

And how much it improves the natural sheen and texture of your hair in the first few treatments.

A thirty-five cent bottle will start you on the road to hair health.

But you will find it more convenient and economical to buy the extra generous size at a dollar.

You will find Famo on sale at all toilet goods counters and applications at the better barber shops.

If your dealer hasn't Famo in stock he will be glad to order it for you.

Your money will be returned if you are not satisfied.

Seborrhea is the medical name for a morbidly increased flow from the sebaceous glands of the scalp. The seborrhea excretion forms in scales or flakes and is commonly known as dandruff.

United States Commissioner General of Immigration Hon. Anthony Caminetti Tells Why He Uses Nuxated Iron

To Create Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

Despite His 64 Years, He Is Today More Active and Alert Than Many a Younger Man.

Former Health Commissioner Wm. R. Kerr, of Chicago, Says He Believes

Nuxated Iron Should Be Prescribed by Every Physician and Used in Every Hospital in This Country.

Despite his 64 years and a life which calls him to all parts of the country in all climates and all seasons, United States Commissioner of Immigration Hon. Anthony Caminetti is today more active and alert than many a younger man would be in meeting the strain of his official duties.

In keeping up his robust constitution and tireless energy, Commissioner Caminetti has had recourse to Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood builder. He says: "In the heat of Summer, and the rigor of Winter and the debilitating weeks of Spring time, I have used Nuxated Iron with unvarying success and satisfaction. After weeks of busiest confinement to office duties, I find in Nuxated Iron the true tonic qualities which help bring one's physical being to the state of fitness which is the desire of every healthy-minded man or woman. Nuxated Iron I commend to whoever feels the need of a tonic restorative for debilitation, exhaustion and overwork."

In commenting upon this, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "A man of the prominence of Commissioner Caminetti does a great good, in my opinion, by coming out and telling the people about Nuxated Iron. I know of no better preparation to enrich and fortify the blood against the thousands of disease germs which must prevail in so many of the places visited by a man looking after the thousands of immigrants from every land who come to our shores. Many a man or woman goes through life only half living up to their possibilities simply because they do not realize that their weakness and lassitude may be simply due to a lack of sufficient iron in the blood. They need a strength and blood builder but do not know what to take, and as a consequence they often do themselves a great injury by resorting to stimulants, narcotic drugs and worthless medicinal preparations, while others take some form of metallic iron which, in my opinion, should no longer be generally used owing to its great liability to injure the teeth and stomach."

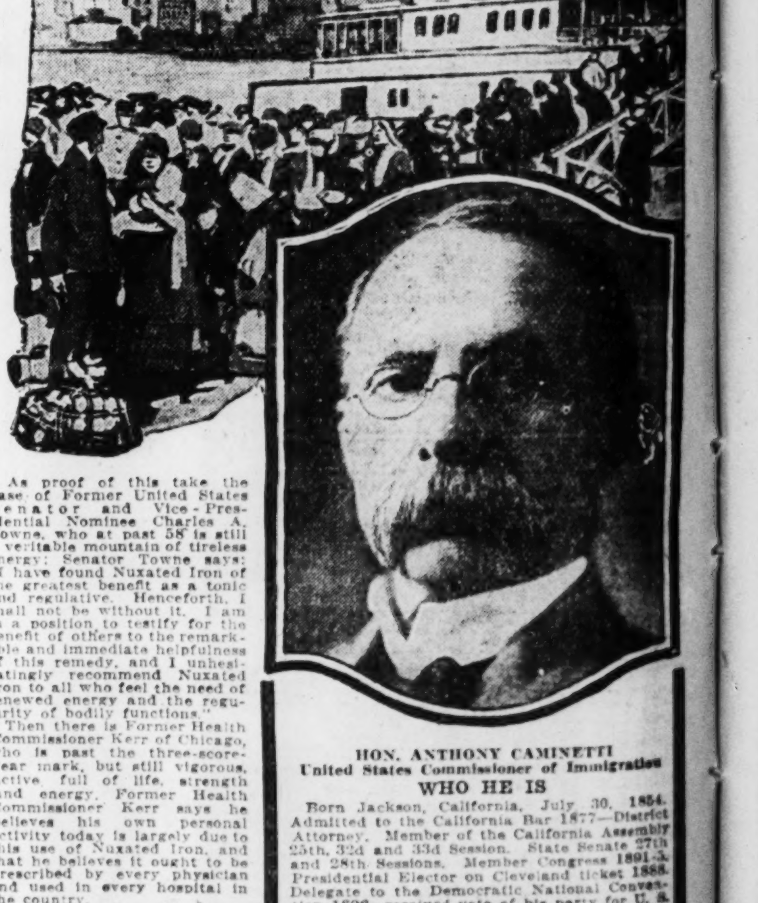
Dr. George H. Baker, formerly Physician and Surgeon Monmouth Memorial Hospital of New Jersey, says: "I have found nothing in my experience so effective for helping to make strong, healthy red-blooded men and women as Nuxated Iron. From a careful examination of the formula and my own tests of Nuxated Iron, I feel convinced that it is a preparation which any physician can take himself or prescribe for his patients with the utmost confidence of obtaining highly beneficial and satisfactory results."

For want of iron you may be an old man at thirty, dull of intellect, poor in memory, nervous, irritable and all "run-down," while at 50 or 60 with plenty of iron in your blood you may still be young in feeling, full of life, your whole being brimming over with health and energy.

As proof of this take the case of Former United States Senator and Vice-Presidential Nominee Charles A. Towne, who at past 58 is still a veritable mountain of tireless energy: Senator Towne says: "I have found Nuxated Iron of the greatest benefit as a tonic and regulative. Henceforth, I shall not be without it. I am in a position to testify for the benefit of others to the remarkable and immediate helpfulness of this remedy, and I unhesitatingly recommend Nuxated Iron to all who feel the need of renewed energy and the regularity of bodily functions."

Then there is Former Health Commissioner Kerr of Chicago, who is past the three-score-year mark, but still vigorous, active, full of life, strength and energy. Former Health Commissioner Kerr says he believes his own personal activity today is largely due to this use of Nuxated Iron, and that he believes it ought to be prescribed by every physician and used in every hospital in the country.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.



HON. ANTHONY CAMINETTI
United States Commissioner of Immigration

WHO HE IS

Born Jackson, California, July 30, 1854. Admitted to the California Bar 1877—District Attorney. Member of the California Assembly 25th, 32d and 33d Session. State Senate 27th and 28th Sessions. Member Congress 1891-3. Presidential Elector on Cleveland ticket 1888. Delegate to the Democratic National Convention 1896; received vote of his party for U. S. Senator (15th ballot) at 33d Session California Legislature 1899. Made Commissioner General of Immigration by appointment of President Wilson. Author of the law known as the Caminetti Law, passed by Congress 1893, under which hydraulic mining was resumed in California, and Chairman of the California Commission for the revision and reform of the law.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE — Nuxated Iron which has been used by Commissioner Caminetti and others with such surprising results and is prescribed and recommended above by Dr. Baker, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. Enderle Drug Co. Pauley's Drug Store Co. and all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

ST. LOUISAN TELLS HOW HE TREATED GAS CASES

Capt. A. J. Griot, Convalescing at Jefferson Barracks, Served in Special Gas Hospital.

Capt. Arthur J. Griot of 3002 Arsenal street, who served as a medical officer in a special gas hospital in the suburbs of Paris during the closing months of the war, returned to St. Louis recently and is awaiting discharge at Jefferson Barracks. He is a patient in the post hospital, convalescing from a slight attack of influenza. Yesterday he described some of his experiences to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

"This gas hospital," he said, "was known as American Red Cross Hospital No. 6. It has a 613-bed capacity and was most exclusive. Only gas patients were treated. We treated thousands of patients. They would come in sometimes at the rate of 250 a day.

How Cases Were Handled.

"I've seen men come in, their bodies blue from gas. Others were horribly burned from head to foot. Some chaps had inhaled great whiffs of the stuff with horrible results. Their lungs and bronchial tubes would be burned to pieces.

"When men suffering from the burns inflicted by mustard gas came in we would spray them with a wax solution called amberine, a new discovery of the war, and cover the burn with some gauze, spray on a little more amberine, and generally the patient improved under this treatment.

"Those who were suffering from gas absorption were given oxygen. You would be surprised to see the way they came out under it. Aftereffects generally suffered were a temporary blindness and loss of speech.

Tells of Psychic Treatment.

"Many men had trouble in regaining use of their vocal cords and I found that a most successful method was a psychic one. I would scare them into talking. I'd go to a man who wasn't getting along very well as far as getting back his voice went and say, 'Well, if your voice doesn't improve soon we'll have to do a little operating and cut some of those cords.' The results were magical. Generally the next morning the man would be able to talk."

The gases most prevalent were mustard, phosgene and tear gas, Griot said. He has two brothers, George and Albert, both medical officers, who recently have been discharged from the service.

NATIONAL JEWISH MEETING HERE

Representatives of 2000 Organizations to Be Present May 17 to 19.

Representatives of more than 2000 Jewish organizations—social, civic, labor, educational, philanthropic and fraternal—from all sections of the country, will meet in St. Louis on May 17, 18 and 19, for the fifteenth annual convention of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society, which has taken care of 2700 tubercular patients at its sanatorium near Denver, Colo. Although the institution is supported exclusively by Jewish organizations no distinction is made between races and religions in admitting patients.

The St. Louis committee, which has charge of the arrangements, consists of H. Siegfried, chairman; Mrs. M. Friedman, first vice-chairman; Samuel Russack, second vice-chairman; Hymen Cohen, third vice-chairman; Maurice Weil, treasurer; Julius Guttmann, secretary, and Oscar Leonard, one of the national directors.

of the wealthy citizen who was Burgomaster up to the time when I assumed that office.

"I was by that time in a position to make a vigorous protest against such methods, and some soldiers who were found to have repeated this story of the rifles were ostentatiously rebuked by their officers."

Dr. Nerincx found little reason to believe that the influence of the women of Germany on their men at the front was an uplifting one. He told of the letters found in the clothing of killed and captured German soldiers, in which their wives and mothers thanked them for the jewelry, rugs and articles of furniture and ornament seized by them from the homes of Belgium, and asked for more, specifying the particular articles they desired. He also told of the experience of the Belgian men and girls who were deported into Germany.

"They were carried in cattle cars," he said, "and at the time the people would gather about and treat them with less consideration than if they were animals. The worst of this treatment, the vilest epithets and the most sickening acts of abuse, always came from the German women."

Rupture Kills 7000 Annually

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE test right in the privacy of their own home. The PLAPAO method is unquestionably the most scientific, logical and successful self-treatment for rupture the world has ever known.

The PLAPAO PAD when adhering closely to the body cannot possibly slip or shift out of place, therefore, cannot chafe or pinch. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. To be used whilst you work and whilst you sleep. No straps, buckles or springs attached.

Learn how to close the hernial opening as nature intended so the rupture CAN'T come down. Send your name today to PLAPAO CO., Block 557, St. Louis, Mo., for FREE trial Plapao and the information necessary.—ADV.

THEY'RE TENTING TODAY ON THE CIRCUS GROUND

Tomorrow the Big Show Can Be Found at Laclede and Vandeventer.

Spring at Laclede and Vandeventer, good old gladsome circus center. Sun (or is it rain?) beats down, Sells-Floto show rolls into town, coming hither from the whence; public interest is in tents. This the day of preparation, canvas spread o'er all creation. Gaping crowds around the lot, is that an elephant or not? Here's a sight to make you laugh, a knock-kneed, spotted, lank giraffe, periscoping all around, twenty feet above the ground.

Chattering monkeys in a cage, some happy, others in a rage; give them peanuts and you'll see how quickly all will happy be. Giant, strong man, dwarf and freak, here to stay one giddy week; sawdust, pop and lemonade, come right in, folks, who's afraid?

Fierce, ferocious feline fighters, bad bicuspid beastly biters, mastodonic mammoth mammals, calm, contented, chewing camels, hiking, hulking, huge hyenas, amplitudinous arenas, everything that will allure you; if you're sick a sight to cure you.

Away with sadness and with sorrow. The tent show opens up tomorrow, with a matinee, of course, after they have all paraded through the city streets in force. For verse this is the end of it and prose proceeds thuswise, towit:

The Sells-Floto circus makes camp today and will remain a week in St. Louis. A feature which gives the big show a good start is "The Birth of the Rainbow," a pageant and arena parade described in advance as a most ambitious and colorful spectacle. In the three rings and the two elevated stages 17 distinct acts will go to make up the performance proper.

Among the riding acts are the offerings of the Lloyds, the Hobsons and the famous Hodgini. Trained elephants will perform under the direction of Grace Elder, Irene Montgomery and Voncile Evans. Foremost among the acrobatic performers are the Aerial Silverlakes, Sweney and Newton and Alfreda Codona. The Codona Troupe has a thrilling "flying act" and Princess Victoria, "the Pavlowa of the mid-air thread," dances on the wire.

There will be the usual complement of clowns and lighter acts devised chiefly for their power to amuse.

The street parade tomorrow will leave the grounds at 9:30 a. m. and its route will be north on Vandeventer avenue to Market street, east to Broadway, north to Washington avenue, west to Twenty-second street, south to Pine street and west to the circus lot.

PLANS FOR AERO SQUADRON

Auxiliary Will Give Dinner to Men of the Eighty-Sixth.

The Relatives' Auxiliary of the Eighty-sixth (St. Louis) Aero Squadron is perfecting arrangements for a banquet at the American Hotel Annex, as the chief event of welcome to the men of the squadron when they return. They are expected home in a short time. Numerous events are planned for the celebration of their arrival.

If possible, the St. Louisans in the squadron will march in the parade of some larger St. Louis unit such as the 138th Infantry. If this is done ample distinguishing marks will be carried. They may arrive too late to participate in any of the demonstrations, however.

As a part of the fund-raising work the auxiliary will give another card party May 7 at 2 p. m. in the American Hotel Annex. Euchre, lotto and other games will be arranged.

SCIENTISTS' RELIEF WORK

Comforts Committee Summarizes Work Done During War.

The Comforts Forwarding Committee of the Christian Scientists' war relief activities has issued a report showing a total of 18,279 knitted and hospital garments made and distributed from their centers in St. Louis and suburbs. Of these 5559 went to Boston, the rest being given out locally. The committee closed its work rooms with a cash balance of $1800, which will be turned over to further Christian Science relief work.

"VICTORY" PAGEANT MAY 8

Clubwomen Will Appear in Performance at Municipal Theater.

Victory will be celebrated at the Municipal Theater May 8 by a pageant entitled "Victory."

It will be staged by the St. Louis Women's Council, in celebration of the return of the St. Louis soldiers. It will be given at popular prices, with a general admission of 35 cents. Parts in the cast will be taken by prominent clubwomen and the music will be furnished by Frederick Fischer's orchestra and the Pageant Choral Club.

Ministerial Alliance Meeting.

The April meeting of the ministerial Alliance will be held at the Public Library tomorrow at 11 a. m. The general subject is "The Religious Education Program of Our St. Louis Churches." The Rev. J. H. Horstmann will present with illustrations the results of a religious education survey made by the church federations' commission on religious education. Dean R. S. Calder of the department of religious education at Lindenwood College, will speak on "What Is Religious Education?"

Special 138th Auxiliary Meeting.

A special meeting of K Company Auxiliary, 138th Infantry, will be held Tuesday evening at Y. M. C. A., Grand and Franklin avenues. A dance will be given May 3 by the auxiliary for the Welcome Home Fund.

Why the Brunswick Method of Reproduction Insures a Superior Phonograph

Reason No. 1 The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes the Ultona, a new conception in playing. The Ultona consists of an arrangement of the several necessary reproducing diaphragms upon one tone arm. This is an all-in-one arrangement, with no attachments—nothing to take off or put on.

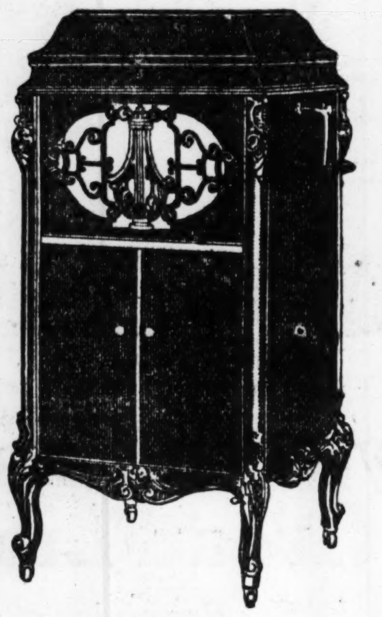
At a turn of the hand, the Ultona is adapted to play any type of record. The proper diaphragm is presented, the exact weight, the precise needle. Thus the requirements of each type of record are met.

So each record, whatever make, is played exactly as it should be. The Ultona demands no sacrifice in tone, as attachments often do.

The Brunswick owner can choose records without regard to make. Every singer, every band, every musician, every selection, can now be played at its best on the one phonograph.

Reason No. 2 Equal in importance to reproduction is tone amplification. The Brunswick Method of Reproduction also includes a new idea in acoustics—The Brunswick Amplifier.

Old-time ideas were at variance. Some makers still cling to metal construction. Others use a combination of wood and metal—a wooden horn and a metal casting as the "throat."



But the Brunswick Amplifier is oval in shape, and built entirely of wood, like a fine violin. It is molded of rare holly-wood.

Sound waves require uniform amplification to reach their fullness. You will note that The Brunswick tone is richer and more natural. Strident, metallic notes are absent.

Make comparison. Let your ear decide. Try to find an equal to Brunswick tone.

You're bound to end such a search at a Brunswick Shop, where every opportunity will be given you to decide for yourself. Hear this remarkable instrument before you decide.

No One Will Know You Use Face Powder

If you use derwillo, the very latest thing in powders. It's impossible to detect it and it gives the skin that rosy, peach-like appearance and baby softness everybody raves about. You put it on in the morning and it stays there all day. No touching up to keep your nose from shining. Perspiration does not affect it and it will not rub off on clothing. It instantly beautifies the complexion, puts color in your cheeks, and is a wonderful tonic for the skin; prevents blackheads, coarse pores, hides freckles, tan, sun spots and other blemishes on the face, neck, hands and arms. Rough, chapped skin quickly disappears and leaves you with a complexion of youth, which will attract attention anywhere. Apply derwillo before going to theater or parties and just note the favorable comments of your friends. It feels so good on your face that you will never be without it, and you will forever discard the old forms of face powder. It contains no rice powder, which clogs the pores or injurious chemicals, such as bismuth or pearl white, so often found in many high-grade powders. Its principal ingredient is used by the leading skin specialists in the treatment of many skin diseases, as it is a genuine tonic to the skin, is absolutely harmless and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Here is a fair offer: Get a package from your druggist today, use it for a week or two, and if you are not satisfied ask him for your money back and he will gladly give it to you. FORTITUDE SHOWN BY FAMILIES OF WAR DEAD

St. Louisans Feel Losses Deeply, but Also Are Proud of Sacrifice to Cause.

The fortitude with which English and French women bore their war bereavements was often the subject of comment before America entered the war, but it was no greater than that observed in this country when our war losses began to be told. St. Louis has lost about 525 soldiers, sailors and marines with the A. E. F. by death from all causes, and almost without exception the families of these dead heroes have felt a solemn pride rather than bitter grief, according to the observation of a Post-Dispatch reporter who visited a large number of families bereaved by the war.

There were, of course, extreme instances, but as a general rule it was found that the display of grief usually connected with death in the ordinary manner was lacking. Naturally, the sense of loss was just as great, but the feeling of having given something to the cause assuaged for many a family the shock occasioned by the short official telegram of notification.

Many of the homes that the reporter visited gave sign in one way or another of a belief and trust in religion, which seemed to account in great measure for the fortitude with which they accepted the blow. This was particularly true in the homes of the workingmen.

Few Cases of Extreme Grief.

Cases of extreme grief were very few. Two were in homes which offered the greatest contrast. One of these homes was that of an old St. Louis family of distinguished lineage, and the other was that of a laborer, whose son, likewise a laborer, was one of the first St. Louisans to make the supreme sacrifice.

Almost invariably information was freely given. Relatives were proud to have the city know of the heroic sacrifce of a member of their family.

To render the service it did in telling of the men in the casualty list, the Post-Dispatch expended much time and effort. It was found that frequently families had moved from the home address the soldier gave, and it would often be impossible to trace the family through the directories. Few, however, were the cases missed because of inability to locate families.

No small portion of the local losses were among the foreign-born population, and oftimes to obtain information from these families was a task worthy of a linguist. Usually a schoolchild could be found who could act as interpreter.

Method of Notification.

The casualty lists received by the newspapers were released for publication about a week after the families received the official notifications from the military departments. This was in order to have the families receive their first information from official sources.

The official notice came as a telegram from the Adjutant-Generals office, War Department, Washington, in case of the army; from the office of the commanding officer of the Marine Corps, and the naval casualties from the Navy Department. The army telegram read, "deeply regret to inform you that Private Blank, Infantry, was killed in action on such a date. Details later, when learned." The signature of "Harris, acting for the Adjutant-General," thus became familiar to many a bereaved family. The Marine Corps notices were similar. Telegraphic details or fuller information by letter usually followed.

CLEMENCEAU TAKES GYMNASTIC DRILL EACH MORNING AT EIGHT

French Premier Attributes His Indefatigable Energy to Daily Exercise.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 1.—Premier Clemenceau's wonderful constitution is ascribed partly to the fact that he devotes half an hour every morning to physical exercises. At 8 o'clock Edouard Leroy, his gymnastic master, arrives to put him through a series of movements demanding the greatest flexibility in all parts of the body.

M. Clemenceau, attired in gymnastic costume, endeavors to perform exactly the most difficult exercises. Sometimes, however, when a sudden idea crosses his brain, he darts from the room to make a note of his inspiration.

For years the Premier has not missed his morning drill except for a few days after the attempt to assassinate him, but he has resumed it. It is to this daily exercise that M. Clemenceau attributes his indefatigable energy. Even during the most anxious hours of the German offensive he conscientiously went through the drill and found that after a sleepless night it made him fit for the strenuous tasks of his office. The lesson is followed by vigorous massage. Ten minutes later the Premier, who rises at 6 in the morning, winter and summer, leaves in his car for the War Office, fresh and ready for the days work.

A Real Remedy for Falling Hair

Stops Itching Scalp Instantly Prevents All Dandruff—Promotes Hair Growth or Nothing to Pay

This Man Is Growing Bald. Parisian Sage Is Just the Thing for Such Cases

Here's good news for men and women whose hair is falling out, who are growing bald and have scalps covered with dandruff that itch like mad.

Any good druggist can now supply you with the genuine Parisian sage (liquid form), which is guaranteed to quickly, surely and safely abolish every sign of dandruff, stop itching scalp and falling hair and promote a new growth, or money refunded.

Thousands can testify to the excellent results from its use; some who feared being hairless now glory in their abundant hair, while others who suffered for years with dandruff and itching head got a clean, cool scalp after just a few days' use of this simple home treatment.

No matter whether bothered with falling hair, gray hair, matted, stringy hair, dandruff or itching scalp, try Parisian sage—you will not be disappointed. It's a scientific preparation intended to supply all hair needs.

The first application will make your hair and scalp look and feel 100 per cent better. If you want beautiful, lustrous hair, and lots of it, use Parisian sage. Don't delay—begin tonight. A little attention now insures abundant hair for years to come.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Old Herbal Remedy Used for 40 Years in Relieving Diabetes

The most satisfactory results have been obtained in combating Diabetes by observing certain dietary rules and the judicious use of Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy, an herbal preparation used with marked success for more than forty years.

Following is a letter from a grateful user:

"This letter is the best proof that I am still alive. Your medicine is a miracle to me. My weight was reduced from 157 to 114 pounds when I left the hospital. I left there Aug. 6th in despair. Hundreds of people that knew me said I would never live to return to my studio. After leaving the hospital, I saw your "Ad." in the paper. I began its use and at once commenced to improve, and now everybody is saying to me that I look better than ever before. I tip the scales at 132 pounds and I am back working again to the astonishment of all. I feel splendid and people say I am looking better every day. I must tell you that every word I have written is true, and I can prove it by hundreds that knew of my condition. Jules Friquet, 511 West First Street, Los Angeles, Cal."

Great Medicine

Made From Corn Silk—Excites Favorable Comment.

Kidney and Bladder Ailments Banished by Few Doses.

Corn Silk! The same "silk" you see protruding from the husk of corn, produces a fine medicine for kidney and bladder irregularities, when compounded with other simple drugs as in Balmwort Tablets.

Balmwort Tablets contain a powerful extract of corn silk, which quickly relieves the inflammation and congestion that causes such distress as pains in back and hips, rheumatic twinges, nervousness, severe headaches. The eyes appear "bloodshot," the sleep is restless, and sometimes fever, followed by chills, cause great unrest. It is unwise to neglect such symptoms, when a few doses of Balmwort Tablets can be taken for relief. Alice Trobough, 5627 South Twenty-fourth street, Omaha, Neb., writes: "I have used one tube of your Balmwort Tablets and find that they are the best I have ever used for kidney and bladder trouble."

Ask any leading druggist for a tube of Balmwort Tablets. Price, $1.00.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Tendency to Constipation?

USE THIS LAXATIVE!

Dietitians advise a "careful diet," but that is troublesome to most people; physical culturists advise "certain exercises," which is good if one has both the time and the inclination. Doctors advise diet and exercise and medicine. The question is, shall it be a cathartic or purgative medicine? Or a mild, gentle laxative?

Thousands have decided the question to their own satisfaction by using a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A small dose gives a free, easy movement of the bowels. It is the best substitute for nature herself. In fact, since the ingredients are wholly from the vegetable kingdom it may truthfully be said it is a natural laxative.

Its positive but gentle action on the bowels makes it an ideal remedy for constipation. The dose is small, and it may be taken with perfect safety until the bowels are regulated and act again of their own accord.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

PRICE AS ALWAYS

In spite of greatly increased laboratory costs due to the War, by sacrificing profits and absorbing war taxes we have maintained the price at which this family laxative has been sold by druggists for the past 26 years. Two sizes—50c and $1.00.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character; the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in any answers. The remedies can be obtained at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss T. R. asks: "Do you think a weight of 190 pounds is too much for a girl of medium height, and what can I safely take to reduce about 30 pounds?"

Answer: Your weight is excessive, and if it increases it may cause much suffering and embarrassment. I advise the regular use of 5-grain Arbolone Tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration.

"Carpenter" writes: "My liver and kidneys are in a bad condition. I have dizzy spells and dark spots before my eyes. Also have twinges of rheumatism. Can I be helped?"

Answer: To relieve kidney and liver trouble use three-grain Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur). These are packed in sealed tubes with full directions for taking. They act pleasantly and tone up the bowels and liver and purify the blood. They are convenient, effective and highly curative.

"Melville R." writes: "Should a man of forty-six find himself utterly incapacitated? Am weak, nervous, timid, self-conscious. Do not sleep well. Arise with a tired feeling, lame back and often have severe headache in the back part of head. Fickle appetite, but when I do eat, do not get strength."

Answer: To use a common expression, "you have exceeded the speed limit" and your nervous system needs the aid of an invigorating tonic medicine. Get a tube of three-grain Cadomene Tablets. Take as per directions and continue treatment several months if necessary.

"Onda" writes: "I am troubled with itching scalp, dandruff and my hair is falling out. It is harsh and brittle."

Answer: Plain Yellow Minyol is the best remedy for itching scalp, falling hair and dandruff that I know of. It can be bought in 4-oz. jars, and if used according to directions will overcome diseases of the hair and scalp. If the hair is harsh and brittle and you are bothered with those straggling locks, the use of Minyol will restore that soft, fluffy appearance and bring back the intense natural color.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"Kit" writes: "I am far below normal weight. I suffer with headaches and am nervous to the point of exhaustion. If you can tell me something to help me I shall be very grateful."

Answer: I can prescribe nothing so effective as a thorough course of three-grain Hypo-Nuclane Tablets. These tablets will aid in extracting the nutrition from the food, which will increase the red blood supply, overcome nervousness and you will become plump and healthy. This treatment should be continued for several months, as it takes time to change the tissues and cells of the body.

"Sarah" says: "Can anything be done for one who is bothered with rheumatism? If so, please reply."

Answer: You can be relieved of your rheumatism if you take the following: Mix by shaking well and take a teaspoonful at meal times and at bed time: Comp. essence of cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syrup sarsaparilla comp., 5 ozs.; wine of colchicum, one-half oz.; sodium salicylate, 4 drams; iodide of potassium, 2 drams.

"Uneasy" writes: "I am uneasy about my health. My kidneys and bladder are not well. Have spells of depression, do not sleep well. My ankles puff and under my eyes I have 'bags.' Please prescribe."

Answer: "Your symptoms indicate you need treatment to tone up the functions of kidneys and bladder. Obtain in sealed tubes Balmwort Tablets and take as per directions for several weeks, or until relief is experienced.

Smell Those Clothes!

Smell the clothes that GRANDMA washed. Smell their sweetness as they hang on the line. "Absolute cleanliness.," you will say.

GRANDMA is real, powdered soap. You sift it into the tub, wash boiler or washing machine. Just the amount necessary—no more. What wonderful suds. What tremendous cleansing power.

GRANDMA cleans everything. It cannot harm the finest textured clothes. There is no wasting of bar soap. No chipping or slicing—no rubbing off more than you need—no washing away while the bar lies around in the water. It cleans equally well in hard or soft water.

Your Grocer Has It!

I Blame the Woman Who Lets a Man Drink, Says Druggist Brown

Of Cleveland. He Guarantees a Simple Home Treatment Given Without the Knowledge of the Drinker.

No wife has a right to let her husband drink; for alcoholism is a disease and a drunkard is a sick man, says Druggist Brown of Cleveland. A woman can cure this disease—stop a drinking husband in a few weeks for half what he would spend on liquor in the same time. The habit can be broken and the disease cured. Thousands of cases prove it, and every community has its reformed drunkard. Druggist Brown says the right time to stop the drink habit is at its beginning. Left to run its course it will deaden the fine sensibilities of the man you love. Begin with the first whiff of liquor on his breath, but do not despair if he has already gone from bad to worse until he has become a rum-soaked sot.

Druggist Brown know the curse of strong drink, for he himself has been a victim. A loving sister, without his knowledge, rescued him from the brink of a drunkard's grave, and for 10 years kept her secret. She saved him from drink—rescued him from his own depraved, besotted self by giving him a secret remedy, the formula of an old European chemist. To pay his debt to her and to help other victims out of the murk and mire he has made the formula public.

Druggists everywhere dispense it daily as Prepared Tescum Powders, put up in doses. Get it of your own druggist and drop a powder twice a day in tea, coffee, milk or other drink. Soon liquor does not taste the same, the craving for it disappears, and lo! one more drunkard has been saved and knows not when or why he lost his taste for drink.

Warning Note: Tescum should be given only when it is desirable to destroy all taste for alcohol and all pleasure in its use. Those who encourage moderate drinking should not give it until the so-called moderate drinker reaches the danger line, as most of them do in time. Druggist Brown has such confidence in Tescum Powders that he personally guarantees results or he will refund out of his own pocket the price charged by the dispensing druggist. It is sold by Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Wolff-Wilson and other druggists.—ADV.

MORE LIGHT ON JAPAN'S RULE OF FORCE IN KOREA

Further Revelations of Effort to Assimilate Unwilling People, From Recent Report by American.

HOW THE PASSIVE REVOLUTION STARTED

People Wanted to Get Independence Cause Before Peace Conference; Wool Pulled Over World's Eyes.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, March 22.—Light is shed on the Korean insurrection, its origin and development, in the report of conditions in the "Hermit Kingdom" written by an American observer and forwarded to the American Minister at Peking, a copy of which was seen by a correspondent of The Associated Press and reference to which was made in another dispatch a few days ago.

The American, in his story, which covers the first two weeks of the outbreak—from March 1 to 15—and which he prepared for transmission to the State Department at Washington, gives what are purported to be the inside facts as to the causes of the revolution. He reiterated the rumors regarding the death of the aged former Emperor Yi that many of the Koreans believed he was a suicide in the hope of averting the marriage of his son, Prince Kon, to the Japanese Princess Hashimoto. Yi died, supposedly of apoplexy, on Jan. 22, one week before the time set for the wedding.

"Disaffected Koreans in America, Hawaii, Manchuria, China and Japan have kept up a constant agitation against Japanese rule in Korea ever since their occupation of the peninsula," the observer reports. "When the revolution broke out simultaneously in many parts of Korea, however, it took the Government almost completely by surprise.

Returned Home Secretly.

"About Feb. 15 some of these Korean agitators had come secretly to their native land and organized committees to begin a movement for establishing the nation's independence. Their work was quiet and effective. Their plan was to begin a 'passive revolution' in which no property was to be damaged or destroyed and no persons, not even Japanese, to be harmed. If the Koreans were beaten, or imprisoned, they were to take their punishment without complaint, even suffering death rather than bring reproach on the Korean cause."

After submitting that up to the time of his departure from Korea the people had religiously observed the covenant of passive resistance, the American observer goes on to say that what really precipitated the movement for liberty was a report that the peace conference in Paris was to adjourn permanently on March 28, and that unless the Koreans presented their grievances and claims for self-determination before that date Koreans forever after would be compelled to hold their peace and remain under the yoke of the "oppressor."

President Wilson's "14 points," he said, were well known to all educated Koreans and the self-determination for small nations feature made a strong appeal to them. At the same time it was reported that the peace conference had sent a special delegate to the Far East to investigate and report on Korean national affairs. The Koreans, therefore, bestirred themselves to show the envoy how bitterly they resented Japanese "domination." Although never officially credited as such an envoy, John Jay Abbott, representing large American financial interests, about this time was reported on the way to investigate conditions in China, and the Koreans immediately hit upon the hypothesis that Abbott was the representative of the Paris conferees.

Intrigue and Deception.

"Foreigners whose residence has been in the East but outside Japan proper," continued the report, "are generally well acquainted with Japanese dealings with other nations. The same methods of intrigue, deception, brow-beating and force have been followed in China, Formosa, Manchuria, Korea and recently in Siberia. The people who have been so unfortunate as to cross their path have invariably suffered." Meanwhile, says the report, "the Japanese show themselves adepts at 'pulling the wool' over the eyes of sightseers. Foreigners who live in Korea and elsewhere in the Orient are discredited if they refuse to approve this miserable business of deception. We condemn it, but without avail."

Japan's occupation of Korea, according to the State Department's informant, has not been without its advantages. The Government has built fine public buildings, schoolhouses and roads, introduced improvements in agriculture, reforested waste lands and done scores of other things to benefit the country. On the other hand, Japanese rule in Korea the past 10 years, it is charged, has been characterized by ruthless and intolerable severity, "and the Tokio Government shows no disposition to correct it."

For the Benefit of Japan.

"Korea has not been held and administered for the benefit of the Koreans, but for the benefit of the conquerors," the report alleges. "Koreans are in bondage so hard and unendurable that insurrection must break out frequently in the future. The amalgamation and assimilation process is at an end. Bitterness between the two peoples is daily growing more pronounced. The passive revolution, if continued long, must develop into forceful resistance."

Among the allegations of maladministration made against the Japanese by the Koreans, according to the American's report, are denial to the Koreans of the right of petition or appeal, denial of the right of the Koreans to speak their own language in the schools, race discrimination in favor of the Japanese, both socially and in business and public affairs, seizure of Korean crown lands, the dispossession of native tenants and

PRAIRIE DU ROCHER IN ROAD ROUTE PLAN

Historic Place Expected to Be Included in Illinois Public Highway Project.

One of the most historic cities in the Northwest Territory may have been a place on one of the public highways to be built under the new Illinois road program, if the Department of Highways decides to accept the proposition advocated by adherents of the plan.

The city of Prairie du Rocher (prairie of the rocks), site of Old Fort Chartres, one of the earliest settlements in that part of Illinois, is being considered. The contemplated route will be from Waterloo south to Chester.

O. H. Wright, Director of Finance, and Thomas G. Vennum, assistant Director of the Department of Public Works and Buildings, recently visited the city and made surveys.

How Route Will Extend.

From Waterloo the route will extend south, through Prairie du Rocher, over the Kaskaskia trail, one of the oldest trails in the State, traversing picturesque country along the Mississippi Valley.

Advocates of the Prairie du Rocher route declare it would bring to the attention of the tourist the new State park acquired by the 1913 Legislature.

Old Fort Chartres is about three miles southwest of Prairie du Rocher. The fort has been neglected, but it is the intention of the Department of Public Works and Buildings to have it restored. It was built by the French in 1718. The wooden building erected then was replaced by a stone structure in 1751, at a cost of more than 1,000,000 francs. At that time it was declared to be the strongest fortification in North America.

Great Britain acquired the fort in 1763 by the treaty of Paris, but in 1778 it became the property of the Colonies, then belonging to the State of Virginia. Afterwards it became the property of the Northwest Territory, the Indiana Territory, the Illinois Territory and finally, 100 years after its erection, 1818, the property of the State of Illinois.

Ruins of Old Mill.

A short distance down the river from the village are the ruins of Riley's mill, where it is said Indians and early settlers went to have their grain ground by the old water-wheel mill, with stone burrs imported from France. High on the bluffs, still further south, is the vault containing the remains of Senator Elias Kent Kane, first Secretary of State, and close by is the old mansion in which the outline of the first Constitution for Illinois was drafted.

A mile or two beyond is the site of Old Kaskaskia, the first capital of Illinois.

The State owns 10 acres around old Fort Chartres and it is said 10 additional acres will be purchased, so improvements may be made.

The building of good roads along the Mississippi River will bring this interesting section of Illinois to the attention of motorists. It will be but a few miles ride from St. Louis and easy of access.

MORE LIGHT ON JAPAN'S RULE OF FORCE IN KOREA

their sale or lease to Japanese; the virtual prohibition of issuance of passports to Koreans desiring to travel and the absolute lack of means by which the Koreans may obtain redress of grievances.

Military Government.

"The country is ruled by the most autocratic military government in the world," the report states. "There is no appeal from its decisions or laws to the Parliament in Tokio or to the Emperor. The Governor-General of Korea is as absolute as was the Czar in his palmiest days. This militarism forbids and prohibits every expression of freedom. Its motive power is brute force. People are ruthlessly shot down and killed and, for the most trivial offenses, are imprisoned for long terms.

"The Koreans are a homeogenous people, possessing a single spoken language, a literature and authentic history extending back thousands of years. Notwithstanding this, the Japanese have proscribed the finest Korean literary works, forbidden Korean speech in the schools and tried to destroy Korean histories dealing with past difficulties between Japan and Korea. Meanwhile they are endeavoring to make young Koreans speak only Japanese and in other ways to assimilate the nation."

From Another Source.

From another source, a diary written by a Korean in Pyeng Yang, who relates certain incidents which occurred during the first five days of the revolution, it is alleged that on the day after the proclamation of independence was read, he and 19 other Koreans had been called into the Prefect's office and requested to sign a paper stating that the declaration was prepared by "a low class of people and did not at all represent the sentiments of the real Koreans."

The disclaimer, they were told, had been drafted in Seoul, where it had ben widely signed by prominent Koreans, and would be sent to the peace conference. All sorts of pressure was brought to bear upon the 20 Koreans in Pyeng Yang to disavow the revolution, but, the diary states, "every one of them refused to do so."

You Can Tell the People Who Have Plenty of Phosphorous—Bright, Alert, Active, Wide-Awake—Alive in Every Nerve and Muscle

Says Doctor Who Prescribes Phosphorated Malt for Weak, Tired, Careworn, Nervous, Anaemic, Rundown People.

Look at the people with plenty of phosphorus in them! says Dr. Reid; full of vitality, alert, active, wide-awake—alive, in every nerve and fiber—quick to think, quick to act and always sure of themselves. They are the leaders of every community, at the head of every business and profession, magnetic, attractive people who do things, achieve success and get life's highest rewards.

Without phosphorus good health is impossible. Your nerves and brain need it like your body needs food. It strengthens and vitalizes every nerve and organ of the human body. Why, without it even plants will not grow and soil becomes poor and unproductive! Nature has made it a necessary part of all life, both vegetable and animal, yet most of us exhaust our phosphorus supply and do nothing to replenish it so that more phosphorus is a common need of both men and women, though few realize it. People in need of phosphorus often think that stomach, liver or kidneys are making them sick, weak, nervous and rundown, when all they need is a little more phosphorus to tone up the nervous system and give strength and vigor to the body.

When people come to me nervous, rundown and irritable, I invariably prescribe ordinary phosphorated malt, and I have seen it double endurance and mental activity in less than ten days' time, and in numberless cases where nothing else had proved to be of real value. I have seen phosphorated malt bring roses to the cheeks of pale, nervous, overworked women and the crimson blood of health and a smile of happiness to the faces of children recovering from illness of long duration. Recently a patient came to me on the verge of mental collapse. He found no pleasure in life, his daily work had become drudgery and he got no rest or recreation from his holidays. He could neither sleep nor keep his mind on his work. I told him to eat less and take two five-grain tablets of phosphorated malt after each meal. In less than ten days he walked into my office full of vim and vigor, his eyes bright, his step firm and buoyant and his manner that of a man of twenty-five, though he was well past fifty.

Physicians know the value of phosphorus, and every woman knows the tonic value of malt, a remarkable tissue builder, especially adapted to the needs of nursing mothers and weak, anaemic women. Combined with phosphorus and phosphates as in phosphorated malt it nourishes the body by aiding the system to turn food into living tissue. The old liquid forms of malt are inconvenient to take and most of them contain alcohol, which causes a needless stimulation always followed by a depressing reaction. Phosphorated malt retains the nutritive properties of malt without the evils of alcohol and it contains phosphorus in a state almost identical with that in the brain and nerve cells of healthy, vigorous people.

I have seen phosphorated malt produce such astonishing results that I prescribe it in my practice and take it myself. After a few days of phosphorated malt the weak, tired nerves thrill with energy, pleasure becomes more inviting, work becomes easier and you face the day with renewed confidence, optimism, enthusiasm and endurance.

Manufacturers' Note: Phosphorated malt, so highly recommended by Dr. Reid, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy. The formula is printed on every package and your druggist will vouch for its excellence. It is sold under a guarantee to increase endurance and mental activity or the price will be refunded. Even if your physician prescribes it and it fails the druggist will refund the purchase price. All druggists sell it subject to this guarantee. It is dispensed in St. Louis by Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and Enderle Drug Co.—ADVERTISEMENT.

"I have been Using Your Sulpherb Tablets More or Less for Many Years and Have Recommended Them to Many, Because I Think They Should Be in Every Home."

This writes Mr. Wm. Cameron, 1021 Ells Place, Denver, Colo., and we publish this brief statement to prove the never-ending value of Sulpherb Tablets, in the treatment of such ailments as chronic constipation, impaired kidney action, and consequent impure blood manifested in many ways, such as headaches, pimples, boils, rash, hives, rheumatism, etc. Neglected constipation undoubtedly brings on a long train of more serious ills and the way to get relief is to use Sulpherb Tablets as a laxative, tonic blood clearer.

They are made of extract of herbs and roots and contain sulphur and cream of tartar, thus supplying the essentials for a regular and effective treatment. Sold by druggists everywhere at 60c per tube.—ADV.

Freckles and Blotches Are Easily Peeled Off

If you are bothered with any cutaneous blemish, it's a poor plan to use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, red blotches or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is actually absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view.

Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in the morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment report astonishing results.—ADV.

"Bust developed 5 inches," says Mrs. Allenddorf.

"The first three weeks bust developed 3½ in.," reports Dr. Swarthout.

Only Real Bust Developer

The National is the special Bust Developer Dr. C. S. Carr formerly recommended in the Physical Culture Magazine as the only safe, reliable method known for enlarging the bust in a natural way. Of this method, Dr. Carr said:

"Indeed, it will bring about a development of the busts quite astonishing."

This has been proven over and over by those using The National. In reports sent us some have obtained as much as five inches development by following Dr. Carr's instructions.

Valuable Book FREE

If you want a beautiful, plump, full bust, write for our valuable book on bust development, containing the article by Dr. Carr, in which he tells specifically the causes of non-development and how the bust may be developed harmlessly to its most beautiful proportions. SARAJEVO IS CENTER FOR U. S. FOOD WORKERS

Red Cross Administrative Body in City Where Tragedy That Started War Occurred.

SARAJEVO, March 25.—This little Bosnian city, famous as the scene of the murder of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, which was the procursor of the world war, is now the headquarters of the United States Food Administration and of the American Red Cross, which is extending its activities to every part of the Balkans. American officers, soldiers, physicians and nurses are numerous in the streets.

Four-and-a-half years of war have made little change in the ancient capital. With the exception of a small district near the Serbian frontier, Bosnia and Herzegovina were not a battleground and there was no destruction of property. Indeed, except for the wounded and sick Bosnian soldiers returning from Austria and Germany and the presence of allied officers and troops, one would scarcely know the country had ever been at war.

The streets are thronged with people of all nationalities and of all manner of dress. Croatians, Serbs, Austrians, Germans, Turks, Italians, Frenchmen, Britisners and Americans rub elbows with one another. The cafes are always crowded. The moving picture theaters are full at all hours and dancing is ever popular. Public and semi-public balls are frequently held and gayety runs to all extremes.

Mosques Add to Picture.

The slender minarets of more than a hundred Turkish mosques give a very picturesque appearance to the city. Nearly one-half of Sarajevo's 50,000 people are of the Mohammedan faith. The scores of Turkish bazars are well patronized, particularly by Americans, who seem to be keen for Oriental things of all sorts.

The "Turkish" people here really are Slavs who embraced the Mohammedan religion. They are noted for their indolence and dirtiness. The women never work. Many of the older ones adopt begging for a "profession." The Serbians, on the other hand, are industrious and tidy. The homes of the Serbian peasants are models of cleanliness.

The people of Bosnia and Herzegovina have great native intelligence. Many speak several languages. The educated classes are students of politics and economics. The words liberty and freedom are constantly on their lips. They say that all their hope is centered in President Wilson.

While there is an abundance of food in the larger cities, some of the villages are suffering severely. There is lack of food suitable for children and the sick. Most of the hospitals are badly in need of blankets, linen, surgical dressings and medicine. There has been an alarming increase in the number of typhus cases, particularly among the poor, many of whom have only one outfit of clothing, which they never change or wash until worn out. They are, therefore, good subjects for the typhus house.

Red Cross Working Hard.

The American Red Cross Commission to the Balkans has sent physicians and nurses to help the local authorities and has also given the hospitals supplies of clothing, surgical dressings and medicines. It has relief stations at Ragusa, Spalato, Fiume, Mostar and Sarajevo. The United States Food Administration is sending large quantities of flour and fats into the interior regions, where destitution is worse.

The people and Government are profoundly grateful for this help from America. On every hand the correspondent heard expressions of admiration and gratitude among the Bosnians and Serbians for this timely assistance.

It is no exaggeration to say that America stands first in the affections of the people, not only because America has helped them with food and clothing, but because they feel that the great nation overseas has championed their struggle for national unity and independence.

GERMAN HELMET PRIZES FOR SCHOOL ESSAYS ON THE LOAN

Big Prize Will Be One With a Dent in It—Conditions of the Contest.

The Victory Liberty Loan Comittee of the War Loan Organization here is conducting an essay contest among the schools, the subject being "Why My Father or My Mother Should Buy a Victory Bond." The prizes are to be German helmets, such as are going to record-making salesmen in the bond drive.

The chief contest is between the pupils of the six public high schools, including the Sumner (negro) High School, and of all private and parochial high schools. A German dress helmet of brightly polished steel with the spear point on top and the Prussian crest in front, is the prize to go to the pupil of either of the high schools who turns in the best essay on the subject. The prize helmet has a dent in it where a bit of shrapnel struck. It is now in the keeping of Principal Chester B. Curtis of Central High School.

In the districts of each of the six public high schools there are being held respectively four contests, all open to certain pupils of any public, private or parochial grade school in that particular high school district. The four contests in each district are in the eighth, seventh, sixth and fifth grades. The prizes for each grade in each district is a black leather dress helmet, decorated and be-speared.

A condition of the contests is that the essay shall be read by the parent, who shall indorse it as read and approve the sentiments. The judges will be the high school principals in the case of the grade school essays, and the Director of Publicity of the War Loan Organization will judge the high school essays. The contest closes May 6.

New Field of $5,000 Jobs

An Important Call for Traffic Men by the President of the American Commerce Association

I am writing this letter as a last resort to see if we cannot secure more men willing to qualify for positions paying up to $10,000 a year. These positions are open in the traffic field. And the shortage of traffic men is greater today than ever before. About 60,000 big business corporations need expert traffic managers. Boards of Trade, Chambers of Commerce, State Railway and Public Utility Commissions need Traffic Secretaries and Experts. Half a million smaller shippers must employ consulting Traffic Managers who will direct the work of five to a dozen concerns. There are tens of thousands of Assistant Traffic Managers needed in large railroad, industrial and Association Traffic Departments.

There are probably not enough qualified men in the whole United States to meet the needs of a single large industrial center, and save the millions of dollars wasted through lack of technical knowledge. It is estimated that over a hundred thousand more competent traffic men are needed at once.

A traffic man recently saved his concern $24,000 on shipments from C. F. A. territory to their new plant in Chattanooga. Another saved $9,751 in shipping 66 carloads in two weeks. Another saved $36,000 by applying a differential rate on 1,500 cars from Pittsburgh to Canada.

Competent traffic men can name their own salary. Mr. Wanamaker, without experience, after training for traffic work through a practical plan established by approximately 200 traffic experts, was assisted to a position paying $3,000 annually. Mr. Waterfall with experience, gets $10,500 per year. Mr. McEwen, directing Tank Car shipments, receives $24,000 a year. Traffic Efficiency Experts saved a Detroit automobile concern $640,000 in ten months.

Traffic men are paid large salaries because they make large profits for their employers.

Heretofore, there has been no simple way to master the details of traffic management. Realizing the crying demand for trained traffic experts, and seeking relief, the American Commerce Association offers to give men the training required to make them competent to handle the problems of most economical distribution. The training is given by mail and can be studied in spare time, at home. Though the most complete and thorough training is given, the Course is remarkably easy to master, and through the Association costs but a few cents a day.

It is impossible to go into details in this letter, but the Association has published a remarkable book for free distribution which explains everything in detail and tells how anyone may quickly learn the new profession of traffic management. The possibilities in this field today—great as they are—are nothing compared to what they will be a year from now. If you are at all interested in getting into this highly profitable field, paying salaries of $2,500, $5,000, and more, be fair to yourself and write for the remarkable book now offered free by the Association.

In writing, please state whether you are a beginner or whether you have had previous traffic experience, and give your present age and occupation. Address, American Commerce Association, Dept. 404, 806 S. Wabash av., Chicago, Ill. (American Commerce Bldg.).—ADV.

Movie Actresses and Their Hair

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive looks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple mixture by putting a teaspoonful of canthrox (which they get from the druggist) in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid is enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use, the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, its luster and softness are delightful.—ADV.

Production at the Briscoe plants at Jackson, Mich., is rapidly approaching the pre-war basis. Fifty cars a day have been turned out for the last couple of weeks and it is confidently expected this number will be boosted to 75 per day during the month of April.

W. S. Roberts, St. Louis manager of the J. I. Case T. M. Co., has heard from the Case factory that it is so crowded with orders that no promise can be made for immediate deliveries.

H. B. Marshall, local manager of the Exide Battery Depots, Inc., has just been authorized by the factory at Philadelphia to purchase $2500 of Victory Bonds. This is the St. Louis portion of a total subscription on the part of the Exide Battery Depots, Inc., and the Electric Storage Battery Co. of $200,000.

L. B. Tebbetts of L. B. Tebbetts & Co., 2125 Locust st., was in Chicago last week to arrange with the factory for additional deliveries of U. & J. carburetors to take care of the steadily increasing business on the carburetor in his territory, which comprises Missouri, Kansas and Southern Illinois.

Stewart McDonald, president of the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, went to New York last week for a brief rest. Friday he telegraphed orders for the immediate shipment of four Moon Victory cars to a New York agency.

Harry Rohde, manager of the F. C. Rohde business at 4135 Olive street, has received a supply of Livingston radiators, a new style, to fit the standard shell of any 1917, 1918 or 1919 Ford car. The new honeycomb is the same as was used in the thousands of Government airplanes.

By-laws for the recently organized St. Louis Storage Battery Trade Association are being drawn by a committee appointed at a meeting held Monday by President H. E. Spoeneman. This committee will present its work to the next meeting, which will be May 5, 1919.

THE difference in the way the Liberty rides and drives is unmistakable.

This difference makes itself felt in the first fifteen minutes of driving.

It is a difference, for one thing, in steadiness—a steadiness that holds the road as well with one passenger in the tonneau, as with three.

It is a difference in power performance—in ease of control at all times without apparent effort.

These superiorities are so marked as to be astonishing even to seasoned judges of motor car values.

They are so evident that we know of no better way to win your preference than to let the Liberty assert its own difference and superiority in a demonstration ride.

Economy Without Sacrifice of Comfort

"Unusual comfort possibilities" is your first impression of the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Car.

That a seven-passenger touring body of such dimensions and luxury may be had on a car averaging 18 to 20 miles to the gallon of fuel and 10,000 miles to the set of tires is proof that economy is practical without paying the price of cramped discomfort and restricted carrying capacity.

The unusual combination of economy with ample body size is a result of the power development of the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Motor.

After 16 years of designing and building air-cooled motors for passenger cars, Arthur Holmes is now recognized as the leading engineer in the country on air-cooling.

In his Improved Air-Cooled motor for the Holmes Car his experience as Consulting Engineer on combat plane motors of the air-cooled type has resulted in dual exhaust valves with 18 valves, all in the head, giving a quiet running power plant, low in fuel consumption and with a flexible speed range of from three to fifty miles an hour on high gear in a seven-passenger touring model.

In the Holmes Chassis such standard parts are used as have become accepted as correct construction for high quality cars; Timken Axles, front and rear; Brown-Lipe Transmission and Clutch; Timken Bearings throughout; Gemmer Steering Gear; Spicer Universal Joints; Pressed Steel Frame, narrowed in front for short turning radius, kicked up in the rear to give a low hung body.

Dort simplicity is supplementary to Dort accessibility. Wherever an adjustment is made easier, a part is made less trappy and better within reach, there is bound to be an added accessibility.

The block motor with its detachable head and well-balanced crankshaft, the clutch and transmission in unit with the motor, the simple torsion tube in which the drive shaft is enclosed, and the compact rear axle form a clean-cut power-transmitting assembly which permits of owner repair without difficulty.

It is easy to remove any part, from a spark plug to the whole engine or rear axle. It is easy to take up wear at any point where it may occur.

JORDAN ANNOUNCES POST WAR MODELS

To the Jordan Motor Car Co. goes the laurels for producing the much-talked-about post-war model. Jordan's new Silhouette and Playboy have just been announced. The Silhouette is already on the local dealer's floor and the first cars of the Klayboy model will soon be shipped. The Jordan is handled by the St. Louis Motor Car Co.

Only a hint and a glimpse of the new cars have been given to the public, but the announcement that they are in production gives promise that they will soon be seen on the boulevards. Both models are distinctly different from anything that has yet been seen in America. The Silhouette, which is to be made in four and seven passenger sizes, is said to smack smartly of the European atmosphere, with several features of its makeup borrowed directly from the French. The Playboy, a two-passenger model, with swanky seat behind, plainly was designed for young people. As Edward S. Jordan describes it, "it's a car for a man's man, or a girl who loves the out-of-doors—a spirited companion for a wonderful girl and a wonderful boy." The Playboy will be built in limited numbers for delivery in May, in scarlet or Bungundy Old Wine.

Jordan, who designed both new models, says of the Silhouette: "Like the charming woman of today, a little slenderer than ever—a little more chic and gay." The car epitomizes the ideals of France in its exquisite oontour, warm colors, studied detail and workmanship. There is a new French angle at the dash, a cocky seat cowl and perfectly flat straight top edge without the slightest bevel.

In the tonneau of the Silhouette four there is a pleasant surprise for everyone who has grown tired of new-fashioned things and craves the old—a cordovan leather boot and saddle bag, reeking with the suggestion of silver-mounted bridles and swanky puttees.

USED CAR EXCHANGE HAS CHANGED OWNERS

For several years past, the Used Car Exchange Co., located on the northwest corner of Eighteenth and Pine streets, which has been a separate department of the Packard-Missouri Motor Car Co., for the sale of used Packard cars and various other makes, including used trucks, has been taken over by Harry H. Kraleman, who has been in the automobile business for a number of years.

When the Packard organization was changed and made a direct factory branch. Kraleman obtained a lease on the Used Car Exchange Co.'s quarters, and was made president of the new firm, which will be known as the "Used Car Exchange." A complete line of used cars will be carried ranging from light cars to the more expensive ones. Kraleman also has been made downtown distributor for Chevrolet motor cars.

GRAHAM WILL ADDRESS LOCAL AUTO TRADE

George M. Graham, vice president and sales director of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Co. of Buffalo, will be the guest of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association at a special meeting Tuesday night. The meeting will be held at the City Club following a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Many St. Louisans who heard Graham's wonderful talk to the National Automobile Dealers' Association in Chicago recently know that there was enough inspiration in it to put every man in a sales department on his toes. President P. H. Brockman of the dealers' association has issued a cordial invitation to all engaged in the automobile trade in St. Louis to hear Mr. Graham.

NEW SERVICE MANAGER.

In keeping with his plan of specializing more and more on automobile electrical appliances, William Moesrchell announced the appointment of F. H. Haack, electrical and automotive engineer, as manager of service. The Moerschell Electric Co. are now representatives for a number of electric appliances for automobiles, among which are Connecticut ignition, Splitdorf magnetos, Webster oscillators and U. S. L. batteries, the latter now being used on 54 per cent of the electrically equipped cars produced in this country.

More than 50 service stations for U. S. L. batteries have now been established throughout Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri. It is the intention of the Moerschell company to appoint a service station in each town in this territory.

BUSY ON VICTORY LOAN.

Almost every salesman engaged in the automobile trade in St. Louis is busy selling Victory Loan bonds. P. H. Brockman, president of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, has put them all to work. Brockman is in charge of the Seventeenth Ward, and C. E. Lightfoot of the General Motors Truck Co. of the Nineteenth Ward, Automobile Row being in these two wards.

TO LICENSE CARE TAKERS

A bill to license and regulate watchmen of automobiles parked in public places in St. Louis was introduced into the Board of Aldermen last Friday by A. H. Niederluecke at the instance of city officials. The measure is now before the Legislation Committee, of which Taylor B. Wyrick is chairman.

The bill forbids any person to act as caretaker of an automobile parked in a public place where parking is permitted free of charge or to enter, handle or touch any part or equipment of, or any property in, a parked automobile unless he has been licensed by the Board of Police Commissioners to serve as a watchman or unless he is the owner of the automobile, or has been authorized in writing by the owner to act as caretaker. Licensed caretakers must wear uniforms and display badges prescribed by the Police Board.

QUALITY NEWELL SAINT LOUIS

NEWELL POLICY

Why Our Used Cars Are Correctly Priced

To successfully merchandise any article it is essential to purchase it at the right figure, that is in keeping with the demand, and dispose of it at a figure carrying a legitimate profit.

We, as Distributors of the Paige and Stearns, devote our every effort to the sale of the New Paige and Stearns cars, but in the solicitation of the trade, conditions at times necessitate the acceptance of used cars as part payment on new ones purchased.

These Used Cars are worth the figure allowed by us, and in the appraising no false values are given to terminate the sale, as it would mean a loss of our profit with no recourse to recover the inflated value through resale of the used car.

Our operating expense is kept in harmony with the legitimate profit allowed by the factories who fix the price of their product—this enables us to keep our service to NEWELL STANDARD.

Time and effort given to the resale of these used cars could be spent to better advantage in the sales of New Cars, and for this reason we allow only the value or amount on the trade-in car that we know it to be worth—nothing more. Hence the reason for our prices.

We make no attempt to inflate the resale price, as the car represents to us only the amount of money we allowed on it, and for this reason we are in position to offer our Used Cars at prices that are right.

FEDERAL DOUBLE CABLE BASE TIRES

Right: Rugged Tread "Extra Ply Fabric"

Exclusive Double-Cable-Base

FOUR endless steel cables in the base of every Federal tire securely hold the tire to its rim, preventing play that wears tires out prematurely.

This exclusive advantage prevents such common troubles as pinched tubes and blow-outs just above the rim. It is a big reason why you should see a Federal dealer.

PIONEER TRUCK AND TRACTOR HERE SOON

"After several disappointments, due to the congested conditions which prevail in the plants of the big standard parts makers, we are assured of showing both the Pioneer tractor and the several sizes of Pioneer trucks this week," announced Harry Newman, president of the Pioneer Automotive Corps, yesterday.

Word was received that the initial shipments had been made and Newman was anxiously waiting word as to the exact date that they would reach St. Louis. He reports an unusual interest in the announcements of both the tractor and the truck and the office is receiving a great number of inquiries regarding selling rights. These include letters from South America and Cuba, where the farm tractor field is exceptionally fertile.

TO SELL HUDFORD UNIT.

H. P. The Dearborn Co. will represent the Hudford as distributors in the eastern half of Missouri, and Southwestern part of Illinois.

The Hudford Co. of Chicago is one of the largest and oldest truck unit companies in the United States, and has always built the internal gear drive using the Russell axle, exclusively. The Dearborn Co. will continue handling the Smith Form-a-Truck and Dearborn units, in one and two ton chain drive, besides the Dearborn one and a half ton, and two and a half ton, complete worm drive truck.

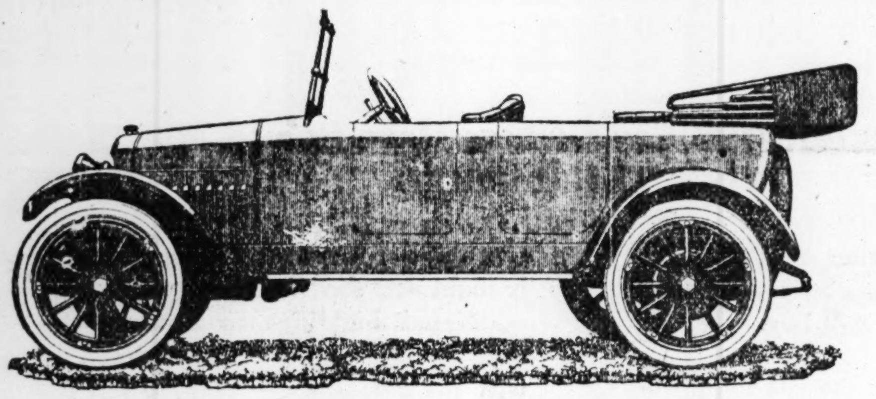
VELIE BUILDING TRACTOR

H. L. Schnure of the Velie Automobile Co., St. Louis distributors of Velie and Scripps-Booth cars, has just returned from the Velie factory which he visited to try to get deliveries rushed. He reports that he didn't have much success, as the factory at present is working on a 50 per cent production. They will be unable to get into full production before Aug. 1.

He announces that the factory is making immediate delivery on the high-grade Velie tractor, which is being manufactured on the same principal as the Velie car and truck. Qality rather than price prevails. The Velie tractor will sell at $1865.



Maxwell
—a car built 1/1000 of an inch fine

THE word "fine" has many meanings. Applied to a car it may mean the car looks fine, or it may mean the car is built fine.

The public usually makes up its mind about the former, and hears little about the latter.

Maxwell is a car built to very fine limits. When you begin to separate an inch into one-one thousandth part you will readily realize the pains taken to make the Maxwell right.

It means that each one of the working parts of the Maxwell are made accurate to that exceedingly fine point.

There's a good reason for this. In a great production like the Maxwell there would be a tremendous waste of time and materials unless there was such painstaking accuracy.

It would mean a car $200 more in price.

That is why Maxwell parts are "ground to size"—the most expensive operation in modern machine shop practice—not hand-fitted as they are in cars costing hundreds of dollars more.

And, by the way, that is why some cars cost hundreds of dollars more.

So that is one of many reasons why there is a 300,000 run on this single Maxwell chassis model. 300,000 built all on the original chassis program. 300,000 that are giving an extraordinary record of themselves.

Each new Maxwell is better than the last. Each new Maxwell is finer than the one that went before.

It is built fine. That is our idea of a fine car.

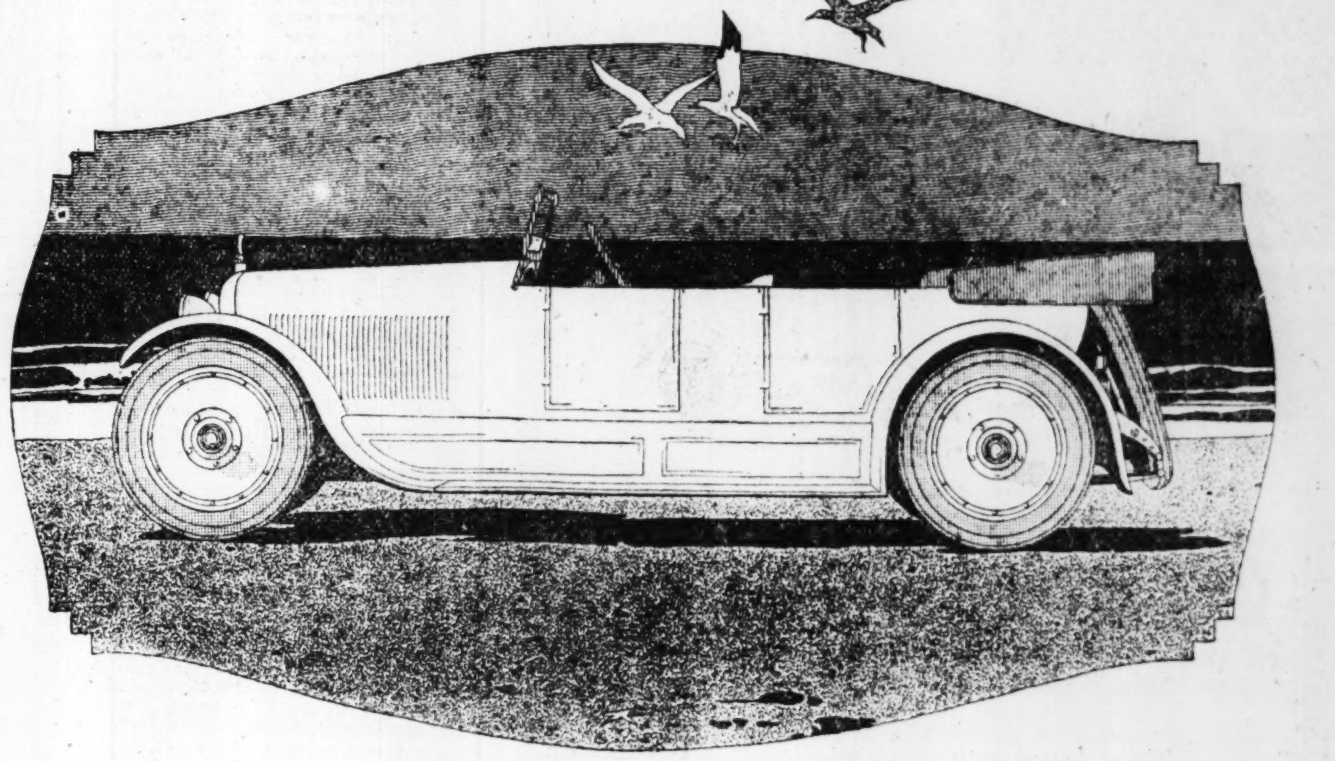
JORDAN



The New Jordan Silhouette

The New Jordan Silhouette marks the realization of another Jordan ideal—the result of another year of diligent study of what particular people want.

Its piquant profile expresses the charming ideals of France. It is full of the spirit of victory and the brightness of Spring.

And like the charming woman of today the Silhouette is a little more slender than ever—a little more chic and gay.

It is the best balanced, and the lightest car on the road—for its wheelbase.

Doors are European—opening in a full half circle. Mouldings are rectangular—characteristic of only the finest bodies. The new French angle at the dash adds a continental touch that is at once different—and prophetic of imitation.

There is a cocky tilt to the front seat cowl—refreshingly flat body-edge without the slightest trace of bevel.

Full crown fenders are stamped from costly dies with rare precision.

The hood with twenty-nine louvres is just a trifle higher with slanting sport type windshield. The body is just a trifle lower—with deep soft-cushioned seats resting almost on the floor.

In the tonneau a built-in cordovan leather boot and saddle bag forms a pleasant surprise for those who have grown tired of new fashioned things and crave the old.

The top is as carefully studied and tailored as a woman's hat—fitted with plate glass rear vision light. Hardware is artistic—lamps attractively mounted—patented rattle proof spring shackles—Cord tires, 32 x 4½.

A chassis of finished mechanical excellence including all the universally approved mechanical units—equipped with a series of all-aluminum custom style bodies.

Disc wheels are coming. Wire wheels are preferred by some. Artillery wheels—sturdy and finished in harmonious colors—standard equipment.

The Jordan Silhouette is furnished in either four or seven passenger capacity—finished in either Egyptian Bronze or Burgundy Old Wine.

NEW HUDSON CAR HAS 40 IMPROVEMENTS

The announcement that R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributors of Hudson and Essex cars, as referred to lately, is a new model O Hudson Super-six at a new price.

Incorporated in this car are 40 distinct and separate items of improvement over the previous (1919) model M car. Some of these improvements extend throughout the entire car construction, as, for instance, in the larger bearings which improve practically every vital element of the car. Especially the motor bearings, the wheel bearings, transmission, differential and pinion bearings.

The famous Super-six motor is further refined and improved in many details as indicated by the experience of the Hudson factory in manufacturing and observing the results obtained from 60,000 motors in the hands of Super-six owners.

One of the most vital improvements is in the valve tapped guides, which now have longer bearings. The carbureter is a special Hudson construction, and also shows elements of improvement.

Another important feature is the great improvement in gears which are made heavier and stronger, being constructed of the finest of materials and workmanship. Perhaps the most important feature of improvement is the construction of the chassis frame, side members of which are now seven inches deep instead of five and a half inches, as heretofore. The cross members are of unusual strength, including special tubular cross members fastened by a new process which insures extreme rigidity and strength.

A new size of wheel and new tire size is brought out for the first time, being 34x4½ on all models. A new brake construction is used, the brakes now being 2½x15½ inches, as compared to 2x14 inches formerly used. An entirely new and smooth working brake action is also used.

Great attention has been paid to the comfort of the motorists throughout, cushion springs of unusual depth and resiliency being provided.

The Hudson Super-six characteristics in the features of power, quick acceleration, smooth dependable motor and easy riding qualities have all been retained and extend through the series of improvements incorporated. The development and increased perfection of the six-cylinder motor is best exemplified in the Hudson Super-six motor, which now has the power, acceleration and flexibility of the multi-cylinder motor yet retaining practically all of the simplicity and lightness of a four-cylinder motor.

FIRESTONE MAN URGES GOOD ROADS

"The present year promises to be a banner year for good roads," says F. C. Rudisell, manager of the local Firestone branch. "This movement, the importance of which has been partially understood for a good many years, progressed steadily, though perhaps not satisfactorily, until 1918, when the exigencies of war halted its further extension just as they halted a great many other advances. And yet it was the war which brought home to us in a degree never approached before, the real significance of the movement and our national failure to apprehend that significance.

"Our widespread neglect was brought glaringly to light in many ways and on numerous occasions. Our 'arteries of commerce' were insufficient in number and weak in their construction. The astounding results achieved by the Government in helping the allies to save Europe were achieved rather in spite of our highways than by virtue of them.

"In one instance, when it was decided to deliver trains of motor trucks on the Atlantic seaboard under their own power, it took the first group eight days to reach Pittsburg; good roads would have reduced the run half the time. The victory at Chauteau Thierry is said to have been made possible by the successful performance of a motor truck, which, starting as one of four, was the only one to arrive at the front, carrying 50,000 rounds of ammunition that put the finishing touches on the American victory. What might four days' delay have meant then?"

WATER IN THE BATTERY.

C. E. Mousell, general manager of the Battery Service Co., St. Louis distributors of the Willard storage battery, has the following to say about the overheating of batteries:

"One of the biggest causes of battery trouble is due to overheating. Neglect to keep the battery filled with pure distilled water is one of the greatest, as well as one of the most common evils, and will shorten its life quicker than anything else.

"Evaporation of the water in the solution is continuous. If the level of the solution is permitted to reach a point below the tops of the plates, the upper portion is left exposed and useless. If only one-half of the surface of the plates is covered by the solution, a normal charging rate is equivalent to twice the amount of current which should go through the covered portion. This results in rapid overheating and causes damage not seen at the time, but which results in considerable expense later.

"An undercharged condition continuing for some time may be the direct cause of overheating and broken down insulation.

"When undercharged for some time, plates become hardened and offer greater resistance to the charging current. A battery in this condition must be recharged at a very low rate for a considerable time, often three or four days.

"The answer is that at every one of over 1200 Willard service stations you will find storage battery experts ready to give your battery careful attention."

BETTER BUY NOW BEFORE FARMER BEGINS

"One of the strongest reasons why prospective local purchasers of automobiles and trucks should get their orders and deposits in, even if delivery cannot be made immediately," says Henry Rottersman, local Kissel distributer, "is that with the harvesting of the gigantic winter wheat crop, the farmers are apt to buy up all available cars and trucks.

"It is calculated that the condition of the winter wheat plant is 99.8 on the largest acreage ever planted in this country. Therefore the nation's farmers have prospects, at the Government price of $2.26 a bushel, of a wheat crop worth not less than $2,250,000,000. With agriculture the foundation of all wealth, the purchasing power of the farmer, the real aristocrat of the present-day civilization, looms large, not only in automobiles, but motor trucks, tractors and other labor and time-saving equipment.

"So my advice to the "city man" is to get busy before these billions of dollars are let loose."

What Have You Done About Tires?

CHARLES C. GATES, E. M.

How 400,000 Car Owners Have Solved Their Tire Problems

You, like every other motorist this spring, are thinking about your tires—and the kind you will buy.

For 400,000 other motorists the problem is an easy one. They have learned how they can cut their tire bills in half.

These motorists are taking advantage of a new scientific principle in tire construction. Because of this new principle of construction, they are using tires which are sold under a stronger guarantee than any tire now on your car; they have all the advantages of 20% oversize and at only ½ the cost of ordinary tires.

These car owners are using Gates Half-Sole Tires.

Gates Half-Sole Tires are the invention of Charles C. Gates, E. M., and with five acres of factory working constantly night and day, we are now erecting additional buildings to double the capacity this year in order to keep up with the demand.

With these tires on your car, your tire troubles will be over—they are guaranteed puncture proof; and the largest business houses in the country are included among the 400,000 users who indorse that guarantee.

To you, Gates Half-Sole Tires mean better tire service than you have ever had before, and the cutting of your tire bills one-half.

There are over 1,000 authorized service stations where you can investigate this remarkable tire economy. Trained experts located in this territory are listed below:

Inherent Value

The Demand of Today

WAR has taught America many lessons not soon to be forgotten. We have learned the true valuation of quality. We measure worth by performance—not in dollars. Inherent value alone commands attention.

The return to peace finds us firmly attached to the practice of economy and conservation. We shun waste. We demand utmost value.

And now, with these elements in mind, the public seeks the motor car of dependability and economy. They demand performance.

Records of Stearns-Knight performance, dependability and economy are to be found everywhere. They are firmly established. To the Stearns ideals that have wrought this recognition can be added the noteworthy experience gained by these makes in building Rolls-Royce aviation motors during war days.

We confidently believe that the new series Stearns-Knight most closely approaches the quality every buyer seeks.

FUEL IS SHORT, BUT NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

"Don't worry, though at the present rate of consumption the time is not far distant when the visible supply of crude oil will be exhausted," says J. T. Salisbury of the More Automobile Co., local Marmon distributer. "In a great measure the world must look to the supply to be extracted from shale rock, of which there seems to be an almost inexhaustible supply.

"Geologists, who have the ground well mapped, place the visible supply supply of crude oil at about 14,000,000,000 barrels. When I say visible, I mean producing wells and fields that are subject to more development. One-third of this supply is located in the Mexico field, and the remaining two-thirds in other parts of the world. Right now this country is using annually about 10,000,000 barrels in excess of production. One may almost count on his fingers when the total supply will be exhausted.

"However, we need have no worry in regard to the fuel situation. The Bureau of Mines has found a substitute for the crude that we now secure by drilling, and that is crude extracted from shale that is found in immense deposits in Colorado and Utah. So far, this cannot be extracted and placed on the market to retail at less than 50 cents the gallon. The problem that faces the automobile engineer is the evolving of an engine that will make this new fuel propel a car two miles instead of one, on the same amount of fuel. I may say that the leading lights in the engineering field are already at work on this problem.

"The problem is not of carburation—it is a matter of distribution of fuel in the cylinders, and the fewer the cylinders, the easier the task; and the lighter the car the easier the task; two motor car features every prospect should consider when he investigates a car.

"He will find that the Marmon 34, for instance, holds an enviable position on fuel, oil and tire economy. Twelve to 14 miles per gallon of fuel for a car of 136 inches is almost phenomenal economy and this is what the Marmon does habitually. Fifty to 75 per cent greater tire mileage than comparable cars is, also, an established Marmon average. No need to worry about fuel shortage here or fuel costs for that matter. A great part of Marmon success is built upon such factors."

PREPARING TRAFFIC FOR BIG CONVENTION

The Traffic Motor Truck Corporation is getting ready to receive the large number of dealers from all parts of the United States who will be in St. Louis for the convention, May 9 and 10. There is a great deal to be done in a short time in the way of arranging entertainment and accommodations for the 500 to 1000 live dealers who Traffic expects.

"The business interests of the visiting dealers will be cared for by the builders of Traffic trucks, whose purpose is to show them the force that is fast making this St. Louis firm a leader in the truck industry. The dealers, representing the keenest minds in the automobile field, will have an opportunity of examining minutely the Traffic production plant, and of seeing for themselves the extensive facilities for manufacture which will soon afford an output of 50 trucks a day. Finally they can see the truck perform which is the most convincing argument to dealers that the company can offer," says a Traffic Truck official.

MANY HOLMES CARS IN OWNERS' HANDS

Twenty-four of the new Holmes improved air-cooled cars have been received by the Franklin Auto and Supply Co. since they announced the agency a little over two months ago. The majority of these are now in the hands of owners and the others are sold awaiting delivery.

"The reception which the new Holmes car has received at the hands of the public has been far ahead of our fondest expectation," said F. W. Wolffe. "Our original order to the factory was for 24 cars. We expected that these would easily fill the demand through the month of June. With only half of that time elapsed, we have marketed the entire number. Fortunately, production at the factory has reached the point where we can readily increase our allotment, a fact of which we have certainly taken advantage."

NEW DIXIE FLYER HERE.

The new Dixie Flyer, model H. S. 50, is being shown in St. Louis by the American Auto and Supply Co., 3200 Locust street. The new car is the highest class vehicle that has ever been produced by its builders, the Kentucky Wagon Manufacturing Co. Its specifications are inclusive of the Dixie-Spillman four-cylinder, 40-horsepower motor, Stromberg carburetor, Connecticut automatic ignition, vacuum feed and generator, starter, one-man top and many novel refinements. Wire wheels are special equipment. The car sells for $1365 f. o. b. factory.

NEW CARBON REMOVER.

The Car-Bo-Deen Manufacturing Co., located at the southwest corner of Theresa and Lindell avenues, reports a large number of sales of its product since the opening of the Car-Bo-Deen company. Car-Bo-Deen is a product for removing carbon from internal combustion engines and for preventing the formation of carbon monoxide, a poisonous gas, in the exhaust. A. A. Harper is the manager of this company.

KEEPS MIST FROM GLASS.

The St. Louis Auto Mist Co., 613 Century Building, has been organized to distribute Auto Mist in the State of Missouri and East St. Louis. Auto Mist is said to keep rain, mist, snow, hail and dust from forming on the windshield, on eyeglasses or any other glass surface. Several large firms have purchased this product in large quantities, and pronounce it a wonderful article.

FOR LONG TRUCK TOUR.

A meeting of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, held Tuesday, took up the question of a truck tour. The plan is to have a tour of 100 trucks, all loaded, to some nearby point, as Hannibal, Mo., to show that heavy work of this kind can be handled for long distances by trucks. The committee will report its recommendations at a meeting to be held three weeks hence.

WARNS OWNERS AGAINST THEIR WOBBLING WHEELS

A novel service to the motoring public has been inaugurated by the Southern Motor Co., the new organization which has taken over the distribution of the Grant and National lines. All of their service men, salesmen, in fact, everyone in the organization, keeps an eye open for cars the wheels of which are not running true.

Every motorist has often noticed the wabbling wheels of the car ahead and wondering whether his own wheels were out of line. The plan of the Southern Motor Co. is to have their men note the license number of such a car and the office ascertains the name of the owner of that license number and by letter calls his attention to the condition of the wheels.

As the company's shop takes care of none but its own make of cars this is merely done in the interest of the motor public in general.

How Model 90 Broke the High Gear Non-Stop Record

Could the strongest power plant ever built stand the gruelling, searching punishment planned for the Overland 90 stock model when it started on its 7 day sealed in high gear, non-stop run recently at Oklahoma City?

The first day's performance was watched by the public with eager interest—601 miles and not a sign of let-down in the car's perfect record. Then two days of rain—whirling, drenching downpours, mud-clogged roads, which tried the endurance of four relays of drivers. Yet never a complaint from the sturdy Overland!

Four days more of pounding over country lanes and thru blocked city streets—always in sealed high gear—each day showing an average of 624 miles and an average of 20.66 miles to the gallon of gasoline.

And then the amazing score at the finish. Not once had the motor missed an explosion. Not even a spark plug was changed. 4370 miles was the non-stop high gear record by the Overland 90!

Among the 600,000 Overland owners, Model 90 has long been known for its record of long life and economical service.

Let us show you an exact duplicate of this remarkable Model 90 car.

GERMANY HAD PLANES MADE OF ALUMINUM

Also Was Building Five-Motor, 1250-Horsepower Machines 140 Feet Wide.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 29.—Germany was just about ready, at the time the armistice was declared, to launch a tremendous aerial offensive by means of a fleet of new airplanes which had been perfected after months of experiments and tests.

These machines—which today stand, nearly ready for service, in the former Zeppelin works at Staaken, near Berlin—would probably have caused a revolution in flying, for they are constructed from nose to tail and wing tip to wing tip, almost entirely of aluminum and therefore are immune to that greatest of aerial dangers, burning.

They are two-seated planes of the observation rather than the "chasing" type. The only part of their construction not aluminum is a small bit of the wing, the part that tilts and tips to give the machine upward or downward direction. And the armistice came just in time to halt experiments that should have eliminated even this bit of inflammable material, and made the machine every bit aluminum. Its speed is 125 miles an hour.

Advances in Aviation.

The aluminum airplanes, however, are only a fraction of the aerial forces which Germany was carefully perfecting and storing up for the time when she should have to try to regain mastery of the air. An exhaustive trip through the former Zeppelin works, such as the Associated Press correspondent has just had an opportunity to make, illustrates what enormous advances Germany had made in aviation.

The most notable airplanes which Germany was accumulating — she had used them a little and even had lost one through defective orientation—is the five-motor, 1250-horsepower machine, capable of carrying a score of passengers or a ton and a half of bombs and a crew of eight, and which, German experts claim, far surpasses in size, strength, flying ability and general effectiveness the largest and best of the new British or Italian airplanes. They are imposing aerial monsters.

Some idea of their size may be gained from the fact that they measure some 140 feet in width from wing tip to wing tip. Each has five huge motors of 250 horsepower capacity, two on the left between the wings, two on the right in the same position and one in the rear between the body and the tail.

Simple Signal System.

Though now they are all being rebuilt so as to be available for peacetime transportation purposes, they have, when in shape for their warlike work, a cabin forward and just behind the cooling fan where a mechanician sits, a cabin for the commanding officer equipped with an amazingly complicated, yet for him simple, signal system by which he can control the actions of his entire crew and they can communicate with him at any moment, and an open floor through which he can sight at intended marks before releasing his bombs.

Before the commander's seat are registers and gauges showing the altitude and speed and an ingenious contrivance for night flying indicating exactly at what angle, to one side or the other, or up or down, the airplane is flying. A register with rows of little plugs enables him to talk with any of his crew. If, for example, the man in charge of the after-machine gun signals that the enemy is directly behind so that the tail prevents hitting him, the commander can, by pressing a switch, give the order to veer the airplane to right or left, up or down.

A delicately constructed compass is one of the complements of the tiny cabin, not only showing direction and other details, but also the tip or slant of the airplane. There are signals to the man who feeds and tends the gasoline, and, behind the commander, special safety devices for emptying immediately all of the gas tanks to avoid fire or explosion in the case of an emergency.

Behind the commander on either lower wing are two machine guns, facing fore and aft, and manned by four men. Farther to the rear is still another machine gun in the hollow of the body of the huge air bird, which can shoot through a hole in the floor at objects under the plane.

Can Stay Up 10 Hours.

The machine travels at a speed of about 80 miles an hour and can stay in the air 10 full hours. The speed and horsepower were being increased to an eventual limit of 125 miles when the war ended.

To counteract the reduced atmospheric pressure at great heights, which slows the speed, the German engineers devised another airplane with four 250-horsepower motors, alike in size and nearly in speed to the five-motor ship, but equipped with condensed or compressed air producer which automatically supplies air to the motors to enable the airplane to keep up its high speed in rarified atmosphere, and outstrip all other machines not so equipped.

Each of the airplanes which the correspondent saw cost, according to the experts, about 500,000 marks ($125,000), a great share of which goes to the account of the infinitely complicated mechanism that is so striking a feature of each machine.

The Gotha type of airplane, which sometimes was used in bombarding Paris, though a big, powerful machine, is insignificant in size when seen alongside the new machine.

New Hair Remover in Demand, Say Druggists

(Phelactine Removes Roots and All.)

Since the virtues of phelactine as a hair-remover became generally known, druggists in this country have been having a really extraordinary demand for this remarkable product. The fact that it actually removes the roots—before one's very eyes—as well as the surface hair, is of course mainly responsible for its large and increasing sale. The new method is not to be compared at all with the usual depilatory, electrical or other processes. It is entirely safe, non-irritating, non-poisonous, odorless—and instantaneous! A stick of phelactine, used in accordance with the simple instructions which accompany it, is certain to satisfy and delight the user.—ADV.

COUNTY TAKES 56 PER CENT OF LOAN QUOTA, CITY 26

$13,451,300 Victory Bonds Sold in St. Louis, of $51,342,600 Allotment, in Five-Day Period.

UP TO THE CITY TO 'MAKE IT 3 STRAIGHT'

34,461 Individual Subscribers Compared to 85,305 in Same Period of Last Issue.

St. Louis County has raised 56.6 per cent of its quota in the first week of the Victory (Fifth Liberty) Loan campaign, it was announced last night by Collins Thompson, chairman for the county. Yesterday's returns were $275,900, bringing the amount up to $704,800. The county's quota is $1,244,000.

Although the quota for the city of St. Louis is only a little more than two-thirds it was in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, the latest report of sales shows a lower percentage than that for the same period in the campaign of last October.

The city's figure, as reported yesterday afternoon, was $13,451,300 for the first five days, ending Friday night. This is 26.1 per cent of the city's quota, which is $51,342,650. In the first five days of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, $23,193,050 was raised. This was 30.5 per cent of the city's quota, which in that campaign was $75,856,900.

In the actual amount subscribed, regardless of percentages and quotas, the five-day period ending Friday night is $9,741,750 behind the corresponding period last fall.

Eighth District Leading.

The Eighth (St. Louis) Federal Reserve District, which is leading the reserve districts of the United States, as it did in the Third and Fourth Liberty Loan campaigns, was reported last night as having raised to midnight Friday, 30 per cent of its quota. The Eighth District comprises Missouri, except the western tier of counties, all of Arkansas, and parts of five other states. In the present computation, St. Louis and St. Louis County appear separately from the remainder of the Missouri part of the district. The figures by sections up to midnight Friday are:

Section	Subscription	Per Cent
Indiana	$ 9,337,050	66.2
Tennessee	7,567,550	52.5
Mississippi	5,410,050	50.6
Arkansas	7,887,000	38.3
St. Louis Co.	428,900	35.2
St. Louis	13,451,300	26.1
Missouri	6,539,100	17.5
Kentucky	3,811,700	15.5
Illinois	4,083,750	13.4
Total	$58,516,400	30.

The district quota is $195,000,000.

The St. Louis War Loan Organization, in a statement issued last night ,said the St. Louis district was likely to repeat its former achievement of completing its quota first, thus fulfilling its motto, "Make It Three Straight," unless the city of St. Louis, lagging behind, holds the district back.

It is pointed out that the number of individuals in the city who subscribed and bought coupon books in the first five days of this campaign was 34,461, while in the corresponding days of the last campaign it was 85,305, or nearly two and one-half times as many.

Larger Subscriptions.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York has subscribed $150,000 as the St. Louis allotment of its subscription. Employes of the Pullman company here, other than shopmen, have subscribed $40,300. The Guardian Life Insurance Co. has subscribed $20,000 here.

A sale of Victory notes to fur buyers at the two weeks spring sale, which opens tomorrow at the International Fur Exchange, is being arranged by Philip B. Fouke, president of Funsten Bros. & Co. The Great Lakes Training Station Band will be sent to the Exchange to help the sale along, and R. M. Moss, who fought with the famous Sixth Regiment of Marines at Chateau-Thierry, will be a speaker. Buyers attending the fur sale here last fall subscribed for more than $1,000,000 worth of Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds.

Of the leaders of sales teams in downtown districts, F. Schlafly was reported yesterday as in the lead, with a total of $1,367,400, and H. Schlesinger was second with $816,500. In the residence wards, the Sixteenth Ward team, with J. N. Wellman Jr. as its leader, had the largest figure, $525,150, and the Seventeenth, P. H. Brockman, chairman, was second, with $408,500.

How Teams Stand.

The downtown list is: F. Schlafly, $1,367,400; H. Schlesinger, $816,500; F. B. Miller, $618,900; A. Stix, $594,450; H. O. Ross, $550,550; S. Schulte, $644,100; Walter Stolz, $360,450; E. P. Stinde, $277,860; G. N. Givan, $247,600; F. H. Doenges, $246,450; E. Bennett, $242,450; W. A. Sommers, $240,450; E. Robert, $207,850:

70 YEARS MAY BE REQUIRED TO MAKE UP FRANCE'S LOSSES

Total of Deaths During War Close to 3,000,000 and Birth Rate Falls Every Week.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, April 26.—With the return of peace, France has to face problems of great danger to her immediate future. Foremost among these is the question of repopulation. How shall France make good her losses by war and sickness when the birthrate continues to drop every week that goes by?

A French statistician has reckoned that at the present rate it will take 70 years to make up her losses during the war. From August 2, 1914, to Jan. 1, 1918, the deaths in the 77 departments not invaded by the enemy totalled 883,160. In 1918 there were 300,000 deaths, while it is reckoned that 1919, if the present sanitary arrangements are not improved, will see the passing away of another 250,000 men and women.

Cruel treatment inflicted by Germans in the invaded districts is said to have been the cause of 130,000 deaths, and if one adds to this the already heavy list of 1,385,000 soldiers killed in battle the total of deaths is very close to 3,000,000.

If the French birth rate continues as it was in the 10 years from 1900 to 1910, France 40 years hence will have become a secondary power. According to the statistics published in other countries, Great Britain will make good her deficit of 800,000 deaths in the war in 10 years, Germany will replace her 1,950,000 killed in 12 years, and Italy her 500,000 in 38 years.

LODGE SAYS WILSON'S STAND ON FIUME IS INCONSISTENT

Arguments Pertaining to Adriatic City Apply to Danzig and Poland, Declares Senator.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 26.—United States Senator Lodge declared tonight that President Wilson's stand in regard to Fiume was inconsistent with his attitude concerning Danzig. He said the President's attitude toward Danzig was a betrayal of the Poles, while it was incredible that an outlet to the Adriatic could not have been found for the Jugo-Slavs, except through Fiume. He spoke at a meeting of the Middlesex Club.

"It seems utterly incredible," said Senator Lodge, "that it would not have been possible to give the Jugo-Slavs access to the Adriatic and also protect the rights of Italy.

"Danzig is at the mouth of the Vistula and the building up of Poland is one of the necessities of the times. Poland must have access to the sea. Poland is a barrier state and it must be built up. The paragraph relating to Poland was the only one of the 14 commandments that was specific. If Poland does not get Danzig it will be shut up and will have to carry on its commerce through a German-managed port.

"It appears to me an absolute betrayal of Poland not to return Danzig to her. Our representative's attitude relative to Danzig does not square with his attitude in relation to Fiume. I cannot see why the arguments pertaining to Fiume do not apply to Danzig and Poland."

MISSOURI FRUIT AND GARDENS DAMAGED BY COLD WEATHER

Severe Loss in River Counties—Lack of Rain in Southern Section of the State.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—The continued cold weather of the last few days has done substantial, though not fatal, injury to the peach crop in many places in Missouri; has injured the apple crop, and the temperature of 34 degrees Friday night wrought havoc with early gardens in many parts of the State.

The lack of rain is doing serious damage to oats in many of the southern counties. The gardens and the fruit suffered severely in the river front counties. In the upland the harm done is slight.

THOMAS CARTER JR., BROKER, KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Drives Into Farmer's Truck While Hurrying Home After Golf Game at St. Louis Country Club.

GOING 60 MILES AN HOUR, WITNESSES SAY

Owner of Truck and His Adopted Son Are Severely Cut Beneath Vehicle Thrown Into Ditch.

Thomas W. Carter Jr., 33 years old, a grain and cotton broker, and a son of Thomas W. Carter of 5 Portland place, was instantly killed at 7:30 o'clock last evening when his automobile crashed into the rear end of a farmer's automobile truck on the Clayton road, a quarter mile west of North and South road, St. Louis County, when Carter was hurrying home to keep a dinner engagement with his wife. He resided with his wife's mother, Mrs. Thomas W. Crouch, 4001 Delmar boulevard.

Carter had been playing golf during the afternoon at the Sunset Hill Country Club. After leaving there he was stopped at 4:45 o'clock at Clayton road and Pennsylvania avenue by a Deputy Sheriff who said he was zig-zagging, and that he forced the deputy's machine off the road. He gave bond before Justice Stecker at Clayton to appear at 10 a. m. Monday.

From the Justice's office he drove to Busch's Grove, less than half a mile west of where the accident occurred, and remained there until he started home, about 7:25 o'clock. He remarked as he departed that he must hurry in order to be home in time. Two witnesses whom he passed just before he hit the truck testified at the inquest last night that he was going "between 60 and 70 miles an hour."

Two on Truck Injured.

Anthony Waythe, 42 years old, owner and driver of the truck, and his adopted son, Frank Tockstein, 12, who was with him, were severely cut and bruised when the impact turned the truck over into a ditch, catching them under it. Carter's machine turned over on its side, facing almost the opposite direction from that in which it was going.

Thomas W. Carter Sr., who is 68 years old, is president of the Carter Commission Co., with offices in the Pierce Building, and his son was in business with him. Another son is L. Ray Carter, a grain broker, of 8 Portland place. A third son, Le Roy Carter, lives with his parents. Mrs. Thomas W. Crouch is the widow of a wealthy East Side livestock commission dealer, and her daughter was married to Carter about 12 years ago. They had no children.

Carter's automobile was a high-powered Marmon chummy roadster, said to be capable of more than 70 miles an hour. The crash occurred 50 feet past the summit of Sharp's Hill, at the bottom of which is "Death Valley," so termed because of the number of automobile accidents that have occurred there.

It appeared that Carter, taking the steep hill at high speed, gained the top before he saw the truck, which was going down the eastern slope ahead of him, and then was unable to turn out for it.

The verdict of the Coroner's jury was that he was killed by the fall resulting from the collision which occurred when he "was traveling at high speed."

Witnessed Carter's Passing.

Waythe's home is about 100 yards west of the scene of the accident. Fred Price and Joseph Baggett, who had left Waythe's home to walk to Busch's Grove, were the witnesses who told of the speed at which Carter passed them. Price testified he remarked:

"That fellow will certainly hit somebody before he gets to town," and that almost immediately he heard the crash of the collision, more than a block away, although unable to see it for the crest of the hill.

Carter was catapulted from his machine, and alighted on his head in the middle of the road about 15 feet away. The body was allowed to remain there for 30 minutes waiting for the arrival of the Coroner, and a large number of automobiles, most of them containing women, stopped on each side of the spot.

Finally such a large crowd gathered that Sheriff Bopp removed the body to Clayton, without waiting for the Coroner. Waythe and Tockstein also were taken there for treatment.

Carter has spent much of his time in New York and Chicago, trading on the cotton and grain exchanges. He had been living here only a few months. Besides his parents and his two brothers, he is survived by one sister, Mrs. John Higgins of Worcester, Mas.

TUMULTY AIDS IN HUNT FOR RUNAWAY GIRL FOUND HERE

President's Secretary Asked Police to Search for Stepdaughter of His Friend, Donald Brian, Actor.

MISS, 14, REGISTERED AT JEFFERSON AS 'MRS.'

Tired of School and Thought She Was Not 'Understood' —Father Is Charles H. Pope, Rich Eastern Broker.

Florence Pope, 14 years old, daughter of Mrs. Donald Brian of Great-Neck, L. I., tired of school and ran away from home April 1 to become a "movie" actress, and for whom the St. Louis police had since been searching, was arrested yesterday when she was found in room 512 at the Hotel Jefferson, where she had registered under the name of Mrs. Helen Gilliar. She is being held in the matron's detention room pending the arrival of her mother.

The girl at first denied her identity, but later confessed in tears that she was the girl for whom Joseph P. Tumulty, private secretary to President Wilson, and the New York police department had urged the St. Louis police to search for here.

Chief of Police O'Brien on April 4 received a telegram from John J. Gray, Inspector of Detectives of New York City, advising him that the girl had run away from home, and urging that a search of hotels, the Y. W. C. A., and theatrical agencies be made. Subsequent telegrams were received from Joseph A. Faurot, Inspector of Police of New York, and from Secretary Tumulty.

Secretary Tumulty's Telegram.

The message from the latter came from the White House at Washington, and was dated April 18. It read:

"I will consider it a great personal favor if you will use every effort to locate Florence Pope, as her stepfather, Donald Brian, is an old friend of mine."

The telegrams from the police officials in New York told of the great anxiety caused there by her disappearance. No trace of her was found here, however, until yesterday afternoon when Inspector Faurot wired that she would be found at the Jefferson, where she had registered as Mrs. Gilliar. The police had been searching for her in second-class hotels and rooming houses, and had made inquiries at theatrical agencies.

The girl had but 87 cents when found. She is tall and slender and appears to be 19 years old, which she first told the police was her age. She has light blue eyes, black hair and fair complexion and was dressed in a crepe de chine waist and expensive blue serge suit, and wore a large black "picture hat."

To the police she claimed to be a widow, but would give no details. The police had been informed that she told a Pullman conductor on her way to St. Louis that she was the wife of an army officer. She denied this to a Post-Dispatch reporter, but said she married nine months ago and that her husband since had died.

Says She Is Movie Actress.

She said that she came to St. Louis to go into the movies and claimed that she had been playing ingenue part for a local motion picture concern, but would not tell the name of the company, nor give the location of the studio.

Her expenses, she said, she paid with money from a $200 monthly allowance given to her by her father. When told that persons at Hotel Jefferson claimed to know that she was the stepdaughter of Donald Brian, the actor, she admitted that was her stepfather's name, but denied he was an actor.

Dispatches from New York yesterday said that when the girl departed from Great Neck, Mrs. Brian was not greatly perturbed.

"The child will be back before long," she told inquiring friends, "for she hasn't any money and she can't go far without it."

The girl, however, is said to have had $400. She is said to have intercepted one of the $300 checks which her father, Charles Pope, contributes from time to time for her support and education. The other $100 she obtained from her stepfather, Donald Brian, by such a clean-cut piece of workmanlike acting that he admits she earned it.

She had not been regular in attending school. There had been some discord in the family when the school reports came in and Florence was known to feel that "nobody understood her." With this state of affairs as a basis for her acting she went to Brian in York and wept on his shoulder, telling him that she stayed away from school because she didn't have money to spend like the other girls, who had plenty of it. He gave her $100.

The girl immediately purchased

U. S. SEAPLANE IN 20-HOUR FLIGHT DOES 1250 MILES

World's Record for Such Craft Made at Hampton Roads by Machine With Two Liberty Motors.

AUGURS WELL FOR TRANSATLANTIC TRIP

Four Men Carried in Airplane That Is Smaller Than Those to Be Used on Ocean Journey.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—A naval seaplane of the F-5 type, propelled by two Liberty motors of 400 horse power each and carrying a crew of four men, remained in the air at the Hampton Roads naval base for 20 hours and 10 minutes yesterday, establishing what naval officials said tonight was a world's record for seaplanes. The machine covered a distance of about 1250 miles, averaging a little more than 60 miles an hour despite the fact that a gale of from 20 to 30 miles was blowing.

Twenty hours is the time officials have estimated will be necessary for the three naval seaplanes to make the Transatlantic flight from New Foundland to Ireland if a direct route finally is decided upon and they said that as the machine making the record at Norfolk is much smaller than those to go overseas, yesterday's performance augurs well for the success of the over-seas attempt.

The distance from New Foundland to Ireland is slightly more than 1900 miles, but the planes under commander John H. Towers are capable of faster speed than those of the F-5 type. Their cruising speed probably will be about 70 miles an hour.

Officers manning the machine which established the new record yesterday, were Lieutenant H. B. Grow, of the regular navy and Ensign H. S. Souther, D. Thomas and R. Irwine, of the naval reserve force. So far as could be learned tonight ,none of these men has been selected for the Transatlantic flight.

Captain Noble E. Irwin, director of naval aviation, said tonight that yesterday's record had only once been exceeded by a heavier than air machine, a German airplane having remained in the air for a longer period before the great war began. The previous record for American naval seaplanes was about 10 hours, it was said.

Captain Irwin declared that this flight had no particular reference to the Transatlantic flight.

Naval orders published today disclosed that Lieut. Walter Hinton, attached to the air station at Rockaway Beach, Long Island, has been selected as one of the crew to man the overseas planes, Lieut. Hinton enlisted in the navy Sept. 24, 1917, and only recently was promoted to his present grade. His home is in Ohio.

It also became known today that Lieut. Elmer F. Stone of the coast guard, who has been assisting with preparations for the flight, will be among those to make the journey to Europe. He went to New Foundland with Lieutenant Commander P. N. L. Bellinger, on the destroyer Barney early this month to locate a starting place for the Transatlantic flight.

2 STEAMERS SUNK, MANY LIVES LOST, SAYS CHILEAN REPORT

One Vessel Destroyed by Storm Off Corral, Other Goes Down in Collision.

By the Associated Press.

VALPARAISO, Chile, April 26.—Heavy loss of life is reported in the sinking of the steamers Magdalena (Chilean) and Alfonso.

The Magdalene went down in a storm five miles off Corral. The Alfonso was sunk in collision with the steamer Fortuna.

PRESIDENT TO REST TODAY

Plans Long Auto Ride in Preparation for Arduous Week.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—Premier Lloyd George will visit the devastated regions tomorrow. This, with Rear Admiral Grayson's determination to obtain for President Wilson a full day's rest, will make Sunday without official activity for him.

The President plans a long motor ride and complete cessation of work preparatory to an arduous week, the end of which is expected to bring the first meeting with the German delegates.

Are you going to the Theater or Movies tonight? If so, see Page 11, Part 2.

ORLANDO RETURNS TO ROME; GREAT CROWD GIVES HIM AN OVATION

Thunderous Shouts of "Yes" Greet His Question Whether Delegates Interpreted Will of People.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 26.—Vittorio Orlando, the Italian Premier, arrived in Rome this morning from Paris. He will confer with King Victor Emmanuel. He then will hold a council of Ministers and make a report of occurrences in Paris. At that meeting a decision will be reached whether to convoke Parliament immediately or to leave unchanged the date of meeting, which has been fixed for May 6.

Premier Orlando, addressing the crowd which greeted him here, said:

"It is not time for fine language. In the face of the world, whch is judging us, we must have firmness and a calm, serene conscience.

"There are two questions. The first is whether the Government and the Italian delegates have faithfully interpreted the thoughts and will of the Italian people."

Thunderous Shouts of "Yes."

The response was thunderous shouts of "Yes."

"I never doubted it," continued the Premier, "for I know the soul of my people, but confirmation was required. The first question is answered. Rome is consecrating our work."

"The second question is to estimate the gravity of the situation," he continued. Let us not now consider what best or most desirable can happen to our Italy. We must show that we have taken the worst into consideration. At this moment Italy is ready, and greater than ever—greater than in May, 1915.

Points to Danger of Hour.

"The decision must be well considered. Food supplies are failing us, but Italy, which has known hunger, has never known dishonor. I do not conceal from you the danger of this very critical hour. (Cries of "We will face anything").

"I am with you," continued the Premier, " a brother among brothers, and also a chief who asks to obey and follow the will of the people. It may be that we shall find ourselves alone, but Italy must be united and have a single will. Italy will not perish."

At the close of his address the Premier was given an ovation. Gen. Diaz and Signor Barzilai of the peace delegates, then spoke and were cheered by the soldiers and sailors.

Prince Colonna, Mayor of Rome, asserted that there was complete solidarity of the people of Rome and of Italy with the Government.

Premier Orlando, Gen. Diaz, Prince Colonna and Signor Barzilai entered motor cars and a procession was formed which proceeded to the royal palace in Quirinal square.

The fervor of the crowd was unbounded. Patriotic songs and all kinds of yells filled the air, with cries of "Viva Fiume," and "Dalmatia."

The city was decorated only with Italian flags. The Via Nationale was brilliant with Italy's tri-color, and only one foreign flag was to be seen, a British flag over the British army headquarters.

No feeling antagonistic to Americans was shown, the whole demonstration being a fervent manifestation in behalf of Italy's claims. An American Lieutenant cheered the Premier with the rest of those assembled, and the Italians nearby cheered the American, crying out, "Viva America."

Auto Jammed in Crowd for Hour.

For more than an hour the automobile containing Premier Orlando, Gen. Diaz and Signor Barbilai was so surrounded by the immense crowd outside the station that it could not move. The Premier was repeatedly obliged to address the people amidst uproarious applause.

Allusion having been made to possible retaliation against Italy by the restriction of her food supplies, the Premier exclaimed: "The Italian people have often known hunger, but never dishonor." These words were received with intense enthusiasm, the people crying: "Death rather than betrayal of our brothers across the Adriatic."

Rome was beflagged in greeting to the returning Premier. The offices and shops were closed and the members of some 200 associations, clubs and patriotic leagues, bearing banners with the legend, "Italy, Fiume, Dalmatia," went to the railway station or lined themselves along the thoroughfares which Premier Orlando would pass on his way from the station to the Ministry of the Interior. All the Cabinet Ministers in Rome, high offcials of state, Prince Colonna, the Mayor of Rome, and 300 Senators and Deputies assembled inside the station to receive the Prime Minister.

Among the Senators was noticed Count Greppi, 101 years old, who, notwithstanding his age, wished to be present, he said, "to witness an event consecrating the complete unity of Italy."

The crowd was touched by the presence of maimed soldiers, carried to the station in military lorries. There also were on hand veterans of the wars for independence, red-shirted Garibaldians among them.

Senators are reaching Rome on all trains and show confidence that the Cabinet will approve Premier Orlando's leaving the peace conference and proclaim the necessity for a united front by all parties in defense of Italian interests.

Message to U. S. Planned.

A message from the Senate and Chamber of Deputies to the American Congress expressing the desire for solidarity between the two nations and reaffirming the justice and right of Italian aspirations is being planned.

Demonstrations in protest against President Wilson's attitude relative to Fiume and the Dalmatian coast continued with increasing enthusiasm. In all the chief towns of Italy there were parades and manifestations yesterday. Crowds carrying flags and placards bearing inscriptions such as "Viva Italia," "Viva France," and "Viva Dalmatia" marched through the streets. One placard read: "Italy alone will settle her own affairs."

Prof. Luigi Luzzatti, former Premier and Minister of the Interior, has sent a telegram to Premier Clemenceau of France, appealing to his friendly sentiments toward Italy, and asking him to exert his best efforts to obtain satisfaction of Italy's demands. The telegram concluded: "All Italy, in this hour of passion, trusts in you."

American organizations, including army and navy representatives, the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and Knights of Columbus, are not taking any extra precautions to guard against demonstrations, as it is universally felt there will be no violence directed against Americans. Military officers say they expect no trouble and will continue their routine work.

The Executive Committee of the Liberal party has adopted a resolution indorsing the attitude of the Italian delegation, while the Masonic order in Italy has issued a proclamation calling upon its members in this country and abroad "to remain firm and stand up for the cause of liberty and justice."

Senator Mazziotti in giving his views on the developments,said there was only danger to the allies in continuing to negotiate peace without Italy. He realized the difficulty President Wilson would have in withdrawing from his position, but he thought it would not be impossible to find a solution of the problem which would result in the resumption of the peace negotiations with Italy taking part in them.

The King has made the Mayor of Zara a grand officer of the Order of the Crown of Italy. Zara is the capital of Dalmatia, and an important seaport on the eastern shore of the Adriatic.

"I Answered 'No,'" Says Orlando; Crowd, Approving, Shouts "No!"

TURIN, Friday, April 25.—When Vittorio Orlando, Italian Premier, reached this city today on his way from Paris to Rome, he was greeted by an immense throng. Standing in an automobile, the Premier spoke briefly to the crowd.

"For the past six weeks I have been defending Italy's rights, but at last I was conscious that my responsibility had to end with a 'No.' Doubt has been expressed whether this monosyllable truly corresponds to the thoughts behind it, and whether it has echo in your hearts. How should I have answered?"

Thereupon there arose a great united shout of "No," the whole crowd repeating the word "No" again and again and waving flags, hats and handkerchiefs. The demonstration lasted for 10 minutes. Similar enthusiasm followed speeches by Signor Barzilai and Gen. Diaz.

PLEDGE FROM FIUME "TO BE ITALIAN OR CEASE TO EXIST"

Young Latins in City Declare It Shall Be Annexed—Vast Crowd in Accord With Aspirations.

By the Associated Press.

FIUME, April 26.—A vast crowd, including the members of many organizations, escorted the national council which visited Gen. Gorziola today to express the city's determination to be annexed to Italy.

ROME, April 26.—Societies of young Italians of Fiume met on Friday ,says a dispatch from that city, and passed resolutions protesting against "the attempt to infringe upon the sanctity of Italy's right to Fiume and Dalmatia." The societies pledged themselves that Fiume should be Italian "or cease to exist."

RUMANIANS CONTINUE ADVANCE

Several Small Engagements Reported by Budapest.

By the Associated Press.

BASLE, April 26.—The Rumanians continue their advance on Budapest from the south, and on Friday morning were on a line from Varsares-Nemeny-Nireakta to south of Gyula. Several small battle dispatches from Budapest say, were fought during the advance.

The Rumanians launched an attack on the northern wing Thursday.

LAST OF ITALIAN ENVOYS LEAVE PARIS; ANXIOUS DAY IN COUNCIL

Reports From Rome Indicate Feeling of Populace May Prevent Contemplated Adjustment After Orlando Consults Parliament on Claims.

ISSUE NOT TAKEN UP AT MEETING

Wilson and Premiers Dispose of Details in Preparation for Meeting Germans Wednesday—Strong British Approval for President's Stand.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—This has been one of the most anxious days of the peace conference, with all eyes turned toward Rome.

While work proceeded on the final details of the treaty before the meeting with the German delegates at Versailles, the absorbing topic everywhere was the Italian issue and the effect it had in store for the conference. Brief informaton reaching official quarters showed the situation at Rome to be very tense, with anti-American sentiment running high.

The departure of Baron Sonnino and Signor Salandra at 2 o'clock this afternoon for Rome took the last of Italy's plenipotentiaries from the scene of the negotiations, leaving only subordinates, without power of action.

An immense crowd of French and Italians cheered Baron Sonnino and Sig. Salandra when they left Paris. Stephen Pichon, French Foreign Minister, came to the station to take leave, while the Italian Ambassadors to France and the United States and numerous Italian and French military and naval officers also were present.

Sig. Salandra's wife and family,who accompanied the delegates to Rome, were presented with boquets as they stepped aboard the train. Cheers for Italy and France, "Italian Fiume," and Dalmatia and the singing of the Italian national anthem marked the departure of the train.

Wilson Confers With Americans.

President Wilson joined the American delegation at the Hotel de Crillon at 2 o'clock for a conference of 45 minutes, and then returned to the "White House" for a renewal of the council of Premier Clemenceau and Lloyd George.

It was stated after the American meeting that the discussion was on the details of the treaty and that the Ialian matter only came up incidentally, as no detailed reports had been received from the American embassy at Rome and there was no change in the general attitude of the Italian issue.

Experts who attended the meeting of the council yesterday said that the members looked "completely worn out," but the President today showed no outward evidence of this strain, as he wore his usual buoyant smile.

All indications point to the fact that Premier Lloyd George and Premier Clemenceau are standing squarely with the President on the Italian issue, thus presenting a united front of the principal great Powers. Further written statements have thus far been withheld, in order not to inflame Italian sentiment further. But friends of the President took steps today to relieve him from being the sole person to bear the burden, and this may lead to some public declaration of the British and French attitude.

Meantime, it can be stated that President Wilson's copy of his Italian declaration bears the initials of Clemenceau and Lloyd George. The French Premier affixed his signature last Monday and gave his approval for its publication Tuesday, but the President delayed its issuance until Wednesday. Besides this initialed approval of the British and French Premiers, another written document exists which was prepared immediately after the issuance of the President's statement, with a view to expressing approval and support from the highest British official quarters. This is not from Lloyd George, but from one able to speak with authority on foreign affairs. It is devoted chiefly to Fiume, examining the question at length and concluding against the Italian position and in support of the President.

Name of Italy in Treaty.

It is significant that the name of Italy has been included in the final draft of the peace treaty, indicating that the allies hold no change in Italy's status as signatory of the treaty. The preamble as drafted con-

GERMAN ENVOYS TAKE GOLF KITS TO VERSAILLES

Warburg Scores First "Victory" When He Induces French Official to Permit an Hour's Walk.

DELEGATES IN BED AT 10, BREAKFAST AT 7:30

Enjoy Chocolate, Coffee, Jam and Fresh Butter — Three Hotels to Be Required for Whole Party.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—The afternoon newspapers devoted much space today to the German peace delegates at Versailles, describing how they went to bed at 10 o'clock last night and breakfasted at 7:30 this morning on cholocate, coffee, grape and apricot jams and fresh butter.

The delegates have expressed the opinion that the rooms reserved in the Hotel des Reservoirs and the Hotel Vatel would be insufficient for the number of Germans arriving, so it has been determined to requisition in addition the Hotel Suisse.

Baron von Lersner, formerly secretary of the German embassy at Washington and one of the prominent members of the delegation again has insisted that greater liberty be allowed the party, showing a letter from Gen. Nudant, representative of Marshal Foch at Spa, which promised the Germans complete liberty. "Furthermore," he declared, "we would attract far less notice if not kept within a small space."

Allowed to Go for Walk.

After having refreshed themselves the Germans decided they would go for a walk—do nothing less than visit Versailles. Crossing the garden around the hotel they found the gate closed and padlocked. Thereupon the Germans summoned the guard and demanded to be allowed to go for a stroll. While Baron Lersner looked on, Herr Max Warburg of Hamburg called upon Oudaille, Chief of the French Guard, and remarked: "Gen. Nudant, the French Commander at Spa, assured us we should be free to move at our discretion."

To this Oudaille replied: "I have no objection, but you must not go into the town."

"That's not enough," retorted Herr Warburg, "it makes us feel too much as if we were prisoners. We act differently in Germany where your officers walk about in uniform, unmolested."

"There is no comparison," returned Oudaille. "This is not as if you were in Germany. But if you give me your word of honor you will not go further than the Neptune Basin I will allow you to go out."

The delegates filed out and returned in a little more than an hour. The extent to which they mean to enjoy their full liberty is shown by the fact that the Germans have brought their golfing kit and it will be strange if they do not challenge the allied delegates to a round on the Laboudie Links, two miles out from Versailles.

Besides Baron von Lersner, Banker Warburg, head of the financial delegation; Herr Dunker of the Food Administration and six servants are in the party.

Telegrams have passed between the advance guard and Berlin announcing its safe arrival at Versailles. The full delegation will comprise 150 persons in addition to those who already have arrived.

The Germans were met at the station by Col. Henry of the Ministry of War Commissary, and M. Oudaille of the Ministry of the Interior, who were delegated by the Foreign Office to take charge of the German representatives.

Arrival Quietly Arranged.

The arrival of Lersner and his party was so quietly arranged that few, if any, persons in Versailles outside the carefully selected force of hotel servants assigned to their rooms and to the serving of meals were aware even in the afternoon of their presence.

A French detective of the most obvious "plain clothes" type, lounging at the front entrance to that wing of the Hotel des Reservoirs, and companions under the windows of the rooms looking over Versailles Park, were the only indications of the character of the state guests who had displaced civilian lodgers and forced them to seek other shelter in crowded Versailles.

Protection and the avoidance of possible unpleasant incidents, rather than restrictions, will, in fact, be the purpose of such police measures as are taken, according to a statement made to the Associated Press today by one of the French officers assigned to the mission. The Germans will not be expected and probably do not desire, to extend their movements into the general quarters of Versailles, but they will be allowed freedom of movement between their two hotels.

A small but persistent crowd of curious persons and a formidable battery of cameras and moving picture machines hung about Versailles beneath the windows of the German headquarters today in expectation of the appearance of the German representatives, but aside from brief excursions by Delegates von Lersner and Warburg in the morning, they had little to reward them for their pains, as none of the Germans again appeared.

A French telephone representative called in the afternoon for consultation regarding the installation of telephones to connect the Hotel des Reservoirs headquarters, not only with Germany, but also with the bureaus assigned to Germans in the Grand Trianon, where the preliminary conference will be held. The deliberations will be held in the hall used for convocations of the supreme military rouncil.

The seating arrangements of the conference room, now installed, evidently do not contemplate the presence of the delegates of all the allied and associated Powers at the preliminary meetings. Space limitations prevent the representatives of the 23 Powers at war with Germany from meeting in this room unless all the tables and chairs are removed and the deliberations conducted standing.

Unlike the hall of mirrors in the Versailles palace, in which it is planned to have the peace treaty signed, this room has no venerable associations.

Hotel Servants Wait Upon Them.

Herr Lersner and his party immediately went to their rooms on arriving, and had breakfast served to them from the hotel kitchen by the hotel servants. This fact answered a question over which the French newspaper men have been concerned whether the Germans were expected to bring their own food to Versailles. It is now understood that they will have their own bills of fare on the same footing as the other peace delegates.

The large dining room in the main wing of the Hotel Des Reservoirs has been reserved for them. The smaller dining room, with glass inclosed veranda, remains accessible to the general public.

Will Be Allowed to Use Code.

The Germans remained in their rooms during the morning, but commenced in the afternoon to make preliminary arrangements for the arrival of the main German delegation. This probably will be May 1, although the date has not been finally determined.

The German delegation will be allowed to use code in communicating with Germany, and will have direct telephonic and telegraphic connections. The Germans will also be allowed to use couriers who will enjoy full diplomatic immunity.

THREE SHIPS CARRYING MISSOURI TROOPS DUE AT NEWPORT NEWS TODAY

Signal Battalions, Machine Gunners and Supply and Sanitary Trains Among Those Expected—No Word From 138th.

By CLAIR KENAMORE.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 26.—Ships bearing Thirty-fifth Division troops will come here tomorrow like homing pigeons, three of them being posted to pass the Capes at 5 a. m., which will put them at the wharf at 7. a.m.

Up to the present there has been no late wireless report from the Aeolus, bearing the 138th Infantry, and the embarkation officers carry it on the boards as due April 29. No troops arrived today and the day was spent in Camp Stuart in refurnishing the men of the 139th Infantry and the 128th Machine Gun Battalion. All of Maj. Halliburton's machine gunners have gone through the delousing process again, and new clothes are being issued. There is also a pressing plant where men go, take off their clothes, press them and put them on again. They will take on this job tomorrow. The machine gunners formerly were in the Second Missouri Infantry. A company from Carthage and B. from Nevada and Butler.

A telegram received today announces that Col. Wm. Raup, former commander of the Second Missouri will arrive here Monday. He is very popular with the men. Gen. H. C. Clark and the remainder of the Legislative Committee also will be here Monday. So far Senator Pickett and Representatives Hopkins, Dixon, Razovsky and Spencer are the only ones on the ground. Spencer spent the day trying to get a ride in an airplane and succeeded late in the afternoon.

Champ Clark Sees Son.

Champ Clark and Mrs. Clark, with their daughter, arrived this morning to see their son, Col. Bennett Clark. Mrs. Genevieve Thompson, the colonel's sister, also accompanied them.

The detachment of 30 officers of divisional headquarters, which Col. Clark brought over, will continue the journey to Camp Funston tomorrow under command of Lieut. Col. William Ellis, divisional adjutant. Col. Clark and Lieut. Col. Paul Tucker will remain here and travel west with their former regiments.

It occured to Col. Ristine that this was a good time to have a dance. So he got up and left the hospital, and has plans well under way. A dinner is to precede it and it is to be at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point Comfort. The guests of honor are to be Champ Clark, Gen. H. C. Clark, the legislative committee and others. The hosts are the officers of the 139th Infantry.

The first ship due to land tomorrow is the battleship South Carolina She has on board the 117th Signal Battalion, which served with the Rainbow Division in France. It is a Kansas City unit.

Among those here to meet the Rainbow Division Signal Corps is Mrs. Maude Radford Warren, magazine writer. She is honorary Major of the outfit, a title she won by feeding the men hot chocolate for 12 days under almost constant shell fire. They gave her that particular rank because she was already a Lieutenant of the 354th.

In the distribution of troops to be discharged it is the endeaver of the War Department to avoid any back haul. For instance, soldiers from Missouri would under ordinary circumstances be sent to Camp Taylor and there discharged, rather than sent to Camp Funston in Kansas and then back to Missouri. The 35th Division troops which are to parade are to go on to Funston after their parades, and then either be mustered out or sent to other camps nearer their homes to be mustered out.

Supply Train Coming.

The Princess Matoika, which also is to arrive Sunday, has on board the headquarters detachment of the 69th Infantry Brigade, consisting of four officers and 20 men. There is no regular brigade organization in the division, the regiments being handled as units. The 110th Supply Train, a St. Louis outfit, has 15 officers and 480 men. Of these three officers and 120 men are scheduled for release at Funtson and five officers and 235 men at Camp Taylor. The others are scattering.

The motor transport corps detachment of two officers and 12 men also is on the Princess Matoika.

On the Antigone, also due Sunday morning, are the following units: 110th Field Signal Battalion of 12 oficers and 503 men; detachment of three officers from each of the 139th and the 140th Infantry; the 129th Machine Gun Battalon complete, 25 officers and 781 men; the 130th Machine Gun Battalion complete, 25 officers and 781 men; 110th Sanitary Train, with 40 officers and 906 men. This includes the headquarters detachment, camp infirmary, divisional medical supply unit, headquarters ambulance section, ambulance companies 137, 138, 139 and 140 headquarters field hospital section and field hospitals 137, 138, 139 and 140.

The orders for the various parades and the dates have not reached here and probably will not until the War Department can be sure of the dates the troop trains will start west.

Where 138th Men Will Go.

On the Aeolus, due April 29, is all the 138th Infantry except the machine gun company. The Aeolus has the field and staff medical department, supply company and Companies A. to M. inclusive. There are 86 officers and 3118 men. The distribution list prepared here and made up from cabled reports show that men from the 138th will go to almost every demoblization camp in the country. Among them are:

CAMP.	Officers.	Men.
Taylor	30	1,373
Sherman	8	521
Funston	13	314
Dodge	3	355
Grant	11	176
Bowie		140

The remainder are scattering. This wide dispersal of the men shows how heavily the replacements have been, as the original men all were St. Louisans.

Adjutant-General and Legislators Go to Newport News.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Adjutant-General Clark and the main body of the legislative committee appointed to meet the Missouri troops departed for Newport News today. The party will be joined at St. Louis by Col. Willam A. Raupp, former commander of the Second Missouri Infantry; Col. Philip E. Kealey, former commander of the Third Missouri Infantry, and a delegation from St. Louis.

The troops will parade at St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Springfield and Joplin.

When they reach the demobilization camp the members of each company will be discharged on the same day, so that the members of each oganization can reach their home town together.

GOVERNOR STAYS ON JOB, WIRES WELCOME TO SOLDIERS OF 35TH

Gardner's Fears for Success of His Legislative Program Causes Action.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Fearing that to go with the legislative committee to welcome Missouri soldiers might result in the failure of his legislative program, Governor Gardner, today, decided to remain in his office and sent the following message to the returning soldiers of the 35th Division:

"To the Missouri boys:

"I had hoped until the last moment to be able to meet you wherever you might land to welcome you on behalf of the people of Missouri, but the law requires me to be here to act upon bills demanding consideration before the adjournment of the Legislature, which is close at hand.

"Only my obligation to discharge this duty of office could keep me from coming. Gen. Clark will tell you for me that all Missouri is waiting for you with longing hearts and that your heroic achievements in the greatest war for the greatest cause in all the history of the world has filled us with pride beyond our power to express, and that our gratitude and appreciation know no bounds. Our pride and joy is clouded only by grief for our heroes who have fallen. It is my hope to greet you personally when you set foot once more on Missouri soil and to join with the people of our great State in the joy of your homecoming."

C. OF C. OF U. S. TO BEGIN SESSIONS HERE TOMORROW

Business Men of Country Expected to Formulate Suggestions for General Reconstruction System.

2 CABINET MEMBERS AMONG SPEAKERS

Gathering of 1200 Delegates to Do Much of Work in Groups—Nations' League Discussion Thursday.

Business, which is expected to play a major part in the reconstruction program of the United States, will outline many of its important suggestions in St. Louis this week, when the Chamber of Commerce of the United States meets in convention extending through Thursday. The body is composed of 1200 national trade and commercial organizations.

Some of the subjects on the program for discussion are: Trust legislation, merchant marine, railroads and Government regulation of business. The subjects will be discussed by leaders in business and government. Two Cabinet members will be here, Secretary of Commerce Redfield and Secretary of the Treasury Glass. Walker D. Hines, the Railroad Administrator; Edward N. Hurley, chairman, and Raymond B. Stevens, member of the U. S. Shipping Board, and George N. Peek, chairman of the Government's Industrial Board, the so-called price-fixing body, are others who are programmed to speak.

The national councilors of the chamber, who serve as representatives of trade and commercial organizations; the Advisory Council of War Service Committees, which comprises chairmen of industrial and war service committees organized under the chamber's direction during the war, and the National Association of Commercial Organzation Secretaries, also will meet here during the convention.

First Meeting Tomorrow.

The first general meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon will be a meeting of the councillors, who will receive reports on the year's work of the chamber. The War Service Committee will meet tomorrow evening to hear an address by Goldwaite Door, in charge of the War Department's adjustment of war contracts.

At a morning session Tuesday Henry A. Wheeler, vice president of the Union Trust Co. of Chicago and president of the chamber, will deliver his annual address. He will be followed by Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, who will speak of the responsibility of the business man in the Victory Loan campaign.

The convention will be divided into groups Tuesday afternoon, discussing these subjects: Industrial production, distribution, foreign trade, railroads, public utilities. The industrial production group will head, among others, George N. Peek of the Government's Industrial Board, on price readjustments. The foreign trade group is considered the most important, with George Ed Smith, president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association; J. J. Broderick of the British embassy, Maurice Casenave of the French Services in America, Lieut. Constantini of the Italian embassy and Herbert Houston, publisher of the World's Work, as the principal speakers.

Three Addresses Tuesday Evening.

The general session on Tuesday evening will be addressed by Julius Barnes, president of the U. S. Grain Corporation, on wheat price-fixing; Mon. Casenave on trade with France, and H. J. Sconce of Sidell, Ill., on agriculture.

Secretary Redfield will speak on commerce Wednesday morning, with Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the Shipping Board, and Homer Ferguson of Newport News, Va., one of the country's leading shipbuilders, speaking on the merchant marine.

The railroad situation will be presented Wednesday evening by Director-General Hines, Senator Albert Cummins and Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

A general discussion of the league of nations will be held Thursday morning, with a report by the resolutions committee in the afternoon. These resolutions will comprise the composite declarations of the business men attending the convention and their adoption and the election of officers will terminate the convention.

'TRUCK' BURGLARS TAKE WHISKY

Six Men Carry Away Eight Cases So Deliberately They Cause No Suspicion.

"Truck" burglars hauled eight cases of whisky from the storehouse of the Sam Epstein Liquor Co., 520 Clark avenue, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

John Erwin, a foreman, employed by the Peckham Candy Co., Seventh and Spruce streets, sitting at his desk on the sixth floor, saw six men carry the whisky from the storeroom and load it in a seven-passenger black painted touring car in which they escaped. The deliberateness with which they worked fooled Erwin into believing they were in the employ of the Epstein company and he did not notify the police until later when it was discovered that two rear doors at the Epstein store had been "jimmied."

DRAMATIC SCENE WHEN ORLANDO LEFT WILSON

"I Go to Say to People, 'Decide Between Mr. Wilson and Me,'" Said Premier.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—French reports represent the final meeting between President Wilson and Premier Orlando before the latter's departure as highly dramatic in character. One version is that the Italian Prime Minister, in addressing the American President, said:

"You have contested the authority of the Italian Government before its people, and it is my duty to go before the representatives of the Italian people and say to them, 'Decide between Mr. Wilson and me!'"

To this President Wilson is represented to have replied:

"That s certainly your right."

In American quarters it is said that the foregoing version of the incident is probably a reflex of Premier Orlando's public statement in which he referred to the President appealing directly to the people.

SPENCER HEARS SELF BOOSTED FOR PRESIDENT AT A BANQUET

Makes No Comment on Remarks by Jacob L. Babler—Affair in Aloe's Honor.

At a "wet" banquet given last night at the Century Boat Club as a testimonial to Louis A. Aloe, recently re-elected President of the Board of Aldermen, Jacob L. Babler, Republican national committeeman from Missouri, asserted that Senator Selden P. Spencer would be the next President of the United States. Babler was toastmaster.

Among those who gathered to do honor to Aloe was Richard McCulloch, president of the United Railways Co., the members of the Board of Aldermen and many city officials. There was some talk, although not outspoken, that Aloe might be the Republican candidate for Governor.

Senator Spencer, in his speech, neither denied or affirmed presidential aspirations, but he did say he was sure the American people want a change. Schmoll made a speech. John S. Leahy advised the newspapers to "stop knocking and boost," and Aloe spoke, as did some others. There was much enthusiasm and plenty of champagne.

BLIND COMMISSION ASKED TO TELL OF EXPENDITURES

Only $900 Spent Outside of St. Louis From $12,500 Fund, Representative Farris Charges.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Representative Frank H. Farris introduced a resolution in the House today, charging that the Missouri Blind Commission, composed of two St. Louisans and a Sedalian, had spent only $900 of the $12,500 appropriated for its use on blind people outside of St. Louis during the biennial period. The remainder had been spent in St. Louis, the resolution charges. He charged that they opposed approval by the Governor of the blind pension bill which he vetoed.

The resolution recited that the Governor had been informed the commission threatened certain blind persons who were active in the passage of the pension bill by promising to cut them off from participation in the funds appropriated for the commission.

The Blind Commission until a few days ago was composed of J. D. Perry Francis of St. Louis, Jacob Lampert of St. Louis and J. R. Lyal of Shelbina. Lampert and Lyall were reappointed Wednesday, and O. M. Dean of Kansas City was appointed to succeed Francis.

The Farris resolution required the commission to furnish the House immediately with a statement of all amounts expended during the past biennial period and the names and addresses of the beneficiaries.

WITHDRAWS FROM SEAMAN SUIT

Charles W. Bates to Be Attorney for Receiver Only.

Charles W. Bates yesterday was granted permission by Federal Judge Dyer to withdraw as associate counsel in the John W. Seaman and Leeds Mining Co. receivership suit against the United Railways, in order to assume his duties as general counsel to Rolla Wells, receiver for the company. That leaves Ephrim Caplan as sole representative of the Seaman and Leeds interests.

Bates stated to the Court that he had informed all parties to the litigation of his intention. The Seaman suit was given precedence by Judge Dyer in his decision consolidating the suits Thursday. The other chief petitioner was Samuel W. Adler, whose suit was alleged to be one friendly to the company.

Mexican Run Over by Train Dies.

Sybeal Diaz, a Mexican employed by the Terminal Railroad as a track walker, died at St. Mary's Infirmary yesterday from injuries suffered earlier in the day when he was run over by a Terminal freight train at the Eighth street entrance of the tunnel. Both legs were amputated. Diaz lived at 1714 Austin street.

Miss Leary, Philanthropist, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Miss Annie Leary, papal Countess, widely known for her philanthropy, especially among the Italians, died at her home on Fifth avenue today.

Gov. Edge to Speak Here.

Gov. Walter Evans Edge of New Jersey, proprietor of the Dorland Advertising Agency, will speak at the luncheon of the Advertising Club of St. Louis at the Hotel Statler Tuesday at 12:15 p. m., on "An Advertising Man's Invasion Into Public Life." The meeting will be held in the hotel ball room.

COMMENT IN THE ITALIAN PRESS CONTINUES BITTER

One Newspaper Says Wilson Is Seeking Glory at Italy's Expense and Poses as a Dictator.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, April 26.—This morning's Rome newspapers in commenting on the peace conference situation lay particular stress upon declarations of the solidarity of the Italian people in demanding that Fiume shall become Italian. The Popolo Romano says the fact that Leonida Bissiolati, the Socialist former minister, demands possession of Fiume by the Italians, should convince President Wilson that nobody in Italy is likely to take his message seriously.

The Corriere D'Italia says that President Wilson was mistaken if he thought he could divide public opinion in Italy, for it is "in universal revolt against the unparalleled outrage."

The Tempo says:

"We are confronted with a serious act, committed in cold blood against us, and we will need to summon all our dignity to reply to the cruel provocation. President Wilson is not America. We appeal to the American people."

Milan Paper Is Bitter.

The Messaggero accuses President Wilson of disloyally seeking glory for himself at the expense of Italy. The Corriere De La Serra of Milan says:

"Can President Wilson, who repeatedly has allowed the magna charta of his 14 points to be torn to pieces; who suffered freedom of the seas to slumber at the bottom of the ocean; who violated and allowed to be violated the rights of nationalities all over Europe; who calmly watches the letting loose of the fiercest imperialist cupidities in the colonial domains and in Asia; who has yet to make clear the meaning and the object of his attitude in the face of the atrocities and crimes committed against the whole of the people in Russia; who, under pressure of a brutality professed egotism disavowed the very spirit of his work by causing the Monroe Doctrine to be inscribed among the statutes of the league of nations, and who finally was unwilling to admit the equality of races and placed the Japanese in an inferior class of humanity—can he, after all this, still cherish the illusion of finding in the waters of the Adriatic the justice lost at Paris?"

The Messaggero calls President Wilson's act "treason," and expresses the hope that the American people will refuse to share responsibility in the action of their President who "poses as a dictator to Europe."

Friendship for America.

In the course of its editorial entitled "the Wilson fiasco," the Popolo Romano says that President Wilson fell into a trap in aiming to estrange Italy from America. But, the newspaper adds, "the Italians do not cease to feel for the noble American nation a fraternal, grateful friendship, protesting only against the Bresident who misunderstood the high Italian ideals of justice."

In discussing the situation today Luigi Rava, former minister of finance, recalled that in 1860 Cavour had the Italian Parliament proclaim Rome the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, although the city was still in possession of the Holy See, which retained it 10 years longer. In similar case, he argued, the Italian Parliament now might proclaim the annexation of the territories inhabited by Italians which through self determinations had declared their unity with Italy, even though such annexation were not ratified by the powers.

German View of the Crisis Over Italian Claims.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Thursday, April 24.—The German newspapers are all attentively following the Italian crisis in Paris. Of the situation the Vossiche Zeitung says: "It is Great Britain's aim to Balkanize Europe and split up its forces."

The Tageblatt says: "It is not Italian egoism alone that is to blame for the conflict, but the egoistic spirit which inspires all the peacemakers." The Vorwaerts, the Socialist organ sides with President Wilson in the controversy.

The Boersen Zeitung says that the President's statement was "most comprehensive in tenor, most impressive in import and most consistent of all his note."

The Taeglische Rundschau believes that Italy will be obliged to yield and says that "she has become the slave of her friends"

The Tageblatt declares there is only one way of solving present and numerous other conflicts which menace the peace settlement, "namely, to have Mr. Wilson administer an eleventh-hour reprimand to all the associated Powers, thereby bringing about a total revision of the treaty and a genuine return to the 14 points."

VIENNA, Thursday, April 24.—The withdrawal of the Italian delegation from the peace conference was received here with elation, the people generally being glad to see the allies in conflict with each other. The Neue Freje Presse says: "Premier Orlando is bluffing, probably in order to square his position in Italy toward the Interventionists. It is impossible for Italy to withdraw, as she is fed by America."

The newspaper adds: "President Wilson's position is based on the idea of right and justice and it is hoped he will act in the same way toward Bohemia and Tyrol, where the people will be driven to desperation if subjected to Czech or Italian control."

LAST OF ITALIAN ENVOYS LEAVE PARIS; A DAY OF ANXIETY

tains a full list of allied Powers which made war against Germany, with the names of the plenipotentiaries. It is in this list that Italy figures with a complete list of the five plenipotentaries, headed by Premier Orlando. It will be in this form presented to the Germans next Wednesday, unless exceptional conditions intervene definitely severing Italy's participation with the allies.

Italy is similarly included in the appendix to the revised covenant of the league of nations giving the names of the countries forming the league. The covenant in this form will go before the plenary session of the conference on Monday, for, despite the strained situation, Italy continues to be given full status as one of the Entente Allies.

It was announced that the Council of Three concluded consideration of the reports on ports and waterways and the report of the Financial Commission, all of which were approved. The Italian and Japanese questions were not considered.

The council approved for insertion in the treaty an article assuring the right of aerial transit over enemy territory after the conclusion of peace. It also approved articles concerning the disposition of enemy property in former German colonies and regarding the disposition of German prisoners.

Official Statement as to French and British Attitude.

PARIS, April 26.—The following official statement was issued here today:

"The report that Premier Clemenceau and Premier Lloyd George approved of President Wilson's statement is inaccurate. The statement was read to M. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George and President Wilson informed them that he intended to issue it. M. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George were anxious that Mr. Wilson should postpone publication in the hope that an arrangement might be arrived at.

"The President thought, however, that the time had arrived and his statement was issued on his own responsibility. Before Signor Orlando left M. Clemenceau and Mr. Lloyd George handed him a statement setting forth the French and British points of view just as President Wilson's statement had set forth the point of view of America. Whether Premier Orlando will publish the French and British statements is a question for his decision."

Ominous Reports From Rome.

Reports received here from the American Embassy in Rome are somewhat ominous as to the general state of public feeling there, as crowds have been parading the streets crying, 'Down with the Americans!" and "Down with the English!" and "Viva Sonnino!" the Foreign Minister, who outdid Premier Orlando in pressing the extreme demands made by Italy under the secret treaty of London.

These reports are particularly disturbing, as the American and British delegates to the Peace Conference are said to have reason to believe that Premier Orlando might adopt a course before the Italian Parliament which would lead to an amicable adjustment. Premier Lloyd George was particularly hopeful that this result would be brought about.

The reports of the popular agitation at Rome and many other Italian centers, however, have led to fears that the Italian Prime Minister's conciliatory attitude may be swept away in an outburst of feeling by the populace, which will insist upon demands far beyond those the Council of the Powers or President Wilson feel themselves able to accept.

It has just developed that the British, American and French Admirals in command in Adriatic waters had formulated a plan for giving Italy certain of the Dalmatian Islands which would have assured Italy of control of the Adriatic such as she desires. This joint plan was presented to the Italian representatives, and was rejected as not sufficient.

To Meet Germans Wednesday.

Meanwhile, the plans for receving the German delegates to the peace congress are proceeding, it being thought probable that a meeting with the Germans will take place next Wednesday, April 30, by which time the complete draft of the treaty of peace is expected to be ready.

The plenary session of the conference to be held on Monday may continue throughout Tuesday in order that the work of the body may be completed before the delegates proceed to Versailles on Wednesday. The latest estimates by experts place the total length of the peace treaty at 70,000 words.

It is said that the chances of reaching an accord at the final meeting were good if Premier Orlando had remained a half hour longer. But the approach of the time for the departure of his train and his feeling that he should consult the Italian people finally caused him to withdraw while the plan that might have brought about an agreement was still under discussion. The basis of this presumptive accord is said to have been the partial internationalization of Fiume, like Danzig, with the Jugo-Slavs occupying the Dalmatian mainland and the Italians the outlying islands.

The territorial issue now is felt to be less important than the personal issue which the Italian Premier has raised by his plan for going before Parliament and asking a vote of confidence. Should this be given, it is thought probable in some quarters that it would renew the Italian issue before the council in a more pronounced form than either President Wilson or the council as a whole has thus far been willing to admit. Should it not be given, the probable result would be Cabinet changes, bringing a new delegation, with a new policy to the conference.

Avoids Using Pressure.

There are evidences that President Wilson has avoided using anything which might be construed as economical pressure upon Italy, although some quarters have suggested this as an effective weapon. Secretary of the Treasury Glass has asked a credit of $50,000,000 for Italy, and this request is now on the President's desk, for final determination.

Orders have been sent to Rear Admiral Phillip Andrews, commanding the American naval forces in the Adriatic, directing him to take exceptional precautions to avoid possible disorders in view of the tension in Italy.

The Dalmatian port of Spalato, which is the headquarters of the American naval forces in the Adriatic, is one of the centers of agitation between the Italians and the Jugo-Slavs.

BAKER AND PERSHING AT SOLDIER CARNIVAL

See U. S. Aviators "Stunting" in German Planes and View Welfare Work.

COBLENZ, Friday, April 25.—Secretary of War Baker today had his busiest day since he arrived in occupied Germany. After breakfast with Gen. Pershing and other officers in the former royal suite in the largest hotel in Coblenz, the Secretary before 9 o'clock had crossed the Rhine in an automobile, made his way up the promontory crowned by the Fortress of Ehrenbreitstein.

The Secretary spent 20 minutes in the fortress and then went to the carnival being held by the Third Army. He saw horse-jumping contests and athletic exhibitions and inspected modern war-time automobile apparatus and several new types of airplanes. Gen. Pershing also visited the carnival and at noon the Secretary, and Commander-in-Chief were interested spectators of the work of the five army welfare organizations—the Salvation Army, the Knights of Columbus, the Red Cross, the Jewish Welfare Board and the Y. M. C. A.—in feeding the soldiers and visitors.

Secretary Baker and Gen. Pershing went to a hangar and watched 50 German girls, hired for the occasion, working side by side with the girls of the welfare organization in handing out sandwiches, doughnuts, cake, cocoa and coffee to 5600 men an hour. From 20,000 to 25,000 men are being fed each day of the carnival, which will last five days.

While Baker and Gen. Pershing were at the carnival American aviators in German airplanes did various stunts overhead. They looped the loop, dipped and entertained the spectators with other forms of flying.

Secretary Baker had lunch with Major-General Hines, the commander of the Third Corps, in the palace of the Prince of Wied at Neuwied. In the afternoon he dedicated a welfare hut at Andernach and inspected several hospitals and welfare camps near Coblenz.

When Gen. Pershing decorated four Colonels with distinguished service medals at the headquarters of the Third Army, the Secretary was present. Those decorated were Col. R. H. Williams, Assistant Chief of Staff of the Third Army; Col. Earl Atkinson, commander of the First Engineers; Col. Adna Chaffee, Assistant Chief of Staff of the Third Corps, and Col. George Purington, in charge of the motor transport of the Third Corps. In the evening the Secretary and Gen. Pershing left the Rhine for France.

long skirts. She transformed herself into a "married woman" by buying a wedding ring. When she got as far as Syracuse, detectives who had been in communication with her mother, boarded the train and inquired of her if she was Florence Pope, running away from home.

They were told with great hauteur that she was not; that she was a married woman going to meet her husband in Chicago. The detectives were properly abashed and backed out.

When she was arrested here telegrams were sent to Secretary Tumulty and the New York police. In response to one of these word was received that Mrs. Brian had started West.

Mrs. Brian was formerly Mrs. Charles H. Pope. She divorced Pope, a cotton broker, in 1908, obtaining custody of the daughter, then 3 years old. Her maiden name was Florence Gleason, her father being a wealthy real estate operator in Westchester County. She has appeared on the stage since her marriage to Brian, under the name of Peggy Brian.

THOUSANDS SEE TRENCH AND TANK ART HILL "BATTLE"

Three "Crawlers" Start Behind Smoke Screen and "Take Their Objectives" in 10 Minutes.

USE MACHINE GUNS AND MOP UP DUGOUT

Mines Exploded Ahead of Tanks and Barbed Wire Cut and Dragged Along Like String.

As the hands of wrist-watches pointed to the zero-hour, 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a doughboy crept out in front of the three tanks waiting to cross No Man's Land, in the northeast elbow of the Forest Park lagoon basin, and touched off the smoke screen, thus beginning the Victory Loan tank and trench demonstration.

To the several thousand spectators on Art Hill and along the pathway behind the tanks, the effect was the same as if a barrage had been laid down by artillery somewhere beyond the Municipal Theater. No one could see anything, which is what a barrage or a smoke screen is for. This screen was made by lighting the fuses of some two dozen cans of heavy oil, which gives a thick yellow smoke.

Ground Was Mined.

By the time anyone could see through the smoke, the tanks were crawling toward the trench line. The enemy had the ground mined, but in every case the mine went off too soon, before the tank got to it, and the only damage inflicted was on the cameras at one side of the field, which were showered with clumps of dirt.

VINCENT ASTOR 'ALL IN' AFTER TRIP ON U-BOAT

Lieutenant, in Greasy Cap, Tells of Journey—"Regular Sea Dog," Says Superior.

By Leased Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Vincent Astor was a disgrace to his valet and a credit to the United States Navy this afternoon at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

His cap, greasy with grease of the engine room, stained by alternate rain and sun, its once regulation color changed to a nondescript and thoroughly unpreventable faded green, its shape disreputably altered. Anybody's valet would feel justified in giving "notice" to a master with a cap like that.

But there wasn't a valet in sight, nor even a wife (a wife might have been as hostile as a valet to a cap like that). For this was the navy yard, and this was Vincent Astor, who had just come home on the one German submarine U-117. He shoved the cap back on his head, making it look worse, rubbed an oily sleeve across his forehead, leaving a black streak, and inidcated that he was ready to endure reporters.

"I'm All in," He Says.

"The Victory Loan people have been after me to make some speeches for them," he said. "Absolutely I can't do it. I'm all in."

There was a Victory Loan committee at that moment in the background, and he registered despair.

"You don't know how tired a man gets bringing a boat like this across the Atlantic—especially in rough weather," said Lieut. Astor. "And we sure did have some rough weather." I left Harwich on April 3 and stuck our nose into one hell of a gale. I was oficer of the deck. We had to stand 24 hour watches and had to put into the Azores, which wasn't on the programme at all."

After he reflected for a moment over a question as to what he considered the most remarkable feature of the trip he said:

"The fact that we got away with it. The fact that we were able to come home on our own spoils of war. We beat the Italians and the Japanese on that point. They both started home with U-boats and had to turn back. Finally they had to be towed. We navigated this craft all the way across, and we were not a specially picked crew either. It just goes to show the resourcefulness of the American navy and the American character in general.

Men Took Hold Quickly.

"When the time came for the navy to bring home a U-boat from Harwich the navy just looked around the port for a crew and got one. None of us had ever seen the machinery before. But we got the knack, and in spite of the bad weather—it was moderately bad even after the gale that drove us into the Azores—we got along all right."

There is evidence that the U-117 took part in Germany's "frightfulness" demonstration between Block Island and Hampton Roads.

"In the officers' quarters," said Lieut. Astor, "we found records indicating participation in that affair and there is some reason to believe that this boat is the one that torpedoed the San Diego."

The U-boat's engines were found to be damaged to some extent when the Americans took charge. Her tanks were leaky. But these things were repaired well enough to make the trip.

Bridge Made of Brass.

"And let me tell you," continued Lieut. Astor, "that if the Germans were as short of brass during the war as they pretended to be it was their own fault. Look at this conning tower bridge. Solid brass and there is no need at all to use brass for such purposes."

An automobile came and took him away to 850 Fifth Avenue, where something surely was about to happen to that chap.

"I'd like to spend my life in the navy if I hadn't so many affairs to attend to," he said as he departed.

Lieut. Commander Dibrell, in charge of the U-boat watched him go and then said to the reporters: "A regular sea dog, that."

128TH EXPECTED TO ARRIVE HERE AT 11 A. M. TUESDAY

Scheduled to Leave Camp Devins, Mass., in Two Sections This Afternoon—Approach to City to Be Signaled.

The time of arrival of the 128th Field Artillery probably will be Tuesday at 11 a. m.

The first section of the regiment is scheduled to depart from Camp Devens, Mass., for St. Louis at 2 p. m. today. The second section will depart at 2:30 p. m. The run to St. Louis is expected to consume 40 to 45 hours.

The explosion of bombs and the tooting of whistles Tuesday morning will mean that the regiment—the first of the city's war heroes to return as a unit—is within two hours of the city and that it is time for St. Louisans to begin moving into downtown to give them welcome. A second series of bombs and greater whistle-tooting will mean that the regiment has arrived and is detraining. The Mayor's Welcome Home Committee last night wired every junction point through which the regiment will pass to wire St. Louis when the regiment has passed. The route is Boston to Albany, to Cleveland, to St. Louis, arival being on the Big Four railroad.

Court of Honor to Be Ready.

Meanwhile it is becoming apparent that the race to have the Court of Honor in Twelfth street completed for the return will be won by the workmen a large crew of whom were busy last night. When the soldiers who, with their guns, ploughed knee deep through Argonne mud last autumn, reach the Court of Honor, they will tread its length on a carpet of flowers. The Woman's Victory Loan Committee is making an appeal to the women of St. Louis to furnish lilacs, snowballs and other spring flowers to throw beneath the soldiers' feet.

The following revised route for the parade has been fixed: The regiment will form on the Eighteenth street bridge and will move north on Eighteenth street to Clark avenue, east to Seventeenth street, north to Chestnut street, west to Twentieth street, north to Washington avenue, east to Broadway, south to Olive, west to Eleventh, north to Washington, west to Twelfth, south on Twelfth through the Court of Honor to Clark avenue, west to Thirteenth street and then north to the city hall plaza. Return to Union Station will be on Chestnut street.

The program for the brief stay of the regiment now is complete. "It has been arranged with particular regard for the convenience of the relatives of the men of the regiment," Chairman Hidden of the Mayor's committee said last night." and I hope that the general public will stand back this once and not infringe on the rights of the men's families."

Upon arrival the Red Cross will serve the men an ample meal in their cars while a Reception Committee consisting of the following will be admitted to the inclosure near Union Station: Mayor Kiel, Gov. Gardner and their military escorts; Maj. Algernon H. Cale, former corps officer of the Thirty-fifth Division; Col. F. M. Rumbold, former commander of the 128th; Chairman Hidden of the Mayor's committee and possibly one or two others of the committee. The public will not be admitted.

Arrangements for Relatives.

After they have eaten the men will form ranks for the parade. As they reach the city hall plaza they will pass into an inclosure which will be erected between the Municipal Courts building and the city hall, where each company will be assigned to a specific spot.

Relatives of the men who will be seated in the Court of Honor grand stand are warned not to make an effort to see the men until a given signal, when they will go to the inclosure and will be admitted upon presentation of half of the ticket with which they were admitted to the grand stand. Ushers in the grand stand will tear tickets in two when presented, permitting the holder to retain one-half.

While within the enclosure the soldiers again will be "canteened" by the Y. M. C. A., the Knights of Columbus, the Salvation Army and the Jewish Welfare Association.

Acting Mayor Aloe yesterday issued a proclamation ordering that all City offices close at the first signal announcing the approach of the trains bearing the regiment. He also has requested that all stores not on the line of march permit as many of their employes as they can to witness the parade.

It now is expected that most of the Missouri legislature will be in the reviewing stand. Such was the information received yesterday from Senator Conway Elder. The Board of Aldermen will be there in a body.

A section of the grandstand, directly across from the reviewing stand, has been reserved for wounded men and men of the Thirty-fifth division who have returned ahead of their fellows. There are few, if any, wounded of the 128th who will be in the stand.

Merchants Slow to Decorate.

Merchants along the line of march are slow to put up their decorations, according to Robert Lee, chairman of the Decoration Committee. "This, if ever, is an occasion when every building should be aflash with colors," he said.

The line of march was partially decorated yesterday. The entire contract for decorations will be completed Monday. The City Hall was decorated last night. It is especially desired that Twelfth street buildings be massed with colors.

The construction work on the grandstands virtually is completed. The pylons are being painted and the heavy balustrade along the stands is being put in place. The garlands forming an arch at the Market street and Washington avenue entrances to the Court will be completed tomorrow. These garlands with the suspended medallions of the Allies each will cost $1600.

Relatives of men in the 128th are reminded that there are 9000 seats in the grandstand, and that there will be room for all who apply. About 2000 have registered for the parade of the 128th, and 6000 for the parade of 138th. Tickets for the stand and for the opportunity to greet the men in the City Hall inclosure are being given out at the Relatives' Auxiliary Registration Bureau, 617 Locust street. Fathers and mothers will be shown preference in tickets. Sisters and brothers are next. Then comes wives and children. No "in-laws" are being given tickets.

Plans for the collection of flowers to be strewn in the Court of Honor were announced last night by Mrs. John H. Holliday, chairman of the St. Louis Victory Loan Committee. Four large automobile trucks will be stationed from 8 to 9 a. m., Tuesday at the following places: Grand and Shenandoah avenues, Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard, Grand avenue and Hebert street and King's highway and Lindell boulevard. Women are asked to gather flowers from their yards and bring them to the trucks. The trucks will precede the regiment into the Court of Honor and cover the pavement with the blossoms, members of the Junior League performing this service.

Ambulances to Be on Hand.

Members of the Red Cross Motor Corps will have ambulances stationed at the point of detraining, the point of assembly for the parade, at a point near the Court of Honor and at other points to car for any of the men who may become ill during the celebration.

Only $20,000 of the $50,000 citizens' fund for the celebration has been subscribed. Festus J. Wade, chairman of the Finance Committee, said last night: "St. Louis will have to dig quick to pay the bill. Surely it must not be known by our boys that the celebration in their honor is not paid for."

The St. Louis Bar Association yesterday appointed the following committee to co-operate with the Mayor's Committee: W. Scott Hancock, chairman; John M. Atkinson, S. Mayner Wallace, Albert Hausman, George C. Hitchcock, H. Chouteau Dyer, Davis Biggs, Charles W. Rutledge, Homer Hall and Francis Curlee. The proffer of the Bar Association to co-operate with the Mayor's Committee was accompanied by a check for $500.

The Mayor's Committee received word yesterday from Lawrence Boogher, sent East to keep track of troop movements, that the Twelfth Engineers, due to have landed yesterday, would not land until today, having been delayed by a storm.

A telegram received earlier in the day from Boogher stated that the 138th Machine Gun Company was due in Hoboken today on the Kroonland, the rest of the regiment being due Tuesday at Newport News.

The Governor's party going east to greet the 138th at Newport News passed through St. Louis last night. Adjutant-General Harvey C. Clark headed the party. Mrs. Harold Haill and Mrs. J. W. Rheinholdt, representatives of the Relatives' Auxiliary, joined the party here.

Aloe Proclaims a Holiday in Honor of 128th on Tuesday

To the People of the City of St. Louis:

The 128th Field Artillery, the first large unit of St. Louis troops to return home, is scheduled to pass through the city on Tuesday, April 29, enroute to Camp Funston where the regiment will be demobilized.

Shortly before the arrival of the troop trains, aerial bombs will be exploded from the roofs of all city fire engine houses and whistles will be blown as a signal that the men are about to arrive. These signals will be repeated at the actual time of arrival in order that the whole city may join in a rousing welcome to our boys.

As acting Mayor of the City I hearby direct the closing of all municipal offices at the first signal, said offices to suspend business for the remainder of the day out of respect for the returning heroes.

I furthermore respectfully request all business houses to release as many of their employes as possible to view the parade of the troops, especially where such employes are relatives of men in the returning unit and where such business houses are not located on the line of march.

LOUIS P. ALOE,
Acting Mayor.

12TH ENGINEERS WILL REACH NEW YORK TODAY

Regiment That Has Been Overseas Nearly Two Years Will Be Met by St. Louisans.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Twelfth Regiment of Engineers comprising 43 ofifcers and 1257 men, recruited in St. Louis in the summer of 1917, is due in New York tomorrow on the transport Cape May. Col. John a Laird of St. Louis is in command.

This regiment was mobilized and trained in St. Louis. They were among the first armed troops foreign to English soil to march through London streets since the time of William the Conqueror in 1066. They were of the first 30,000 American troops to reach France and were the first full unit of American troops to be under fire in France.

A committee representing the city of St. Louis, the Chamber of Commerce, the Engineers' Club and the St. Louis Railway Club came to this city to welcome the regiment. United States Senator Selden P. Spencer represented Missouri; E. R. Kinsey, president of the Board of Public Service, the city of St. Louis; Clarkson Potter, the Chamber of Commerce; Col. F. G. Jonah, the St. Louis Railway Club, and Mrs. Burden, the Women's Auxiliary of the Twelfth Regiment. John Hunter, former president of the St. Louis Engineers' Club and at preesnt naval constructor at the Standard Shipbuilding Co., New York, was made chairman of the Reception Committee.

The steamer Ursula will carry the committee and guests down the bay to greet the boys.

An article by Lieutenant-Colonel Jonah, telling what the Twelfth Engineers did in France appears in the Post-Dispatch today on page 1 of the editorial section.

$500,000 ROAD BOND ELECTION

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—News reached here today, that Pettis County will be the first county in the State to undertake an extensive program of road building under the provisions of the new Morgan-McCullough road law, which was signed by Gov. Gardner last week.

The Pettis County Court yesterday, ordered a $500,000 bond issue election June 3. This county money will constitute one-eighth of the amount to be spent. Private subscriptions for all road work done under the provisions of bond issue must be seven times as large as the contribution for the county in addition to the amount of State and Federal money received.

OVERSEAS MAN FOUND DEAD IN FOREST PARK

110th Engineer Member Who Landed Monday Apparently Took His Own Life.

The body of Aloysius I. Lonergan, 30 years old, a soldier who landed at New York Monday with the 110th Engineers, and who formerly was a member of the Eighty-ninth Division, was found in a clump of willows on the bank of the River des Peres, near Jefferson and Grand drives, in Forest Park, about 6 p. m. yesterday. Death had been caused by a bullet wound in the temple, apparently inflicted with a new revolver which lay under the body. It contained one empty shell. Police said the body had been there several hours.

Lonergan had been staying the last few days with his brother, Thomas, of 3947A Shaw avenue. It was said there last night that he left the house at about 8 p. m. yesterday, apparently in good spirits. It was not known there that he had a revolver. He is a son of Mrs. Mary Lonergan of 3198 Portis avenue.

Thomas J. Lonergan said that he could assign no cause for his brother's act and was inclined to look for another cause for death than suicide. He said that his brother had been cheerful, even gay, in discussing his experiences overseas, though he remarked many times: "The people don't appreciate what we boys did."

Miss Lelia Hand, 4951 Laclede avenue, found the body while picking flowers on the river bank. She called three small boys and sent them for the police, while she remained with the body.

Identification was made by the metal disc which all soldiers carry suspended from their necks, the purpose of which is to identify them in case of death or wounds on the battlefield. Lonergan was in full uniform, and wore an overseas cap. The emblem of the Eighty-ninth Division, from which he was recently transferred was in a pocket.

A letter from Christopher Lonergan, a brother, of C Battery, 128th Field Artillery, dated April 21, and addressed to Mrs. Mary Lonergan, 3198 Portis avenue, also was in the dead man's pocket. It told of Christopher Lonergan's arrival on the transport Von Steuben, and said he was in Debarkation Hospital No. 3, with his right hand in a splint as a result of wounds.

A telegram from Mrs. Lonergan, dated April 21, and addressed to Aloysius, showed that she had wired $50 to him at the Pennsylvania station in New York and told him to look up his brother, Christopher, in the hospital.

Police found about $35 in Lonergan's pockets. He apparently had been in fine physical condition. No reason for self-destruction could be given by members of the family.

The progress of the Victory Loan throughout the country is being indicated by large signs placed at Broadway and Olive street and at Seventh street and Washington avenue. The sign depicts the relay trip of the navy destroyers from San Francisco to New York, and shows 12 smaller ships which represent the 12 Federal reserve districts. Yesterday the small ship representing the St. Louis district led all other ships.

The destroyers, known as the "Victory Ships," were detailed by the Navy Department to make a relay trip from the Pacific coast port to New York harbor, their speed to be regulated by the Victory Loan subscriptions. The distance they are to travel each day is flashed by wireless to the destroyers. The purpose is to bring the Victory Ship into New York harbor by the end of the campaign, May 10.

Woman Found Dead, Throat Cut.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—The body of a woman, whose throat had been cut, was found in an alley in the Italian quarter here today. She was dressed in expensive clothing, on which were no identification marks. She was blonde, apparently about 25 years old.

The WANTS are close to the home life of thousands—they seek opportunity in them every day.

JUDGE DYER RESTING WELL AFTER COLLAPSE

Jurist Fell Semi-Conscious in Federal Building Elevator Yesterday—Illness Due to Cold.

Judge David P. Dyer, 81 years old, of the United States District Court, who collapsed and fell semi-conscious in an elevator in the Federal Building yesterday morning, was reported at midnight last night to be resting well at his home, 9 North Taylor avenue.

Judge Dyer collapsed while going from the first floor of the Federal Building to his office on the third floor. It required 15 minutes to restore him to full consciousness, and his condition was such that his three sons and a daughter were called to his office. He was carried to his chambers and laid on a couch by Chief Deputy Marshal George Lynch and Eustace Wheeler and N. C. Whaley, Assistant District Attorneys, who called Dr. Alfred Edwards of the Century Building. The latter said Judge Dyer's collapse was due to vertigo, probably caused by a cold.

Horace Dyer, an attorney in the Central National Bank Building, was the first member of the family to reach his father's side. His other children, Hunt Dyer and David P. Dyer Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Dyer, who is his housekeeper, arrived shortly afterward.

Dr. A. H. Schott of 4066 Westminster place, the Judge's family physician, was called at his request and had Judge Dyer removed to his home. Dr. Schott said the Judge's collapse probably was due to a cold which had settled on his chest, and that a contributory cause to the collapse was the fact that Judge Dyer Friday had six teeth pulled, weakening him and lessening his resistance to effects of the cold.

E. M. FLESH REMAINS IN GRAIN CORPORATION'S LONDON OFFICE

St. Louisan Reappointed—Director Believes Wheat Will Be Above Guaranteed Minimum Price.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Officers of the Food Administration, grain corporation, announced tonight their conviction at the close of a three-day conference to determine policies for the coming year, that the Government price guarantee to wheat growers could be made effective without endangering the market or causing loss to the national Treasury.

Julius H. Barnes, president of the corporation and Federal Wheat Director, declared that crop indications were that wheat would be traded on the Government fair price basis. It is possible that the market generally may be above the fixed price schedule, in which event the Wheat Diretcor would not be an influence in trading, as Congress adopted no maximum price policy.

With few exceptions, Barnes stated, the Grain Administration would have the same personnel as during the past year. Edward M. Flesh of St. Louis, in charge of the London office, and Charles T. Neal of Omaha, director of the corporation's activities at Hamburg, Germany, will remain in the service.

10-CENT OUTSIDE TELEPHONE CHARGE AGAIN BY HOTELS

Following notice from telephone companies that a 10-cent charge might be made for local telephone calls from rooms and lobbies, the St. Louis hotels yesterday restored that rate which was abandoned several monthe ago when, by Government ruling, a five-cent rate was established.

Lyman T. Hay, manager of the Jefferson Hotel, said the 10-cent rate for local phone calls had been customary in all first-class hotels both here and the East for many years, but when Government wire control became effective a ruling was made that five cents was the maximum charge that could be made for a local call. He said the ruling worked a hardship on hotels, which depend on a higher charge because of expensive telephone exchanges. He said the cut caused the Jefferson to lose $5000 a year in revenue, and to operate its telephones at a loss. He declared at the 10-cent rate even the Jefferson can make but a few hundred dollars a year on the service, especially since the cost of help and materials has risen.

The Statler, which has never charged more than five cents for phone calls from its booths in the lobby, announced that it would continue the service at five cents.

HOUSE CALLS IN ABSENTEES

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—The House today rescinded its acceptance of invitations to adjourn and go to St. Louis and Kansas City to view the parades of Missouri troops, by adopting a resolution expressing the regrets of the body and directing that all absent members be notified by wire to be in their seats Monday morning. Those to be excused include the legislative committee now in the East to welcome the returning troops, and those who are ill.

Another resolution introduced and passed over, to be called up at any time, fixes the final date of adjournment at May 7, and specifies that only appropriation, revenue and conference measures may be passed after May 3.

MAN FATALLY SHOT IN SALOON; SILENT AS TO ASSAILANT

Attack on Edward Georgan at 2852 Easton Avenue Believed by Police to Have Been Result of Gang Feud.

4 MEN AND 1 WOMAN HELD FOR CORONER

Proprietor of Bar Declares That Young Man Who Was Stranger to Him, and Escaped, Was Slayer.

Edward Georgan, known also as Jordan, 33 years old, of 4133 Lee place, was shot twice in the saloon of Frank Hanlon, 2852 Easton avenue, shortly after 5 p. m. yesterday, and died at the City Hospital at 8:15 o'clock last night, without divulging the identity of the man who shot him. Six persons, one a woman, were arrested and are being held for the Coroner.

The police were notified of the shooting by a telephone message to the Dayton Street Station, which stated that a man had been shot in the saloon, which is at the southeast corner of Easton and Ewing avenues. They found Georgan in the lavatory, about four feet from the end of the bar, lying on the floor. Two bullets had entered his right side and penetrated the abdomen. He told the police he did not know who shot him, or why he had been shot.

Frank Hanlon, 25 years old, 3135 School street, proprietor of the saloon, one of the men arrested, told the police Georgan had been around the place all afternoon. About 5 p. m., he said, Georgan entered the lavatory and a few minutes later four men, none of whom Hanlon knew, entered the place and ordered drinks. While he was serving them a fifth man entered, walked into the lavatory and fired four shots. He departed from the saloon by the Ewing avenue entrance, placing a revolver in his pocket as he went out the door. The only description Hanlon could give of him was that he was 21 or 22 years old. Following the shooting, the police found an open knife on the floor of the lavatory and two loaded revolvers behind the bar. The revolvers are the property of Hanlon.

Daniel Martin, 2545 Howard street, Hanlon's stepfather, who said he was outside the saloon and heard the shots, told the police he did not see the man who fired them. He was arrested.

Others who are being held are Marie Miller, 24 years old, 3135 Bell avenue, a laundress, who was in a wineroom in the saloon; Roy Snider, 27 years old, a teamster of 2719 Cass avenue; Roy Toothman, 24, a teamster, 3013 Dickson street, and Thomas Horn, alias Horan, of 1017 North Leffingwell avenue.

Georgan, the police say, was unemployed. They have no record of his ever having been in trouble, but believe his death was the result of a gang feud.

MRS. F. W. ENGLISH SUFFRAGE PRESIDENT

Choice by St. Louis Organization is Unanimous—Other Officers Elected Yesterday.

Mrs. Fred W. English was unanimously chosen president of the St. Louis Equal Suffrage League, to succeed Mrs. George Gellhorn, at the election of officers at Hotel Statler yesterday afternoon. Mrs. David O'Neil, a former president, was elected honorary president. There were 130 ballots, containing the names of nominees of the Election Committee, cast.

Other officers elected were Mmes. Ernest W. Stix, Robert McK. Jones, P. B. Fouke, J. Alex. Goodwin and Misses Mary Lionberger and Leticia Parker, vice presidents; Mrs. Walter Fischel, secretary; Mrs. A. H. Rauh, treasurer; and Mrs. Fred J. Taussig, accountant. Chairmen for the 28 wards were also chosen.

10,000,000 PELTS LISTED FOR AUCTION TO START TOMORROW

400 Buyers Already Here From Various Parts of World for Greatest of Fur Sales.

Ten million pelts listed in a catalogue of 530 pages, will be offered for sale, commencing tomorrow morning on the International Fur Exchange, 125 South Second street, where, it is estimated, fully $10,000,000 will be paid for furs at an auction which may last two weeks. The Funsten catalogue, it is declared, represents a collection that more than equals the furs disposed of recently in New York, together with those shown at three concurrent London sales, showing the supremacy of St. Louis as the world's greatest private fur market.

The Funsten Company reports that never before has there been seen here such an advance guard of fur buyers and brokers. To accommodate them additional rows of seats have been placed in the Exchange. Some come from Siberia, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and South America. Besides these, many of the "old guard, buyers from Paris and London are back with reinforcements.

GEN. WRIGHT TELLS OF FINE DEEDS OF MISSOURI TROOPS

Officer Who Led 89th Division Speaks of It as One Which Never Failed to Reach Objective on Time.

IT WAS FIGHTING UP TO LAST MINUTE

General Also Says 35th "Fought Like Hell" and Did Great Work Against Heavy Odds.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Major-General William M. Wright, back in Washington visiting his family for a few days after a year in France as a divisional and corps commander, told today in broad outline the story of the "galloping Eighty-ninth," the Middle Western division that was trained at Camp Funston and is now in the army of occupation in Germany. Asked for a summing up of his opinion of this division, Gen. Wright said:

"The Eighty-ninth Division is a great division. It never failed me or anybody else. It was always on its objective per schedule."

Gen. Wright, of all Pershing's Generals, is the commander whose name will be most intimately linked with the history of Missouri troops in the war. It was his unique privilege, as he says, to command both the divisions in which the great bulk of Missouri troops fought. He trained and took overseas the Thirty-fifth, containing the Missouri National Guard units and he led in two great actions the Eighty-ninth Division, made up of the selective service men of Missouri and several other Western States. In France the Eighty-ninth frequently is called the "Triple W" division for its three commanders, Major-Generals Wood, Wright and Winn.

High Praise for the Thirty-Fifth.

Now Gen. Wright has brought home the Thirty-fifth Division and brought it home, it may be added, in excellent spirits. The Thirty-fifth Division, speaking generally, wants to hear no more of the "controversy" started by Gov. Allen. Mention "controversy" to Gen. Wright and the conversation comes to an abrupt stop. Mention the Thirty-fifth Division as a fighting unit and——

"The Thirty-fifth Division had a great punch and it fought like hell. It made a fine record. Any division that could advance 12½ kilometers in four days in the face of one second-class and two Prussian Guard Divisions over terribly difficult terrain has done its full duty and done it well. There's nothing wrong with such a division. The taking of Vauquois Hill alone was a magnificent feat. When Gen. Pershing assigned me to take the division home, he said, 'You can tell them that they can go back to America with a sense of duty well done.'"

So much for the Thirty-fifth, whose gallant story has been graphically told to readers of the Post-Dispatch. Gen. Wright was asked to tell about the other divisions of which Missourians may be equally proud. Thirty-fifth or Eighty-ninth—they are both close to his heart, and between them he draws no comparison. To him they are simply American soldiers of the Middle West. It means nothing that one division was a National Guard and the other a national army organization. He found in them the same fine type of enlisted personnel—a type he says that was never excelled by the soldiers of this, or of any other nation.

Eighty-ninth Never Failed Him.

From the record of its achievements Gen. Wright knows that the Thirty-fifth made good, but he cannot speak of its part in battle with the same personal knowledge as he can of the Eighty-ninth. Gen. Traub led the Thirty-fifth in the Argonne-Meuse offensive. Gen. Wright commanded the Eighty-ninth in the Toul sector in the drive of machine-like precision that wiped out the St. Mihiel salient and finally in the closing phase of the Argonne-Meuse offensive.

And the Eighty-ninth Division never failed him; never failed to reach an objective on schedule time. It is a proud division that will come back in June. The Germans paid it a compliment that they paid to only two or three other American divisions. This was in a communique captured in the Argonne, which read: "We are again opposite the Eighty-ninth. It is a first-class shock division."

The division feels that is about the highest tribute of the many tributes it has received—a greater honor even than the winning of the football championship of the A. E. F.

In the St. Mihiel drive, the first great, strictly American operation of the war, the Eighty-ninth Division was confronted by the Bois de Mort, "the most difficult thing," according to Gen. Wright, "in the salient." The French had lost heavily there and Wright knew that he had a hard nut to crack. The Eighty-ninth "horned it out," that is, the 177th Brigade, led by Major-General (then Brigadier-General) Frank L. Winn, went to the right and the 178th, commanded by Brigadier-General Hanson, went to the left. Winn, so it has been said, is a "corker" of a soldier as indicated by the fact that when Wright left the division he succeeded him in command. As the brigades passed (and this, it will be recalled, was the same strategy that Traub employed in reducing Vauquois Hill) three companies dropped off from each and entered the wood at the sides. The rest of the division went on and took the woods from the rear. Two thousand prisoners were captured by the division at this point.

Advanced Five Miles in Day.

Among his papers Gen. Wright has a battle map showing the part played by the Eighty-ninth in the St. Mihiel salient. It tells the story more vividly than words. The map is ruled with lines showing the location of the division at the end of each hour after the jump-off at 5 a. m. Sept. 12. A steady advance is indicated, with the division never failing to be where it was expected to be "per schedule." In 24 hours the division advanced five miles and took all its objectives.

The division was in the salient under shell fire all the time until Oct. 8. In that period it lost in killed 14 officers and 177 men and in wounded 41 officers and 892 men. Among those killed here was Lieut. Jerome Earl Moore of the 356th Infantry, a brother of George Moore, Internal Revenue Collector of St. Louis. The division captured in the salient a total of 2287 prisoners and a large quantity of guns, ammunition and supplies.

It was now a veteran division, ready for the supreme test of the Argonne. It "took over" from the Thirty-second Division, a high-class outfit of Wisconsin and Michigan National Guardsmen, commanded by Gen. Haan, on Oct. 19. On Nov. 1 the division "jumped off" in the Argonne-Meuse drive and never stopped fighting until the armistice was signed. To the left of it was the Second Division and to the right the Ninetieth. The Eighty-ninth, which was pushed out in front of both, proceeded to the task of mopping up the Bois de Bantheville. It waited on an intermediate objective for the divisions on its right and left and then went after the Barricourt Heights, supposed to be a great stumbling block. Six kilometers was the day's advance.

"Flying Wedge" Used.

The second day's attack was led by Winn's 177th Brigade. On a front three kilometers wide the division attacked somewhat after the manner of the "flying wedge" in football. As explained by Gen. Wright, the company in front would "fight itself out," fight until its commanders saw it begin to sag under the strain, then another company would be passed through it. Likewise when a battalion had gone the limit the battalion in the rear would go through to the front. Always, fresh troops were kept at the point of greatest shock.

In any offensive, according to Gen. Wright, the second is the trying day. On the first day the troops have the support of all their guns, everything moves like clockwork. Then comes the break-through and necessarily there is some degree of confusion through inability of the heavy guns in the rear to keep pace with the infantry. So it happened to the Eighty-ninth Division. Gen. Wrght on the first day had 220 guns backing him up with a perfect barrage; on the second the men attacked with practically no barrage. But they attacked and won. They had to go forward. It was simply the fortune of war that the guns were unable to give the maximum of support.

From Nov. 1 to 5 the division advanced 13 miles. In the Argonne-Meuse battle the division lost in killed 29 officers and 771 men, in wounded, 87 officers and 2390 men, in gassed 18 oficers and 545 men, and in missing 201 men. Neither in this battle nor in any other were any of the divisions reported as having been taken prisoner.

The division captured in the Meuse-Argonne 78 officers and 2015 men, 360 machine guns and 400 rifles and quantities of other guns, equipment and supplies.

The signing of the armistice found the division forcing its way across the Meuse on pontoon bridges and preparing to attack the heights commanding the river. Seven battalions had crossed.

"Fought to Last Minute."

"We fought to the last minute, and the Germans fought," said Gen. Wright. "For all that we knew the talk of an armistice was all Boche bunk. I was taking no chances. We had reached a point where we had to go forward or be caught in a dangerous position with the river at our backs."

At the time of the crossing of the Meuse, Gen. Hall was in command of the 178th Brigade. The 354th (St. Louis) regiment was under Col. Conrad Babcock. Of this outfit Gen. Wright said: "It was a fine regiment. It was an assault regiment on Nov. 1 and it went in with a smash and bang, Babcock leading."

The Eighty-ninth altogether, Gen. Wright estimates, suffered 6300 casualties, including killed, wounded, missing and gassed. Of the wounded probably 80 per cent returned to duty. In addition to the casualties in its own great battles the division had 834 men gassed in the Toul sector.

Much credit for the success of the division was given by Gen. Wright to Col. John C. L. Lee, the Chief of Staff. His home is at Junction City, Kan. Gen. Wright will leave New York Wednesday for Camp Funston and after two or three weeks there will take command at Camp Dodge, Iowa.

Speaking of the officers of the Thirty-fifth Division, Gen. Wright paid a high tribute to Lieutenant-Colonel Dwight Davis of St. Louis, who was on his staff as head of the operation section.

"I found him a splendid officer," said Gen. Wright.

Gen. Wright hesitated to single out any officers for mention, saying that many had done exceptionally fine work. He complimented Col. Bennett Clark, who was in the staff college and did not get to take part in the Argonne fighting, and said that Col. Rieger was among those who had made excellent records.

C. R. JUDGE'S WILL ATTACKED; HE LEFT $400,000 ESTATE

Sister-in-Law Declares H. Worthington Eddy, Executor, Influenced Making of Document.

Suit to contest the will of Charles R. Judge, former head of the Judge & Dolph Drug Co., who died April 29, 1918, leaving an estate estimated at $400,000, was filed in the Circuit Court yesterday by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Emma Judge, with whom Judge lived, and in whose home, at 4728 South Broadway, he died.

She sues as curatrix of her son, Charles R. Judge, 14 years old, and directs the proceeding against H. Worthington Eddy, executor of the Judge estate, and the Eddy Realty Co., of which Eddy is president.

Mrs. Judge alleges her brother-in-law was of unsound mind when he made the will and was influenced by Eddy. Under the will Eddy inherits 100 shares of the St. Louis Toilet Supply Co. and the Eddy Realty Co. is to get one-fifth of the estate after certain legacies are paid. Mrs. Judge was bequeathed one-tenth of the estate and, her son one-fifth, but the son's part is to be held until he is 31.

WOMAN'S NAME ON LIST TO SERVE ON U. S. JURY PANEL

Deputy Convinced "Some One Pulled a Boner" Scratches "M. M. Gerlach" From His Summons.

Deputy United States Marshal Clooney sallied forth yesterday to summon a jury panel for Monday's session o fthe Federal Court, and one name on his list was "M. M. Gerlach," the address being that of a Chestinut street real estate office. Nobody home but the stenographer when Clooney entered.

"I want M. M. Gerlach," he said.

"That's me," sair the stenographer, brisk and business-like.

"What—that is—are you sure?" stammered the deputy.

"Sure! You bet I'm sure," she said.

"Why, I've got a summons for you as a juryman," protested the deputy.

"Well, I don't know," was the doubtful response; "I never had any experience on juries." "I should say not—not in this State. Somebody must have pulled a boner," said the Marshal, as he bolted for the door.

The stenographer was Miss Mathilda Gerlach, 3510A Pestalozzi street, and the summons had been made out at random from a list of residents of the city.

Robber Takes Woman's Two Purses.

Mrs. Mollie Moon, 40 years old, told the police last night that at 8 o'clock a man who had knocked at the kitchen door of her home, 2029 Russell avenue, entered at the point of a revolver, extinguished the light and demanded her money. She gave him a purse containing $5.03. He took the $5, she said, but insisted that she had more money, whereupon she gave him another purse containing $24.50. The man then ran out, she said.

PREDICTS OVERWHELMING VOTE IN SENATE RATIFYING LEAGUE

Montana Congressman Says Italy's Silence Abrogated Secret Treaty When "14 Points" Were Agreed To.

Congressman John W. Evans of Missoula, Mont., passing through St. Louis last night on his way to Washington, told a reporter that he is confident that if the present Italian Government does not accept the position of President Wilson on the annexation of Fiume, the Italian people will set up a Government that will accept it. Internal conditions in Italy now warrant this view, he said.

He further declared that there will not be 10 votes in the Senate against ratisfication of the constitution of the league of nations. "No other species of animal known to biologists deliberately destroys itself, and I don't believe humans will," he said.

PERMANENT WRIT IN TELEPHONE RATE CASE

Circuit Judge at Jefferson City Forbids Use of Burleson Schedule in Missouri.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Circuit Judge John G. Slate today granted a permanent writ of injunction against the Southwestern Telegraph and Telephone (Bell) Co., to prevent it from putting into effect in Missouri the increased long distance telephone rate schedule ordered by Director-General Burleson. The rate was ordered into effect March 1, but was suspended by a temporary injunction secured from Judge Slate by the Public Service Commission.

Charles S. Gleed appeared as attorney for the Bell Telephone Co. and for Burleson, and argued for several hours against making the injunction permanent. He announced later that he will appeal to the Supreme Court from Judge Slate's decision.

The Public Service Commission this week ordered the suspension of increases in local rates in 12 cities, which had been filed by the Bell subsidiary companies in compliance with an order from Burleson.

It is understood here that Burleson will order the rates into effect, and will direct that the order of the commission suspending them be ignored by telephone officials. If he undertakes to pursue that policy it is probable that the commission will apply for injunction as they did in the long distance rates.

F. O. Hale, general manager of the Bell Telephone Co. here, said last night he did not know what further action would be taken by the company, and that he could not say what action officials of the company would take if Burleson ordered the rates put into effect.

LANDIS RULES BURLESON CAN'T INCREASE INTRASTATE CHARGES

Expresses Further Opinion That Congress Did Not Delegate Rate-Making Powers to Him.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Federal Judge Landis today ruled that Postmaster-General Burleson could not increase intrastate telegraph rates. He said he would dissolve the temporary injunction restraining the Attorney-General of Illinois from interfering with the imposition of the higher rates.

Judge Landis said that in his opinion it was the intention of Congress merely to give the President power to operate the wires as a national unit, but not to delegate to him the rate making power.

After being informed of Judge Landis' action, the National Association of State Railroad and Public Utilities Commissioners, in session today, issued a statement as follows:

"The members of the conference are greatly pleased at the decision of Judge Landis. His ruling is a victory for the people and supports the view taken by all state regulatory officials. The telephone and telegraph businesses are essentially local and cannot be successfully managed from Washington."

VON BLITZ'S AILMENT CURED BY OPERATION

Fritz Marches Grandly in Loan Parade Until He Slips on Car Track.

Fritz von Blitz's walking button was in good order yesterday, and he was a feature attraction in the daily Victory Loan parade on Washington avenue. He is the 12-foot mechanical man designed by a St. Louisan. Fritz was described in detail in the Post-Dispatch last Sunday.

He underwent a major operation the night before and yesterday he gravely strode along Washington avenue, from Fourth to Sixth street, south to St. Charles, west to Seventh and south to Locust, where he slipped on a car track and it was a day's work for him.

Behind Fritz was a miniature transport christened the Victory, in the hold of which was an automobile engine that supplied the necessary energy of his great steel legs. Liberty Loan orators stood on the Victory's deck and shouted their messages of patriotic appeal to the crowds that gathered along the line of march.

Another feature of the parade, which moved too fast for Fritz, was a United States army mobile machine shop and its crew of mechanics, recently brought from overseas. The mechanics stood at their posts in the big truck, operating appliances with which the little shop is equipped. The shop contains equipment for repairing artillery, rifles, small arms, automobiles, motor cycles and almost all of the implements of war. It cost the Government $40,000 and weighs with equipment, 22,470 pounds.

The truck carries a plant to generate the power to run its own machinery, part of which is a 14-inch lathe, two welding machines, drills, a complete apparatus for distilling water and blacksmith tools.

MOTOR CYCLIST REPORTS BEING CHASED BY WOLF

That St. Charles County wolf is at it again. This time it is a motor cycle he is charged with chasing. Previous to this he has matched his speed, according to report, with lambs, pigs, poultry and pedestrians.

Residents are sure that the beast which yesterday pursued a motor cycle ridden by August Settle, an insurance man, on the St. Charles rock road, is the same as that which has been seen by other St. Charles Countians, because the descriptions agree so precisely. All say it is "a great big gray wolf."

Settle pulled up at Bridgeton and told that the animal sprang at him from the underbrush at the side of the road, and raced after him, despite dust and the exhaust gas, for nearly a mile. Farmers remembered then that they had been missing chickens and pigs. Now another wolf hunt is in prospect.

LOSES RINGS, SUSPECTS FRIEND

Woman Hotel Guest Values Gems That Disappeared at $3000.

After being visited by a woman friend, Mrs. Arthur Cohn, a guest at the Marquette Hotel discovered Friday that a diner ring, valued at $2000 and a solitaire, valued at $1000, were missing, and she had her friend arrested before the woman left the hotel. She was released on bond.

Mrs. Cohn said that after the visit she went downstairs to lunch, and discovered her loss on her return. She also discovered that her friend was still in the hotel, so she called the house detective.

WOMAN, 76, FATALLY BURNED

Her Clothing Catches Fire in Her Home on Ashby Road in County.

Mrs. Elizabeth Curdt, 76 years old, was fatally burned in the yard of her home on the Ashby road, near the Midland Valley Golf Club in St. Louis County, Friday afternoon. She was cooking soap over an open fireplace, when her clothing caught fire.

Her daughter, Mrs. Alvina Schulte, with whom she lived, is deaf and did not hear her mother's cries. Mrs. Curdt ran 50 feet to the door of the house and pounded. Her daughter opened the door and she pitched forward unconscious. She died the same night. Mrs. Curdt was born and lived all her life in the county.

SEATTLE MAYOR HERE FRIDAY

Stopped General Strike Before It "Got to First Base."

Ole Hansen, Mayor of Seattle, will arrive here Friday morning, to speak for the Victory Loan, and will probably make talks Friday night at the Coliseum, before the Caruso concert audience in the Coliseum, and at the Shubert-Jefferson theater. Arrangements for a day address have not been completed. He will leave at night for Chicago.

Hansen came into national prominence by stopping the recent proposed general strike in Seattle. "It didn't even get to first base," Hansen announced.

HUDSON SUPER SIX

Wait for the New Hudson Super-Six Here Soon—Price $1975

Prompt Deliveries Assured Early Buyers—It is a Perfected Development of the Car You Know So Well

A new Hudson Super-Six is coming.

It reveals how four years' experience with 60,000 cars has enabled Hudson engineers to free it from many of the annoyances regarded as inevitable to all cars. It embodies the qualities which men said would make it the greatest car known.

It Is Worth Waiting For

Production on large scale is now under way.

Dealers will have their demonstrating cars within a few days.

You must not fail to see the new Hudson Super-Six.

Think of the history of earlier models. They have made a place in every branch of motor car use that has not been matched.

The first Hudson Super-Six, four years ago, increased motor power by 72% without added weight. It retained all the simplicity of the six. It minimized vibration.

Proved In A Thousand Ways

You remember how endurance was proved. Nothing to equal Hudson Super-Six records of performance had ever been known. Most of those stand today as achievements that no other car has been able to match.

But one thing those feats did, you perhaps do not know. They showed ways for development of subsequent models that find their expression in the new car soon to be offered.

Such a car could not possibly have come from any other organization. It takes years of experience to learn and develop the qualities we now offer.

The same engineers responsible for the first Super-Six have watched it in its service for 60,000 users and now offer the new Super-Six as the expression of their greater knowledge.

Isn't such a car worth waiting for?

Watch the papers for the arrival of the new Super-Six, then go see it.

The New Price Is $1975

Hudson production will be twice as large this year as last. Because of that the new price for the 7-passenger phaeton will be $1975.

Without the experience we now have such a car would have been impossible at an earlier time, regardless of the price at which it sold.

Still, as you know, the Super-Six has always been one of the world's finest cars. You hear that on all sides. It has led all other fine cars in sales.

There have never been enough to equal the demand. A like condition must surely obtain this year.

But those who buy early will get early delivery. They have the records of every Hudson Super-Six as an assurance of its value.

If you are on the point of buying a new car, go or telephone to your Hudson dealer. Perhaps he can tell you when you may see the new Hudson Super-Six.

COMMUNITY CENTERS IN JOINT CELEBRATION

Workers From Ten Hold Meeting to Mark Closing of Winter Season.

Ten of the 12 municipal community centers maintained in congested and outlying districts of the city were represented in a joint meeting last night at the Mullanphy Center, Eleventh street and Cass avenue, adjoining Mullanphy Playground. The meeting, which was held in connection with the closing of the work of the winter season, partook of the nature of a celebration participated in by peoples of all nationalities and from all portions of St. Louis. In this way has the municipal community centers scheme, under the supervision of Miss Sarah Wolf, Playground Supervisor of the City Division of Parks and Recreation, been active in promoting Americanism.

Two Centers to Meet Later.

The program last night was not participated in by the centers maintained at Cleveland High School and the Rose Fanning School, South Side centers which are chiefly devoted to gymnastics. These centers will have a combined meeting at the Cleveland High School auditorium and gymnasium next Friday evening.

Last night's celebration began with a supper for all the workers and for those users of the Mullanphy Center who were on the program. About 200 were at the supper.

The public part of the celebration began with a concert by the Community Center Orchestra. The pageantry of the evening was furnished by girls from 6 to 20 years old who took part in a springtime festival. Especially pleasing in the pageant were the "gardeners," several couples of little girls from the Shaw School in the southwestern part of the city, who showed in Terpsichorean pantomine how the gardens are made.

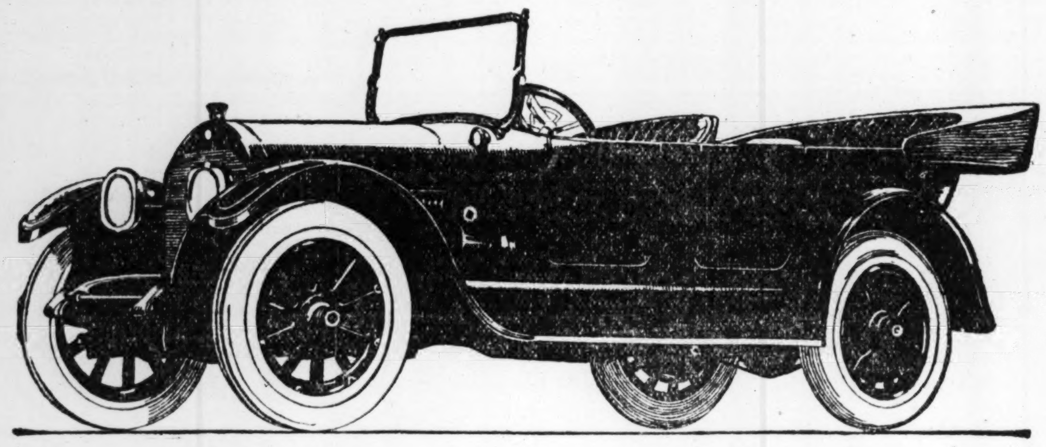
"The Pompeian Flower Girls," presented by a dozen older girls, also was excellent. At the end of the pageant all the groups took the floor together and slowly danced out. After the pageant, George Knapp of the War Camp Community Service, led everyone present, including the 600 spectators, in a "sing."

Prizes for the Centers' season athletic activities were awarded by Rodowe Abeken, superintendent of recreation, in the City Park Department. The Mark Twain Center among the boys, and the Ashland Center among the girls, carried off the basket-ball honors. The teams received pennants and each member a pin. The boys recieving pins were: Ervin Steinman, Ed. Steinman, W. Steinman, Schramm, Stussie, Sussler, Winn. The girls were: Misses Marquis, Griedensberg, Jogeer, M. Meier, A Meier and Mrs. Schulte.

Ashland Center won the boys' handball and checker championships and the girls' volley ball championships also, bringing it the point pennant. The "bombardment" prize of the boys went to Mark Twain Center. Miss B. Noble won the girls' checkers prize.

The celebration closed with dancing for all present. The Community Center work will continue throughout the summer, and will be carried on by the same workers but on the outdoors playgrounds. Last night's celebration was the first joint one ever held by the workers.

The total attendance at the centers during the past winter was 85,000. Beside the athletic contests there were numerous pageants and community dances and sings.



THE Cadillac Company has never, without warrant, cautioned the public to guard against possible disappointment in delivery.

Such a word of warning is imperative at this moment.

The reasons for this are plainly apparent.

This stable, steadfast demand has now been greatly accelerated.

The hosts returning from France are spreading everywhere the gospel of Cadillac precedence the world over.

"GOVERNMENT SALE OF AUTOMOBILES" A FAKE

Several Persons Here Defrauded by Men Representing Themselves to Be U. S. Agents.

Men representing themselves as agents of the Government, who have been selling options on Government automobiles for anything they could get, from $10 up, under the pretext that the Quartermaster Depot was preparing to hold a great sale of surplus automobiles acquired by the War Department, are being sought by Government agents.

This fact was disclosed following an investigation of a warning to the public that no such sale was to be held, issued by Capt. James A. Forree of the Quartermaster Department, motor transport officer for St. Louis. Capt. Forree said his office and that of the Quartermaster Depot, at Third and Arsenal streets, had been besieged by inquiries concerning the sale, indicating that the "sale agents" had covered a good deal of ground with their scheme.

How the scheme is being worked was related to a Post-Dispatch reporter by a person in the confidence of the Government agents.

Printed circulars were put out announcing a sale of several thousand new automobiles of standard make, to be disposed of at $150 to $350 each—cars of which the War Department has a surplus owing to the sudden cessation of hostilities, it was represented.

The men with these circulars said they were Government agents and were authorized to sell options on the cars. They would collect the option price, giving a receipt for the same and tell the purchaser to go to the Quartermaster Depot and pay the balance and get a new car. As no cars were delivered the attention of the Department of Justice was called to the scheme.

News of the "sale" had also reached towns near St. Louis, and several men, some from the Wabash shops at Decatur, Ill., came here with the expectation of attending the sale in person, only to discover that the whole thing was a fake.

RURAL AMERICA FIRM AGAINST BOLSHEVISM, HOUSTON SAYS

Secretary of Agriculture Reassured by What He Found in North and South Carolina.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—"There is as much chance of Bolshevism making a dent in the farming population of this country as there is of a feather denting this desk," said Secretary of Agriculture Houston of St. Louis to the Post-Dispatch correspondent, in discussing farming conditions in America.

The Secretary, who says that he likes to "get his feet on the ground" by going out now and then and talking to the farmers, has just returned from a trip to North and South Carolina. What he found there, he said, was reassuring to him and that he believed the prosperous conditions noted there were typical of rural communities throughout the United States. Against an encroachment by Bolshevism, he declared, rural America would stand "solid as a rock."

Secretary Houston sees no prospect of a general reduction in the cost of food supplies within the next year. There may be some downward tendency when the next crops come in, he said, but the easing up from the present standard of war-time prices will be gradual, as heavy demands from Europe will operate to keep up the cost of farm products in this country for an indefinite period. He said there should be no let-up in the efforts of producers until the hungry people of the world are fed.

NAVAL HYDROPLANE HERE TODAY

Big Craft to Make Several Flights During Loan Campaign.

A large naval hydroplane, which is expected to arrive here by land today from Great Lakes Naval Training Station, near Chicago, will make a number of flights during the remainder of the Victory loan campaign and will also fly to points on the Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio and Tennessee rivers, in the Eighth (St. Louis) Federal Reserve District.

The plane will be set up tomorrow and its commanding officer will then map out its course. It has a wing spread of 58 feet, and is of the largest type of sea aircraft in use by the United States navy. It will be manned by an officer and 10 men. It is planned to use it in a sham battle with the German submarine which is scheduled to come to St. Louis later.

COMPANY STILL IS ORIGINAL 10

Geller, Ward & Hasner Celebrate Unusual Record With Dinner.

Seventeen years ago 10 men formed the Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co. The 10 have just celebrated the fact that since that time there has been no change in the officers or directors of the firm, the 10 still continuing their business relationship, with a dinner at the Missouri Athletic Association.

The company has grown into a jobbing house, selling goods in every state in the Union. The officers are H. W. Geller, president; D. F. Kingsland, first vice president; Emil Homer, second vice president; Ira W. Love, secretary; E. Partenheimer, treasurer, with L. T. Ward, C. H. Hasner, H. J. Hopkins, A. J. Austin and F. J. Reppenhagen, directors.

Mexico to Recall Envoy to Italy.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, April 26.—The Argentine Foreign Office learns that the Mexican Government is recalling its diplomatic mission to Italy because it has not been recognized by the Italian Government.

PETER WHITE, 72, DIES

Former Manufacturer Was Originally With N. O. Nelson Company.

Peter White, 72 years old, of 1841 Cass avenue, who to a few years ago was head of the Peter White Sanitary Co., died at his home yesterday morning of pneumonia after a short illness. White had lived in St. Louis nearly all his life, and prior to his entry into business for himself was superintendent of the brass manufacturing department of the N. O. Nelson Mfg. Co.

White's wife died last December, a loss he never got over. He is survived by a son, J. Shepperd White, and five daughters, all married. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning from the family residence. Burial will be in Calvary cemetery. White was a veteran of the Civil War.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

BUYERS HAVE A BIG INNING IN STOCKS ON WALL STREET MARKET

Price Range for the Week Is 2 to 5 Points Higher on the Standard Shares—Bonds Are Irregular.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"As everybody knows, who is familiar with finance, a really important and prolonged movement on the New York Stock Exchange, whether upward or downward, is apt to mean a good deal more than the mere financial situation and business outlook in America.

"When, as has been the case conspicuously throughout the great war, the financial situation is bound up intimately with military and political events, the market in its larger movements will reflect and foreshadow the one as well as the other.

"The remarkable prophesy of the New York stock market, which advanced in May of 1918, when Ludendorff was breaking alternately the English and French lines, might be called a classic instance in point.

"But the great rise on the Stock Exchange in 1915 and 1916, though primarily a response to economic events in the United States, threw at least a side light on the financial view of the tightening of the allies' grasp at the throat of Germany, and the stubborn determination subsequently shown by France and England.

The Market of 1916.

"One is sometimes tempted to ask whether the great break in prices at the end of 1916, was, after all, exclusively inspired (as Wall street then supposed), by the prospect of a Bethmann-Hollweg peace, and a sudden withdrawal of the 'war orders,' or whether it might not have had in view the unrestricted submarine campaign and our own entry into the war.

"We know now, at any rate, that people both in Berlin and Washington were aware, when the stock market prices were collapsing in December, of just what the German military dictators had in mind, and of what the consequences might be.

"It is this view of the stock market which lends particular interest to the present movement. The impetus derived from such considerations as the wheat crop outlook in this country, and the remarkable foreign trade situation is evident enough. But the feeling will persist, based on the recollection of the war-time markets, that a year from now we may be pointing back to the April rise in prices in 1919, as a phophecy of the course of events in the Paris negotiations, the successful completion of the league, the yielding of Germany to the terms of peace, the check to Bolshevism, and the pacification of Europe, equally noteworthy with the forecasts of the markets of last May.

"Certainly it has been at least a striking consideration of the recent upward movement that it has not paid the slightest attention to the series of 'critical moments' at the Paris conference; to the collision of Wilson and Clemenceau in the special correspondence; to the defiance by the Italian delegation; to the "rumors' that Germany will reject the terms of peace, or to the repetetion of alleged 'Bolshevik revolutions' in various selected capitals of central Europe.

Effect of Foreign News.

"If the Stock Exchange and the sober financial community had believed all that came over the cables regarding these calamitous incidents, something would certainly have happened to the market. But nothing happened; the advance continued. We shall presently see in what precise measure the prophetic qualities of the stock market have again been tested.

"Wall street and the stock market have their vagaries and eccentricities; but their judgment of eevnts on a good many past occasions of the sort will at least bear comparison favorably with the general run of cable correspondents, editorial writers and excited politicians.

"In the same connection, the Government's figures on last month's foreign trade by destinations, as given out today, were interesting. In March our excess of merchandise exports to Great Britain was $75,000,000 less than in the same month of 1918, but $97,000,000 larger than in 1914. The month's surplus of exports to France was $10,000,000 above last year and $84,000 beyond 1914. But the European neutrals make the most interesting showing. Excess of exports in March to Norway and Sweden, for instance, was $33,000,000, against a slight excess of imports in the previous year. It is no matter of wonderment that Scandinavian exchange is now in favor of the New York market.

London Review.

pecial Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 26.—"At present seems likely that our funding loan ay date about the middle of May. he Government will find its task ifficult because the investing pub- is thoroughly tired of national travagance, unsound finance and nemployment doles.

"There is much dissatisfaction at e continued expansion of the cur- ncy. The increase last week was 1,000,000, mainly due to the fact at the Government paid the miners 000,000, representing arrears of yments since the beginning of the ar. The outlay, of course, was accomplished by a clear manufacture of currency.

"The present total of the notes outstanding is £346,000,000, representing an increase for the year of £114,000,000. The Government is showing the same unsoundness in regard to the currency as underlies the use of employment doles. Both are contributing to social unrest.

"Possibly the chief feature of the budget will prove to be the substitution of a graduated general profits tax in place of the present excess profits duty. Important changes in the income tax are less likely, because of the recent appointment of a commission to consider the general working and incidence tof the tax.

Shipping Conditions Changed.

"Shipping conditions are so changed that it is not believed negotiations for the transfer of the Mercantile Marine Co.'s ships to outright British ownership will be immediately resumed. Later on it is possible that the matter will be taken up.

"Keen competition from American steel makers is expected by the British trade. You have been favored in the past by the fact that our works were monopolized by the Government, while now we are handicapped both by the military demands on power and the rise in wages. The further economic struggle is likely to impose severe tests on international good will and the league of nations covenant.

"The industrial crisis here is likely to become severe, largely through lack of governmental firmness.

"There is a curious rumor afloat that you may possibly make arrangements with France for discounting a large part of her indemnity from Germany, the purpose being to enable France to obtain funds quickly for exchange purposes and to obviate the need of immediate, drastic taxation.

"Within reasonable limits the arrangement would possibly be reasible; even advisable, but the fear is expressed lest even your great credit resources become overstrained."

Bradstreet's Review.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Bradstreet's review said:

"Improvement and expansion are the key words as to ordinary distributive trade, both at wholesale and retail. More of the important industries send cheerful reports, but as heretofore, the big basic industries, iron and steel coal, while displaying a shade more life in isolated instances, are running at slow speed compared with the feverish activity of last year and price unsettlement or uncertainty still continues the apparent chief brake upon all operations.

"Winter wheat crop prospects are still highly flattering and clearing weather is permitting more activity in Western grain fields and Southern cotton and corn areas. The price situation is stronger certainly as regards food, textiles and foot coverings. The stock market, despite realizing, is strong and active and reports re unemployment, except at debarkation and large industrial centers, are more cheerful."

Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The market for coffee futures showed continued or increasing strength during today's earlier trading, with all deliveries making new high ground for the movement. There was covering and a broadening demand from commission house and trade sources which seemed to be based upon the reiteration of small coming crop estimates, firmness in Brazil and reports of further advances in the local spot markets. July contracts sold at 17.63c and March at 16.25c, or 30 to 54 points net higher on the active months. The close was a few points off from the best under realizing, but showed a net gain of 25 to 34 points. Closing bids: May, 17.65c; July, 17.45c; Sept., 16.89c; Oct., 16.72c; Dec., 16.35c; Jan., 16.25c; March, 16.22c. Spot coffee firm; Rio, No. 7s, 18⅝c; Santos 4s, 22¼@22½c. No fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market.

Hay Market.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Graham & Martin Grain Co., Merchants' Exchange.

Timothy hay market strong and sharply higher, under continued light offerings and unprecedented demand. CORN UP 12 TO 16 CENTS IN TRADING FOR THE WEEK

Market Here Is Influenced by Decreasing Wheat Stocks and Return to War Bread in Europe.

Sensational whirls skyward took place in the corn market here last week as a result of the vanishing of the bulk of the United States exportable wheat surplus, and owing to European demand for all the packing house products obtainable. Compared with a week ago, corn at the close yesterday showed 12c to 16c advance. Oats were up 1½c to 4⅝c.

Every single successive day witnessed a breaking of all previous high-price records for corn this season. Withdrawal of the Food Administration as a seller of wheat was taken as sufficient notice of the acute scarcity of that cereal.

Then the fact that the New York harbor strike settlement promised to expedite geratly the export of foodstuffs tended further to give unusual energy to the buying of corn and so, too, did a jump in the value of live hogs to the top-most point ever known. Strained political conditions at Paris counted likewise as a stimulus.

The climax was clapped by news of bubonic plague at Buenos Aires and by decision of the Supreme Food Council to put all Europe back again to "war bread."

Oats sympathized with corn and were influenced by light receipts and higher cash prices.

Friday's corn market was the most unusual seen on the Merchant's Exchange in over a year. In the early trading prices were distinctly weak on professional selling, owing to the recent wide advance. Then came reports of bubonic plague in Argentina and a slow rally started. This was followed by a wild buying movement that carried prices up 7c to 8c from the early low, on a cabled dispatch from Paris by Herbert C. Hoover of the Foreign Food Council, that the world would have to go on a war bread basis, and the United States use substitutes.

In the scramble to cover, "privilege" traders found the market bare of offers and quotations varied almost ½c between trades while the excited buying lasted. An announcement by Julius Barnes, president of the Food Administration, that the ruling applied only to Europe, and a return to war bread conditions in the United States was not planned, had no effect on values while the buying furore from shorts was in progress. It was not until after the close that a correct interpretation of Hoover's message was possible.

On the strength of Barnes' denial, the market yesterday opened 2c to 2½c under Friday's finish, but a rally followed announcement by the Food Administration that orders would be placed next Thursday for Victory flour, on a basis of 75 per cent wheat and 25 per cent corn flour; also for flour of 75 per cent wheat and 25 per cent barley flour and for flour of 75 per cent wheat and 12½ per cent of corn and barley flour.

The market yesterday also was bullishly influenced by exports of over 11,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour for the week, record shipments with one exception. This is expected to reflect in a material decrease in the visible supply of wheat when the official figures are issued Monday.

CHICAGO CORN IS STEADY AFTER AN EARLY BREAK

Rally Follows Announcement That Government Will Purchase Blended Flour on 25 Per Cent Basis.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Corn averaged lower in price today, influenced chiefly by the statement of the Food Administration that a return to war bread would not be necessary in the United States. The market closed unsettled, at 1c net decline to ¼c advance, with July $1.68⅝ to $1.69 and September $1.64¼ to $1.64⅝. Oats finished unchanged to ⅜c up, and provisions varying from 15c off to a rise of 57c.

Prices broke sharply at the outset in the corn market, owing to attention having been focussed on official announcement that the war-bread policy of the Supreme Food Council at Paris referred only to Europe and not to this country. Subsequently, however, relative firmness prevailed as a result of notice that the Food Administration would buy blended flour, which might contain as high as 25 per cent of corn flour.

Bulls were made cautious, though, by increasing consignments and by reports that a more plentiful supply of cars would enlarge receipts next week. Besides, commission house business showed great shrinkage compared with yesterday's rush.

Oats were comparatively firm on account of scantiness of offerings. On the other hand, Eastern demand was slow.

Provisions continued strong, especially lard, which attained a new high-price level. Foreign demand was the chief bullish factor.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE PLANS TO INCREASE ELEVATORS

The Merchants' Exchange and the St. Louis Grain Club have joined forces to promote increased elevator facilities here, and Marshall Hall, president of the Grain Club, tomorrow will appoint an Elevator Committee to work with a committee appointed by President E. C. Andrews of the Merchants' Exchange. These committees will acquaint the banking and railroad interests with the needs here of modern concrete elevators, with proper rail and terminals for handling the enormous receipts of grain that are expected in the St. Louis market in the future.

A second committee to be appointed will be known as an Industrial Committee, and will work to bring to St. Louis or the St. Louis territory, industries which use grain or grain products.

The establishing of a claim bureau for the benefit and protection of members of the Merchants' Exchange is another project that is crystallizing and when fully established will be of material benefit to the St. Louis market.

As outlined in brief, the claim bureau will only look after such matters as the individual firms are able to take care of. The claim bureau will take up claims refused by railroads and will handle them in the interest of Exchange members.

PRICES ABOUT STEADY IN THE CATTLE MARKET HERE

Receipts for the Week Are Liberal, and Show Increase of Texas Grass Cattle; Hogs Are Steady.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Last Year.
Cattle	19,380	19,549	21,407
Hogs	77,933	80,987	56,092
Sheep	6,986	4,512	2,506

Receipts of cattle were liberal here last week, and while the market opened a little stronger the first part of the week, the liberal arrivals caused most of the early advance to be lost, and the market closed steady with the previous week's close on all classes of cattle. Texas grass cattle are beginning to come to the Northern markets in fair volume, and as the season advances, this will naturally affect the price of medium flesh cattle.

Prime heavy beef steers are quoted at $18 to $20; choice to prime, $16 to $18; good to choice, $14.50 to $16; medium to good, $13 to $14.50; common to medium, $11 to $13; common light steers, on canner and cutter order, $8 to $10. Good to choice heavy fleshy feeders, $12.75 to $14; good to choice feeders, $11.75 to $12.75; common to medium, $10 to $11.50. Good to choice stockers, $10.50 to $12; common to medium, $8.50 to $10.50. Choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle, $14 to $16; good to choice, $12 to $14; common to medium, $8 to $12. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $12.50 to $14; good to choice, $11 to $12.50; medium to good, $9.50 to $11; fair flesh cows, $8 to $9.50; cutters, $6.50 to $8; canners, $5.50 to $6.50. Good to choice stock cows, $8.50 to $9; common to fair, $6.50 to $8.50; good to choice stock heifers, $8.50 to $9.50; common to fair, $7 to $8.50. Fat bulls, $10.50 to $12; heavy sausage bulls, $8.50 to $10; light sausage bulls, $7.50 to $8.50. Common quality fleshy yearlings, $8 to $9; common quality thin yearlings, $7 to $8.

The hog market closed the week fairly active, and while the top showed 10c lower than Friday's top, the bulk of the hogs sold strong to 5c higher; top yesterday was $20.95. The supply of good hogs was light, but as there was but one packer and the city butchers in the trade yesterday, the supply was large enough to go around. Clearance was good and there were no good hogs being held over for Monday.

Good to choice native hogs 200 lbs. and up, $20.60 to the top; light and mixed hogs, 160 to 190 lbs., $19.75 to $20.50; 120 to 150 lb. pigs, $19 to $19.50; lighter pigs, 80 to 115 lbs., $14.50 to $18.50; peewee pigs, $13 to $14.25; best roughs, $19.25 to $19.50.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were not heavy, but were liberal enough at other markets to force a decline here of 25c on fat sheep, compared with the week before; while lambs of all kinds closed fully $1 per cwt. lower.

Wooled lambs are quoted at $18 to $19. Good to choice sheep, $14.50 to $15; medium flesh sheep, $12 to $14; choppers, $9 to $11; canners, $5 to $7.50; bucks, $11.50 to $12. Clipped lambs top at $16.15; coarse, heavy and bucky kind of clipped lambs and half-fat kinds, $13 to $15.50; fat sheep, $12 to $12.50; bucks, $10. Goats, medium to good, $8.50 to $10.50; plain half-fat goats, $6.50 to $7.50; stock goats, $5.50 to $6.50; kid goats, $7 to $12.50.

UNFAVORABLE WEATHER MAP ADVANCES COTTON MARKET

Futures Are Active and Gain 20 to 32 Points at Week-End Session in New York.

NEW YORK, April 26.—An unfavorable weather map and bullish week-end reviews of the goods trade gave the market a very firm tone at the opening today. First prices were 24 to 38 points higher on new style months, almost all of which made new high records during the early trading, with May selling at 28.65c and October at 25.30c.

The buying was active and general and while the advance was checked by realizing, offerings were absorbed on slight reactions.

Later fluctuations were irregular, but there was support on the declines with traders evidently nervous over the outlook for continued low temperatures in the belt and the possibility of further bullish developments before the reopening of the market here on Tuesday morning. The close was steady at 28.45c for May and 25.13c for October, with new-style months generally showing net advances of 20 to 32 points. Cotton futures closed steady: May, old, 27.18c; new, 28.50c; July, old, 26.90c; new, 26.92c; October, old, 24.75c; new, 25.13c; December, new, 24.60c; January new, 24.25c.

Cotton spot steady; middling, 29.50c.

Browns Put Over Triple Steal but Sox Win, 9 to 4

Poor Work of Davenport and Rogers Nullifies Feature Play in Third Inning.

ONE ROUND DECIDES IT

10 Chicagoans Batted in Sixth and Six of Them Scored—7000 Fans Present.

Dave Davenport's ascension in the first inning, his inability, coupled with that of Tom Rogers, to silence the heavy artillery of the White Sox in the sixth, and two errors, nullified a triple steal cleanly executed by Sisler, Kenneth Williams and Demmitt in the third inning of yesterday's game. As a result the White Sox captured the final game of the series, 9 to 4. About 7000 fans attended.

The triple steal put through by the Burkemen was one of those rarities of the national pastime; a play not seen every day. It came when "Red" Faber, an experienced hurler, was firing for the Sox. Sisler, on third, set sail for the plate while Faber was winding up and cleanly beat the throw to Lynn.

This tally of Sisler's tied it up for Burke's aggregation and a moment later a single by Herman Bronkie put them one marker to the good. The play was the only bright spot of the contest.

Horrible Sixth Decided It.

However, it went for naught, when Davenport and Rogers, who replaced him, were pounded to the three corners of the lot in the sixth. In this round, just 10 Sox went to the plate, six of them hit safely, while another reached the initial sack on an error. Briefly, the following happened in this round:

Gandil doubled to left. Risberg hit to Sisler and when the latter threw wild to third trying for Gandil, both were safe. Lynn's infield hit counted Gandil. Faber sacrificed. Leibold singled to center, counting Risberg. Rogers replaced Davenport. Weaver hit to Gedeon and Lynn was run down, Gedeon to Billings. Collins singled to right, Leibold and Weaver scoring. Jackson singled through Rogers. Collins and Jackson put over a double steal, Collins tallying, while Jackson reached third when Billings dropped Gedeons' return. Felsch doubled, scoring Jackson. Here Koob replaced Rogers. Gandil up for the second time, popped to Gerber. Six runs and the old ball game.

Faber Uses Little Speed.

The Browns succeeded in driving Frank Shellenback, a righthander, to cover in three innings, but Urban Faber, using nothing but a slow curve and slow spitter stopped them dead. Just four hits were made off him during the six and two-thirds innings he worked. While he won, Faber did not resemble the Faber of 1917. The Faber of 1917 had speed. Yesterday he did not.

Davenport, facing the Sox the second time, gave the Sox three runs in the first through his wildness. Leibold and Weaver paraded. Collins popped out and Jackson forced Weaver. Felsch was hit. Then Gandil doubled to the center field fence. Result—three runs on one hit.

Burke's charges came back with one in their half. Tobin walked. Gedeon singled, sending Tobin to third. Sisler flied to Jackson and Tobin counted.

Browns Chase Shellenback.

The score remained this way until the third, when the Browns went ahead. One out, Tobin walked and Gedeon, Sisler and Williams singled, Tobin scoring. Faber here replaced Shellenback, and Demmitt, hitting the first ball, forced Gedeon at the plate. Then Sis, Williams and Demmitt put over the triple steal, Sisler counting. Bronkie hit, scoring Williams, but Demmitt was out at the plate.

The Browns missed a great chance in the fifth. Tobin opened with a double and went to third on a wild pitch. Gedeon walked. With a drawn in infield, Sisler lined straight to Risberg and Gedeon was doubled off first. This was the Browns' only real chance after the third.

The Cleveland Indians, favored to make a strong fight for the American League pennant, will open a four-game series against the Browns this afternoon. The Indians come here from Detroit where they broke even in two games. Fohl is carrying seven pitchers, three catchers, six infielders and five outfielders at present. With the club is Les Nunamaker, who was with the Browns last season.

According to an announcement made yesterday, Manager Burke intends to start Carl Wellman, who has not piched in an American League game since 1917, against the Indians today. His opponent will be Guy Morton, a righthander.

Sox Scored 29 Runs.

In the four games played here, the White Sox scored 29 runs and made 50 hits. They had 13 runs and 21 safeties in the opener; 5 runs, 10 hits in No. 2; 2 runs and 6 hits in the third, and 9 tallies and 13 safeties yesterday. They averaged more than 7 runs per contest, and over a dozen hits.

Gedeon Is Hitting .600.

Joe Gedeon, the Browns' second sacker, is hitting .630 for the season. Against the White Sox flingers, Gedeon made nine hits in 15 attempts. Joe Jackson of the Sox hit .556, with 10 out of 18, including two doubles and a home run.

GOWDY SIGNS 1-YEAR CONTRACT WITH BRAVES

BOSTON, Mass., April 26.—Sergt. Henry (Hank) Gowdy, who returned from overseas Friday, signed a one-year's contract today to catch for the Boston National League club. The terms were not announced, but Gowdy said the club had been "very liberal."

Soldan Winner in 'Prep' Track Meet

Gold and Brown Athletes Score 66 Points, of Which Calhoun Made 15.

The Soldan High track team won from three rivals in a four-cornered meet, yesterday morning at Washington University Field, amassing 66 points in 13 events, open to both seniors and juniors. Kirkwood finished second in the point column, with 35, slightly more than half the victor's total, and Cleveland took third honors, with the sum of 34. East St. Louis was low entry and scored only 7 points. The Gold and Brown team was awarded 7 firsts, as against 3 each for Cleveland and Kirkwood, East St. Louis failing to get one five-point place.

Arch Trumm, captain of the Cleveland team, was the individual light of the meet, scoring 20 points for his school, and running the 100-yard dash in 10 3-5 seconds.

The expected feature of the morning was the century race between Trumm and Malcolm Calhoun, captain of the Soldan team, in which Trumm nosed out Calhoun by a yard.

Trumm counted firsts in the 100, the 220 and the broad jump and drew second in the discus throw and third in the shotput. Trumm was pushed for individual honors by Calhoun, who added 15 points to the Soldan totals. First place was given Calhoun in the 220-low hurdles and the high jump, the latter after he had cleared the bar at 67½ inches. Huckins starred for Kirkwood, winning first in the high hurdles and the pole vault, and counting 16 points.

Cleveland did not enter a relay team, and was handicapped in other events as well by the absence of track men who did not attend because of their activity with the Cleveland baseball team.

100-YARD DASH—Trumm, C., first; Calhoun, S., second; Edgington, C., third; Jackes, S., fourth. Time 10 3-5s.

RETURNED SOLDIERS ASK VOICE IN ARRANGEMENTS FOR WILLARD-DEMPSEY GO

CUMBERLAND, Md., April 26.—A meeting of returned soldiers of the recent war was held here tonight and a resolution adopted and addressed to Gov. Harrington stating that they believe it their privilege to have a voice in the matter of allowing the Willard-Dempsey fight to be staged at Cumberland.

Tex Rickard has left for New York and John W. Snyder, who was instrumental in having Rickard agree on Cumberland, went to Baltimore for further conference with the Government. Rickard expects a final answer Monday.

Doak Batted Hard and Reds Capture Final Game, 5-1

As Result of Four Straight Victories, Moran's Men Now Lead National League.

CINCINNATI, April 26.—The Cardinals of St. Louis are now tailenders in the National League, while the Reds are leaders, as a result of the fourth straight victory for Moran's men over Rickey's cohorts yesterday, 5 to 1. The Reds sewed up the game in the very first inning, when they tallied three runs against Bill Doak.

Spittin' Bill started the proceedings by passing Rath and Neale. Then Groh singled, filling the bases. Roush forced Groh, Rath scoring. The venerable Sherry Magee poled a double, which tallied Neale and Roush.

The Cardinals could do nothing with Adolpho Luque, the Cuban, with men on bases. They made nine hits, but could tally only once in the seventh, when Paulette singled and came all the way home on Schultz' double. Schultz proved the batting star for the Cards, with two doubles and a single in four attempts.

Reinhart Pitches One Ball.

Moran's men added one to their total in the second. Kopf beat out an infield hit and went to second on Schultz's wild heave. Rariden and Luque flied out, Kopf scoring on the latter's hoist.

That ended Doak and Young Mr. Reinhart, very long and very solemn, went to the hill. He fired only once. The ball hit Heine Groh on the arm and Branch Rickey promptly run Young Mr. Reinhart hop-legged. Bill Sherdel got on the job for his third appearance in four days.

The southpaw did nobly, save in the fifth, when Neale potted him for a home run. Oscar Tuero, Cuban, worked the last two innings and looked good, though saved some trouble by Heathcote, who made a catch that was worth going miles to see.

Stock Fails in Sixth.

Luque, the Cuban, was there like a duck all day, a great and dangerous pitcher. And to think that Rickey refused him for a gift when Garry Herrmann offered him to the Cards just to help out. Luque showed his nerve in the sixth. Bases full, one out and Stock at bat, he tossed him one, a baby toss that a child could not resist. Stock hit into a double play ending the inning.

Paulette Plays Gerat Ball.

Paulette's playing was one of the features of the quartet of battles. He fielded in great style and also hit well.

30 Men Left on Base.

In the four games, the Cardinals had 30 men left on bases, an average of more than seven per game.

Cards Play Cubs Today.

The Cardinals departed last night for Chicago, where they are scheduled to open a four-game series with the Cubs tomorrow. Jake May will likely draw the hurling assignment.

CUBS CLOUT BABE ADAMS, BUT PIRATES WIN, 6—3

CHICAGO, April 26.—Pittsburg made it two out of three from the Chicago Nationals, today, by winning the final game of the initial series, 6 to 3. "Babe" Adams, veteran pitcher of the Pittsbuag team, opposed Douglas and Weaver on the slab. The Cubs made 12 hits off Adams, twice as many as the visitors made; but in tight places, they failed to deliver. Score:

YEATMAN HIGH DEFEATS KENRICK NINE, 10 TO 7

In a game that was featured by wild base running, long hits and an unseemly number of errors, Yeatman High team defeated Kenrick, yesterday morning, by a score of 10—7.

Kuntz started the game for Crippen's Yeatman tossers, but his delivery proved ineffective after the third inning, and he was replaced by Walter Roettger in the fifth, when the score was 4—3 in Kenrick's favor.

SUNSET HILL TO HOLD FIRST EVENT WEDNESDAY

The formal opening of the Sunset Hill Club's rearranged and rebunkered golf course will take place next Wednesday, a blind bogey tournament having been arranged as the feature. Three prizes will be played for. All players have been requested to turn in as soon as possible, their five best score cards for the 18 holes in order to arrange handicaps.

The Greens Committee announces a new arrangement for playing the course which was effective Friday. It follows: The first four holes are identical with the old course; No. 5 is now old No. 10, No. 6 is now old No. 11, No. 7 is now old No. 12, No 8 is now old No. 7, No. 9 is now old No. 8, No. 10 is now old No. 6, No. 11 is now old No. 13, No. 12 is now old No. 14, No. 13 is now old No. 15, No. 14 is now old No. 16, No. 15 is now old No. 17, No. 16 is now old No. 8, and No. 18 is now old No. 9.

The total yardage for the course is 6258.

Soldan Captures Ten-Inning Game After Bad Start

McKinley Beaten 6—5, After Getting Off to a Three-Run Lead in the First.

The resignation of Umpire Marty Byrne following an altercation with coaches of several high school teams necessitated the postponement of the Central-Cleveland high school game yesterday afternoon.

The argument occurred just before the Soldan and McKinley nines took the field for the opening game of the weekly scholastic double-header. Byrne refused to officiate; and Coaches Cook and Shiek of Soldan and McKinley respectively, agreed to allow Walter Roettger, star pitcher of the Yeatman High team, to supplant the striking arbiter.

Soldan and McKinley subsequently took the field, the West End club defeating McKinley 6 to 5, in 10 innings, after the crimson-hosed contingent had gotten off to what appeared to be a commanding lead.

However, when starting time for the second contest arrived, Coach Walker refused to allow the Central High club to take the field. Central and Cleveland are at present tied for the league leadership, and it has generally been conceded that the schedule game would go a far way toward deciding the scholastic supremacy. Walker stated that he did not think that such an important contest should be handled by an inexperienced official.

Bremser's Delivery Causes Argument.

According to several witnesses the disagreement between Byrne and the team tutors occured in the clubhouse. Several coaches told the umpire that the pitching delivery of Bill Bremser, the Central hurler, included a balk movement. Byrne denied this, and when the coaches became insistent, the umpire said, "I quit." Byrne stated later that he is through with the High School League.

Coach Guy of Cleveland and Walker of Central announced that the postponed game would probably be played some afternoon this week.

Only Two Runs Earned.

The McKinley-Soldan contest, although as the score will indicate, was very closely contested and furnished plenty of thrills, was at the same time a very loosely contested affair. Of the 11 runs scored, only two of them enter in the earned run class, and one of this pair might be called tainted. More material evidence of the slovenliness of defense appears from the 15 errors in the box score.

The South Siders got off to a lead in the initial round when two hits and a heinous error on the part of Kling, the Soldan shortstop, resulted in three runs. The crimson attack was spent in this inning, as Schiek's men could not tally another until the eighth.

Chicken Feed.

I LOVE my neighbor as myself
And would not do him wrong;
But oh, I wish he'd keep his hens
At home where they belong.

They eat my lettuce and my beans
My onions, peas and such;
And while they fatten on my greens
The chick-weed they won't touch.

Before my egg plants ever get
The slightest chance to sprout
My neighbors' hens upon them set
And try to hatch them out.

I blow my kopecs and my yens
To purchase garden seed;
To fatten up my neighbor's hens
I spent my chicken feed.

So, if my neighbor doesn't keep
His chickens in a coop,
Some day upon them I will creep
And put them in the soup.

Joplin Negro Boxer Is Awarded Decision Over Graham in 10-Round Contest.

PARIS, April 26.—The great assemblage of American military, naval and civilian officials probably ever seen at a boxing match were present at the Cirque de Paris tonight, when the final bouts of the American Expeditionary Force boxing championships were staged.

Among those present were Gen. Pershing, Major-General Harbord, Admiral Benson, Herbert C. Hoover, Henry White, Brigadier-Generals Fiske, Brewster, McKinstry, O'Connor and Duncan.

John Fundy of Pittsburg won the championship of the featherweight class without a fight, as the lure of his Brooklyn home was too much for his opponent, Tommy Gherity. Gherity was training hard for tonight's affair when he heard his company was at Brest about to sail for home. The fighter eluded the military police and the railroad officials and arrived at Brest in time to join his company as it boarded the transport.

The results:

"Babe" Asher of Detroit won the bantamweight championship by knocking out George Schreiber of Philadelphia in the seventh round.

Leo Patterson of Joplin, Mo., was awarded the decision over "Bushy" Graham of Brooklyn in the tenth round for the lightweight title.

William Kleck of New Orleans was returned a winner in the welterweight division over Johnny Summers of Brooklyn by the referee's decision in the thirteenth round.

Johnny Clark of New York scored a win in the middleweight division over William Walters of Philadelphia by a technical knockout in the eighth round.

Eugene Tunney of New York earned the decision in the light heavyweight class over Ted Jamieson of Milwaukee in the tenth round.

Heavyweight honors were awarded to Bob Martin of New York over Fay Kaiser of Pittsburg by the referee's decision in the tenth round.

CARUANA HAS LEAD OF 178 PINS ON STEIN

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 26.—Frank Caruana, local bowling star, had a lead of 178 pins over Otto Stein of St. Louis after the first 30 games of their 60 games, total-pins-to-count match for $1000, completed here tonight. Caruana won in the final 10 games by a margin of three pins.

The remaining 30 games will be bowled in St. Louis.

Accident Beats Loren Murchison in Eastern Race

St. Louis A. A. Runner Trips and Falls on Last Lap of Suburban Quarter.

SELLERS TAKES RACE

Time of 53 1-5 Seconds Is Slow for Classic Event—Five Runners Start.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Jack Sellers of the New York A. C., holder of several A. A. U. titles, won the famous Suburban quarter, the feature event at the annual indoor games of the Knights of St. Anthony held tonight at the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory in Brooklyn. Sellers covered the distance in 53 1-5s., which is rather slow for this classic race.

Loren Murchison, the "Human Greyhound," of the St. Louis A. A., was lying in a heap on the track surrounded by a number of sympathetic friends, when Sellers and Hosner breasted the tape. As the field was turning into the stretch there was much crowding and quite a little shoving. Murchison was second at the time, trying desperately to pass O'Brien, who was leading. Sellers was coming fast and he attempted to pass Murchison on the inside. The two came together, the visitor tripping over the local runner's leg and falling on the track in a heap. O'Brien was also knocked out of his stride by the unfortunate accident.

In five more yards Sellers had passed O'Brien. Hosner gave chase after him, and the two fought it out. Hosner closed a bit in the last 15 yards and it appeared to the crowd as if he was running shoulder to shoulder with his noted rival. But Sellers crossed the line first.

Five Runners Start Race.

Five noted runners answered the starter's gun, Homer Baker of the Glencoe A. C. being the only absentee. Sellers was on the inside with Shaughnessy next. O'Brien was third, Hosner fourth, Murchison fifth and Dernell on the outside.

At the bark of the gun O'Brien shot out and took the lead, closely followed by Murchison. On the first turn there was considerable crowding as the five competitors were close together and they could have been covered with a blanket. After the turn Murchison, straining every muscle in his sturdy legs, jumped to the front. The St. Louis youngster and O'Brien ran so fast that they opened a space of 10 yards between them and Eddie Hosner, who was running in third position. Sellers was in fourth place.

Starting the second lap O'Brien was in front again, with Murchison still going strong. In the meantime Sellers and Hosner closed up the gap and on the final turn were right on the heels of the leaders. Then came the spill which spoiled the race.

When Murchison tumbled to the floor he turned on his ankle and for a while it looked as if he had sprained it. Quite a few of the spectators forgot about the finish of the race and focussed their eyes on the St. Louis sensation.

At the time of the accident Murchison was coming with tremendous speed and no doubt would have won the race if he had not tripped. "I tripped over somebody's leg," was Murchison's explanation when asked about the spill, on his way to the dressing room.

U. S. HAS LIGHT CREW IN INTERNATIONAL REGATTA

PARIS, April 26.—Six crews are entered for the international rowing regatta on the Seine Sunday afternoon for the trophy offered by the Rowing Club of France. The Australian crew has withdrawn, leaving France, Portugal, Newfoundland and New Zealand, and also Alsace-Lorraine and America to try their speed from the Pont Royal to the Alma Bridge, a distance of about 1½ miles.

Next to Portugal, the American Expeditionary Force has the lightest crew on the river, but the Americans have the advantage in height, the average being 6 feet, or 2 inches more than the New Zealand crew.

France, Portugal and Newfoundland will dispute the first heat at 2:15; New Zealand, Alscace-Lorraine and America will leave the starting point at 2:45. The winners of each heat will row the final heat at 4:30.

WRAY'S COLUMN

The Truth About Our Ball Clubs.

THE barrier has lifted in the great baseball races and both St. Louis entries have been left practically standing at the post. One victory in eight games is the total between them, to date.

However, the undying spirit of the fan is ignoring the bad start and looking to the future, evidencing an interest undismayed by 31 years of reverses, with the 32nd in sight. Fans are still keen enough on the job to ask: "What will our St. Louis teams do this year?

As concerns pennants, we might answer, with some truth: "Do without!"

However, that is assuming too much, since the deduction depends on past performance, alias "the dope," followers of which have come to grief on several occasions.

And yet dope is about all the fan has to guide him. Purely on a form basis, and compared to prewar standards, local clubs do not figure strongly. The figures appear to show the following facts:

BROWNS.

Catchers—One fair veteran; two well esteemed second-string men. The staff as a whole ranks not better than fourth.

Pitchers — Shocker, Sothoron, Davenport, proven class A1 men; Wayne Wright, young potcher with wonderful record for Browns last year; Rogers, Gallia, Weilman, Lowdermilk, Bennett, with "great expectations." Rank of staff not not worse than fourth; perhaps better, if New York falls down.

Infielder—One wonderful player, three others who thus far do not measure up. Rank sixth.

Outfield — Problematical. Squad includes two major league discards, three minor leaguers. Rank not better than seventh.

The aggregate of all these departments, allowing for the exceptional importance of pitchers, would be to give the Browns an outside chance at first division.

CARDINALS.

Catchers—Two top notchers, two good second-string men. Rank, first if Gonzales reports.

Pitchers — Goodwin, Meadows, Doak, Ames—A1, if their best years are figured; flock of possibilities. Rank anywhere from third to last, according to developments.

Infielders—One unusual star, two class A1 performers, with one position dubious. Rank second.

Outfielders—Two high-class men, one brilliant prospect, one class A1 substitute. Rank fourth or fifth.

Summarized, the Cardinals are likely to finish third or last, according as the pitching staff turns out.

How the Experts Vote.

IN the endeavor to find out what the experts think about our local teams, a digest of published opinions was undertaken.

Ten expert opinions were put into composite form with the result that two overwhelming favorites have developed. The Red Sox received seven votes for first place, out of 10 cast; while every National League forecast maker placed the Cubs at the top of the list. The ballot shows that both St. Louis clubs are doomed to finish next to last—if you believe the experts.

Following is the standing, as told by the composite vote, showing the number of ballots cast for each club, for each possible position at the finish, from first to eighth:

AMERICAN.

CLUB.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Boston	7	2	1	..	..	..	..	..
Cleveland	2	5	2	1	..	..	..	..
New York	1	3	4	1	1	..	..	..
Chicago	..	..	2	6	1	1	..	..
Detroit	..	..	1	1	4	2	2	..
Washington	..	..	..	..	1	5	3	1
St. Louis	..	..	..	1	1	2	4	2
Philadelphia	..	..	..	..	2	..	1	7

NATIONAL.

CLUB.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
Chicago	10	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
New York	..	8	2	..	..	..	..	..
Cincinnati	..	1	4	3	..	1	..	1
Pittsburg	..	1	3	1	2	3	..	..
Brooklyn	..	..	..	3	5	2	..	..
Boston	..	..	1	..	3	3	1	2
St. Louis	..	..	..	1	..	..	5	4
Philadelphia	..	..	..	2	..	1	4	3

The peculiar condition existing in the National League balloting indicates that the race from second to last place is in material doubt. One club, Cincinnati, is so uncertain as to be picked to finish as high as second and as low as eighth.

SERVICE MEN IN U. S. WILL NOT COMPETE IN INTER-ALLIED OLYMPICS

NEW YORK, April 26.—The War Department has decided that it will not permit soldier-athletes from this country to compete in the interallied games to be held in Paris in June. This ruling applies to soldiers who have been overseas and returned to this country as well as those who did not see service abroad, whether discharged from service or not.

This decision was reached at a conference between Secretary of War Baker and Gen. Peyton C. March some time ago. Gen. March stated that while the War Department was entirely in accord with these games and the value of athletics to the soldiers, it was felt that the chief object at this time was to hasten the return of the soldiers from overseas.

LONG ISLAND CLUB TO GET "PRO" GOLF EVENT

NEW YORK, April 26.—Several clubs have made bids for the Professional Golfers' Association championship tournament next August. The two most prominent in the field now are the Hollywood Golf Club in New Jersey and the Engineers' Country Club at Roslyn, L. I. The latter looks to have the best chance to land this event for more reasons than one. In the first place, this course was constructed by Hebert Strong, secretary of the P. G. A., and as a compliment to him, if for no other reason, it should be selected.

But setting aside this important fact, the Engineers' course is deserving of such a tournament, as the links are one of the best in the district for such an event. Only the best player could hope to score well over a course as difficult as this is. The pros, above all others, should demand a hard test in match play where there is little opportunity for the weaker player unless he plays the game as it should be played.

GELDINGS CANNOT START IN PREAKNESS EVENT

BALTIMORE, Md., April 26.—This season's Preakness at Pimlico, May 14, will be the first in which geldings will not be admitted. The proscription of geldings was decreed by the Maryland Jockey Club directorate to discourage the practice of unsexing thoroughbred stallions, thereby disqualifying them for service to the Government as potential sires of military horses after they shall have finished with racing. The weight scale of the Preakness this year will discourage the starting of horses of poor quality. Winners of $5000 and up will be required to shoulder the full scale burden, 126 pounds.

Hoosiers Buy Bob Steele.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 26.—Bob Steele, pitcher for the New York National League baseball club, was purchased by the local American Association club today, according to announcement made by Manager Jack Hendricks. Outfielder Paul Smith of the Boston Nationals was purchased yesterday by the local club. Smith is in the American Expeditionary Forces and it is not known when he will be returned from Europe. Steele is expected to report at once to the locals.

SCHUPP IS SUED FOR DIVORCE AND ALIMONY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 26.—Suit for divorce, alimony of $250 a month and custody of their small child was filed against Ferd Schupp, New York Giants' southpaw, here today by Minnie Schupp, whom he married in New York in June, 1914.

"One Eleanor Brown," is named as corespondent. Mrs. Schupp says she was abandoned in May, 1917. She was paid $10 a week from November, 1917, to December, 1918, $5 a week thereafter until two months ago since when she has received nothing. She says Schupp is paid $7500 a year by the Giants.

BARNES PLACE IN BIG FOUR BY GOLF EXPERT

P. C. Pulver, a recognized authority on the game, picks Jack Hutchison, Jim Barnes, Walter Hagen and Mike Brady as the four best American professionals to oppose the British invaders, Harry Vardon, J. H. Taylor, James Braid and Ted Ray or George Duncan. But there will be no British invasion this year. Nor will there be any national championship in Great Britain until 1920, but instead there will be two "Victory" tournaments for professionals, the first of which will be played at Walton Heath next month.

Lincoln, Injured, Scores 26 Points

Webster Track Team Gains Easy Victory in Dual Meet With Western Military.

Webster High School defeated Western Military Academy in a dual track meet yesterday afternoon at Alton, totalling 64 points to 49 made by Western. Allen Lincoln, captain of the Webster team, counted 26 points, winning four firsts and two seconds. His time in the century was 10 flat, although but 80 yards of the track was a straightaway.

Lincoln's foot was pierced by a spike in the dressing room before the meet, and the wound bled so freely for several minutes that his running became an uncertainty, but after he was treated by a physican he was able to compete without noticeable handicap.

His record for the day included firsts in the 100, the 220, the discus throw and the broad jump, and seconds in the low hurdles and shotput.

Williams of Webster was runner-up to Lincoln with three firsts. He cleared the highest notch in the high jump, and crossed the line first in the high and low hurdles. Stanner of Western won the pole vault and placed in the broad jump and high jump.

The meet was Webster's second victory of the season.

Summary of events:

100-YARD DASH—Lincoln, Web. first; Reese, Wes. second; Teebels, Wes. third. Time 10 sec.

880-YARD RUN—Mathiason Wes. first; Eckert, Web. second; Thompson, Wes. third. Time 2m. 17 sec.

SHOT-PUT—Kirkpatrick, Wes. first; Lincoln, Web. second; Coons, Wes. third. Distance 38 feet 5¼ in.

220-YARD DASH—Lincoln, Web. first; Reese, Wes. second; Teebels, Wes. third. Time 23 2-5.

POLE VAULT—Stanner Wes. and Hill, Wes. tied for first; Senne, Web. and Gaines, Web tied for third.

HIGH HURDLES—Williams, Web. first; Bachelor, Web. second; Reese, Wes. third. Time 16 4-5 sec.

440-YARD DASH—Ladine, Web. first; Thompson, Wes. second; Eckert, Web. third. Time 56 1-5.

Municipal Leagues Open Season With Eight Good Games

Inaugural Contests Are Played in Commercial and Manufacturers' Circuits.

The Municipal Baseball Association season for 1919 was opened yesterday afternoon with eight games being played in the Commercial and Manufacturers' Leagues. Good crowds witnessed all the inaugurals. At the Commercial opening John Schmoll pitched the opening "apple," and it was hit far out by Rodowe Abeken.

All the games in this circuit with the exception of one were hard fought. The feature pitching was done by Ellerman, who fanned 15 of the Navy club batters. Frewer and Watkins also showed well.

ZBYSZKO WINNER OVER MICHAILOFF IN STRAIGHT FALLS; 500 ARE PRESENT

Wladek Zbyszko, the world's heavyweight wrestling champion, appeared in an exhibition match at Polish-American Hall last night against Ivan Michailoff, and threw his opponent twice in 32 minutes. The first fall was gained in 22 minutes with a head lock, which Zbyszko obtained after breaking the same hold.

Zbyszko purposely wrestled on the defensive before the first fall, but in the second he went straight for his man and brought him down in 12 minutes with a cross body and body scissors. Zbyszko's match last night was the last one of a barnstorming tour to condition him for his championship match with "Strangler" Lewis tomorrow night in Chicago.

The champion collected a purse of $85, to which Mikailoff added $5, and Zbyszko $10, for relief of the poor in Poland. The passing of the hat for this cause always precedes his matches, and he himself has donated over $6000 to it. About 500 persons attended.

Grammar School Teams to Start Season Tomorrow

Five Games Are Scheduled to Be Contested—43 Nines in Title Struggle.

The annual championship campaign of the St. Louis Public School Athletic League baseball circuit will be started tomorrow, when five games will be played—three in Group C, one in Group F and one in Group G. All the divisions will start this week, and the contests will be staged in the public parks. The playground and colored school series also will open this week.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS SEE GAME

25 Are Accompanied By 20 Red Cross Nurses at Sportsmen's Park.

Twenty-five convalescent soldiers and 20 Red Cross nurses at the United States Army Hospital, 5800 Arsenal street, saw the baseball game between the St. Louis and Chicago teams at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon. The soldiers, who were wounded overseas, and the nurses were conveyed in ambulances to the ball park.

The men were all able to walk, and most of them were suffering from facial wounds. The Browns' management admitted the soldiers and nurses free, the Red Cross paying the war tax. Field Director G. M. Scott of the Red Cross, stationed at Jefferson Barracks, was in charge of the party.

$705,623,100 OF LOAN TAKEN IN FIRST WEEK

St. Louis District Leads With Percentage of 30; Chicago and Boston Follow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—At the end of the first week of the three weeks' subscription campaign, $705,623,100 worth of Victory Liberty Loan Bonds had been subscribed officially.

Subscriptions by districts and percentages of their quotas are as follows:

	Subscription.	Percentage.
St. Louis	$58,516,000	30
Chicago	155,338,000	23.8
Boston	80,312,000	21.41
Richmond	32,391,000	15.42
Minneapolis	24,089,000	15.35
Cleveland	62,985,000	13.99
Philadelphia	50,547,000	13.47
New York	180,000,000	13.33
Kansas City	25,485,000	13.06
Dallas	7,540,000	7.97
San Francisco	24,040,000	7.97
Atlanta	4,375,000	3.03

Comparison With Last Fall.

Little of today's business found its way into the figures as given out tonight by the Treasury. At the close of the first week of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, subscriptions of $855,133,000 had been rolled up—$150,000,000 more than has been subscribed this week. Since the fourth loan was larger than the current issue, the percentage at the end of its first week was 14.25, whereas 15.68 per cent of the Victory issue has been subscribed.

It developed today that several Government agencies, including the Department of Justice, the Federal Trade Commission and the Treasury have taken steps looking to investigation of reports that Liberty Bond "scalpers" are doing a thriving business in many localities by buying up bonds of past issues at very low prices. These bond brokers urge persons to sell bonds already bought and to subscribe for the new issue of Liberty notes. In some cases amateur brokers have paid as little as $70 and $80 for $100 Liberty Bonds.

The investigation has been undertaken to ascertain whether buyers of these bonds have misrepresented the market value in an effort to lower the buying price. Newspapers were urged again to publish in prominent position the market quotations for bonds of past issues, as telegraphed to them daily, to prevent small bond owners from being mulcted of their savings.

Other reports to the Treasury are to the effect that bond buyers in large cities advertise that they have been "licensed" by the Government to buy Liberty Bonds. Officials today explained that no brokers have been licensed by the Government to buy bonds, and that no formal restrictions are imposed by the Treasury. In several cities men have established what they call "Lberty Bond exchanges," offering to take Liberty Bonds in trade for cheap jewelry or other merchandise and to pay a cash balance. Prevention of fraud or of sharp practices in these cases rests largely with local Liberty Loan committees, it was said, since grounds cannot often be found for prosecution under Federal laws.

$1000 AND FIANCEE MISSING DAY BEFORE HE WAS TO MARRY

Seattle Man, 54, Tells Police Money Was Received As Accident Insurance Payment.

George Christensen, 54 years old, has asked the police to look for "Miss Margaret Allison," 21 years old, and for $1000 which disappeared simultaneously with "Miss Allison," whom Christensen believed he was to marry yesterday. "Miss Allison" and the money, which Christensen kept in a money belt, disappeared Friday.

In view of their approaching marriage, Christensen said, after obtaining the license, he suggested to his fiancee that she move her effects from 1217 Pine street, where she stayed, to 1219 Pine street, where he stayed. While she was moving, he took a nap. When he woke up, money and fiancee were gone.

Christensen had $1500 in the belt, which he had reecived as accident insurance. He came here from Seattle Jan. 9. At the other Pine street address it was said that the young woman was known as "Midge" Blake.

K. OF C. HEAD HERE TO TELL OF CATHOLIC WAR WORK

James A. Flaherty Also to Sound Keynote of St. Louis Campaign for Members.

James A. Flaherty, Supreme Knight of the Knights of Columbus is in St. Louis today in connection with the war and reconstruction work of the Knights of Columbus. He will lay before the local K. of C. a record of what the Knights have achieved in war work at home and abroad and their plans to aid in the reconstruction period.

At the outbreak of the war Flaherty offered President Wilson the entire resources of the K. of C. The President accepted and the Knights have been operating buildings in all the military and naval camps and service stations in the large cities. Abroad they have 1000 secretaries serving the American Expeditionary Force.

Flaherty will sound the keynote of the local K. of C. membership campaign. The National Order plans to double its membership of 500,000 in the next 12 months.

ELY & WALKER CO. BUYS LOT FOR BIG FACTORY ADDITION

Deal for Locust Street Site One of Three Closed Yesterday Involving More Than $1,000,000.

By Berry Moore.

Three major transactions in realty were concluded yesterday, supplementing several others recorded during the week. Negotiations in these instances were conducted by Edward L. Bakewell, the Mercantile Trust Co., Cornet & Zeibig, Franciscus & Kunz and the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. and involved considerations aggregating more than $1,000,000.

The week closed with announcement of the purchase of the Netherby Hall apartments at 4540 Lindell boulevard by the Woodward & Tirnan Printing Co. for $200,000. The transaction was promoted by Edward L. Bakewell on behalf of Chase Ulman, who erected the building, the purchasers being represented in the transaction by D. F. Addiston. The apartments have four stories and a finished basement and comprise eight suites, four of which have 10 rooms and three baths and four 11 rooms and three baths. All are leased at rentals of $250 to $300 a month each. The apartments are in the vicinity of the New Cathedral and are among the most exclusive in the city. They have been under the management of Bakewell.

As was announced exclusively in yesterday's Post-Dispatch, the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. has purchased 100x150 feet on the north side of Locust street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, as a site for an eight-story addition to its Locust street building, to be erected at an early date. The transaction was effected by the Mercantile Trust Co.

Investmen Stands at $4,000,000.

This, with its present Locust street factory and its headquarters on the south side of Washington avenue, extending from Fifteenth to Sixteenth streets, will increase the value of the company's holdings in this district to approximately $4,000,000. With the projected addition the company will occupy all the two blocks bounded by Washington avenue, Locust, Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, except the ground occupied by the home building of the Missouri State Life Insurance Co. at Fifteenth and Locust streets. There will be a total floor area of 800,000 square feet.

The land was bought from the Lucas estate, and the old Lucas mansion now stands on it. D. R. Calhoun, president of the company, said the deal indicated a prosperous condition in the wholesale dry goods trade in St. Louis.

The Ely & Walker company also operates a trunk factory at 1402-12 North Sixteenth street; a short factory at Eighth and Hickory streets, and a plant at Belleville, none of which is included in the investment of $4,000,000.

Twelfth and Locust Corner Sold.

The movement in downtown St. Louis was launched early in the week with the purchase by the Essex Investment Co. of the fee to the northeast corner of Twelfth and Locust streets, held by Fred G. Zeibig, trustee, for $205,000. The sale was made subject to a 99-year lease held by the Essex company, of which W. K. Bixby is president. The aggregate value of the lease, which provides for an annual net rental of 4 per cent on $250,000, and the fee is estimated by W. J. Holbrook at $455,000. The sale was made by Cornett & Zeibig and the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co. A large building is projected for this site now occupied by a one-story building.

W. J. Mendenhall purchased from the George T. Berdeau Real Estate Co. the fire-proof building at 2315 Locust street, having a lot 50x155 feet, for $60,000. This sale was effected by Franciscus & Kunx, who were about to sell the holding to another party when Mendenhall got wind of it and bought it. The building is occupied by the Ford Agency with which he is connected.

GLICK & JONES R. E. CO.

The Glick & Jones Real Estate Co. reports these sales:

5205 Kensington avenue, six-room residence to Mr. Richter.

316 Euclid avenue, Webster Groves, bungalow, for Mr. O'Laughlin, to a client.

Also reports having made several loans on first and second deeds of trust.

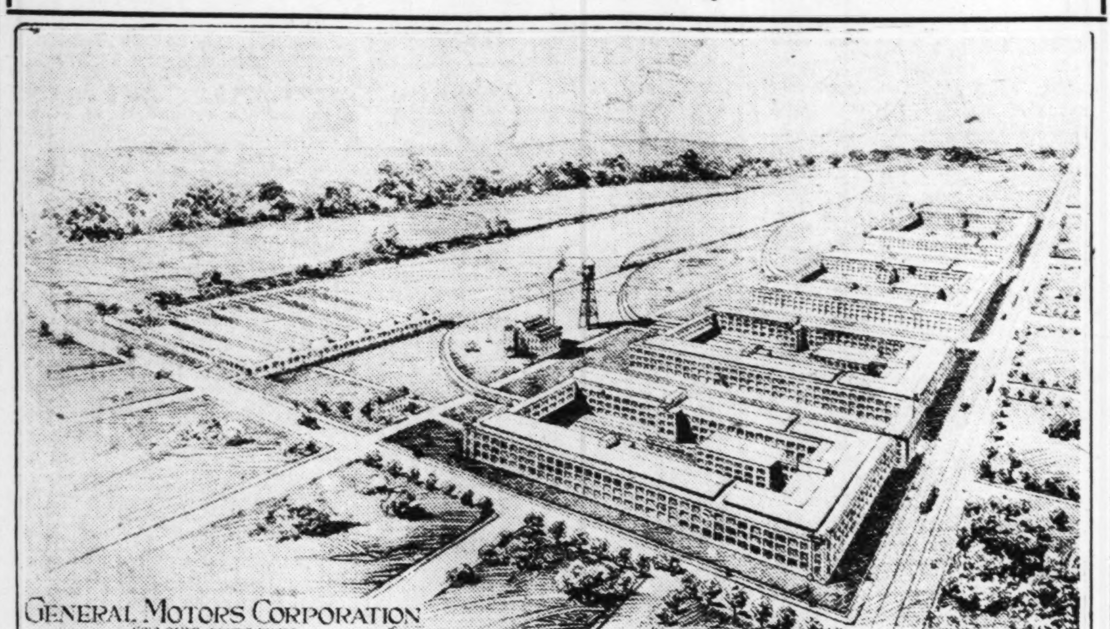
BARNGROVE & SPECHT.

Barngrove & Specht, in conjunction with the Albert G. Blanke Realty Co., reports the sale of the single flat at 5938-40 Cates avenue, for the Trinity Realty Co., represented by Blanke, to Daniel Brodski. The lot is 33.4x150 feet.

J. I. EPSTEIN.

J. I. Epstein reports having sold 7229 Forsyth boulevard, a nine-room residence, for Dr. Willard B. Shelp Sr. to Mrs. Foley E. Maxwell.

Perspective of New Plant to Be Built by General Motors Co.



Work has begun preparatory to the erection, at the northwest corner of Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, of an extensive plant for the General Motors Co., manufacturers of the Buick, Oldsmobile, Cadillac and Chevrolet automobiles. It is estimated that the plant will cost $4,135,000, exclusive of the site, and will employ between 11,000 and 12,000 workmen, the majority of whom will be recruited from other cities.

Bodies for the machines mentioned will be made at this plant, where eventually, it is understood, engines will also be built for them. The factory will comprise several units.

The fact that the General Motors Co. planned to erect a plant of the first magnitude here was made known last May when the stock of the local Chevrolet company, of which Russell E. Gardner was president, was sold for $1,000,000 to the Chevrolet Motor Car Co. of New York, a subsidiary of the General Motors Co. Negotiations were concluded June 2, through the Mercantile Trust Co. for 105 acres at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge road, for which $500,000 was paid. R. King Kauffman, vice president and real estate officer of the Mercantile Trust Co., and John F. Schoflin, manager of the switch property department, made several trips to Detroit in this connection, and it was due primarily to the aggressive action of the Mercantile Trust Co. that the plant was landed for St. Louis.

BERGFELD COMPANY TO INCREASE ITS CAPITAL

The George F. Bergfeld Realty Co. has applied to the Mossouri Secretary for permission to increase its capital stock from $25,000 to $100,000, full paid, with $100,00 surplus, making a total of $200,000 capital and surplus.

George F. Bergfeld, formerly president of the company, has become chairman of the board of directors. Lucas L. Bergfeld, formerly vice president, has been made president; John E. Milne, formerly secretary and treasurer, vice president and treasurer; Elliot W. Bergfeld, secretary, and Edith McCarthy, assistant secretary.

The company was organized Oct. 8, 1898, with a capitaly of $10,000. It does a general real estate, lending and building business. George F. Bergfeld is a director of the Liberty Bank.

GEORGE J. WANSTRATH.

George J. Wanstrath reports having sold the seven-room bungalow at 8524 Concord avenue, lot 36.4x150 feet, for Alfred Baker and wife to Frank J. Petermann and wife.

Also four-room cottage at 4420 Bessie avenue, lot 50x125 feet, for Mary Kappes to John R. Breslin and wife.

SALE OF FOUR HILLCREST LOTS DURING PAST WEEK REPORTED

J. H. Farish & Co. effected the sale of four lots in Hillcrest, a subdivision on the west line of Skinker road and of Forest Park. The names of the purchasers were not disclosed. All of them have building plans.

Farish is handling this property in connection with Giraldin Bros.

The addition is one of the most attractive in the West End.

HEMMELMANN-SPACKLER.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

4117-27 McRee avenue, three double flats, with lot 45x125, for Higley Investment Co. to William H. Reller, who was represented by the Peaser Realty Co., for $24,000.

3624 Virginia avenue, single flat, with lot 25x124 feet, for George Weber to James Kent and wife, for $4000.

3861 Shaw avenue, 5 and 6 room bungalow flat, with lot 30x125 feet, for William T. Mathews to Dr. Chas. T. Bedell for $8000.

4725 Milentz avenue, a 5-room cottage with lot 25x125 feet, to John C. Rotzenberg for $2500.

Louisville avenue, in Oakland Terrace Subdivision, 32.6x127 feet, to Harry G. Gillstorff and wife for $985.

Lansdowne avenue, west of Macklind avenue, lot 90x125 feet, to A. P. Richardson for $1800.

Irvin Smith Opens Realty Office.

Irvin Smith has opened a real estate office at 15 North Seventh street. He will conduct a general realty and financial business.

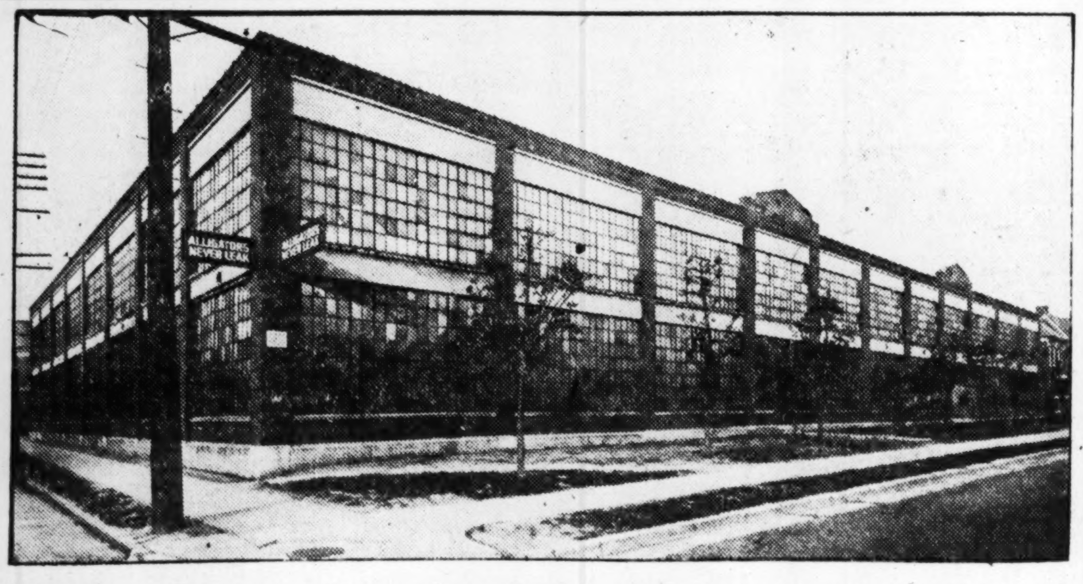
SEVEN HI-POINTE LOTS SOLD DURING WEEK

Activity at Hi-Pointe continues at high tide, according to reports from Charles de Largy, real estate officer of the Broadway Savings Trust Co., agent for the addition. Seven lots were sold during the week.

One of the most attractive lots in the tract was purchased yesterday by Howard Sidener, Prosecuting Attorney, as a sit for a fine home, plans for which are being made. The site is within the city limits. Other purchasers of lots in the addition are Fred Halle and wife, Daniel O. Rice, W. J. Arink and wife, Joseph Schultz and wife, two lots; Frank A. Cafferata and Edward Gottschalk.

W. F. Shannon reports the sale of two more lots of the Skinker road frontage of Hi-Pointe, making three out of 10 lots in that part of the plot sold. The Skinker road lots, the prices of which range from $70 to $90 a front foot, are owned by the Frisco Building Co., of which Isaac T. Cook is president.

Large Factory Plant Acquired by Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co



THE large factory on the southwest corner of Page boulevard and Newstead avenue, formerly operated by the Paul E. Wolfe Shirt Co., has been purchased by the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., and will be devoted to the manufacture of shirts, overalls and underwear. These lines of merchandise, as well as several others manufactured by the company, are sold in every state of the United States, throughout Latin-America and in many other foreign countries.

The Rice-Stix company is widely recognized as one of the largest and most progressive manufacturers of dry goods and furnishing goods in America, and this additional plant will afford greatly increased facilities. Operation of it will begin at once. This with their other factories will give employment to several thousand girls.

The sale was affected by the Mercantile Trust Co. The price paid was $180,000.

DICKMANN R. E. CO.

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. reports sales as follows:

Northeast corner of King's highway and Easton avenue, 86x167 feet, for Henry J. Gebbels to Edwin F. Zumwinkel. The consideration is understood to have been about $20,000.

Also 200-foot lot on north side of Eichelberger street, west of Grand avenue, for K. Wasaff of Bristow, Ok., to Gabriel Sakkeeny and wife.

Also 3630-32 Arsenal street, for Rose M. Loeffler and husband to Jos. Schlecht and Lewis Davis, for $11,500.

Also 3729 Connecticut street for Alloys B. Ruthmann to Mamie Wuerz.

Also nine-room house at 3421 South Grand avenue, 75 feet front, to the Laclede Council, K. of C., for $9000. Property was sold for Mrs. Augusta Frankmann.

CORNET & ZEIBIG.

'FARM A DAY' SOLD IN RIVERVIEW GARDENS

Last Section of Tract Overlooking River Being Prepared for Spring Selling Campaign.

A "farm a day" is the sales report of Sikking & Beckwith, originators of the "Little City Farm" in Riverview Gardens subdivision. They report that since April 13, the date on which they placed their first feel-out ad in the Post-Dispatch, not a day has passed without a sale being made.

Prospects have become so good that the company is preparing the last section of the Riverview Gardens for the market, divided into little farms. Each is 100 feet front and ranges from 170 to 300 feet deep. Streets are being graded, cinder roadways built and city water is being piped to each plot. There will be in this last section 85 farms, and the company will at once begin a campaign to sell all of them this spring.

Riverview Gardens originally comprised 255 acres. The first section, or about one-fourth of the tract, was placed on the market in 1917, and two other sections of about the same size were laid out in 1918. These sections, comprising more than 160 acres, are practically sold out. The sales total exceeding $200,000, a record made since this country went to war. It demonstrates the soundness of the "little farm" idea, where land can be obtained close enough and cheap enough to retail in large tracts at small figures, the company maintains. The little farms sell for $250 to $500, or from $2.50 to $5 per foot, with practically all city conveniences, on terms of $25 cash and $10 per month, without interest or taxes for a year. The tract is above Baden, on high ground, and possesses an excellent view of the river. It is served by the municipal car line connecting with the Broadway car at Baden. The total fare is 9 cents, and a trip can be made from the property to Washington avenue in 45 minutes.

The agents say that prospects are good for disposing of the remaining plot by summer, and report that building operations are becoming active in that section.

CLYDE C. KETCHAM.

Clyde C. Kitcham reports having sold two garages at 3948-54 Olive street, each building on a lot 50x150, and recently leased to the Standard Auto Service Co., for the Chas. H. Denison Realty Co., one to Nellie Wohl and the other to Raymond E. Gallagher.

LOTS IN KENWOOD SPRINGS ARE OFFERED AT A DISCOUNT

Owner Seeking to Close Out Interest Which Also Includes Several Bungolow Homes.

Sales of lots at Kenwood Springs, just north of Suburban Garden, on the Kirkwood-Ferguson car line, are a efature of the revival in the subdivision field. These sites are being offered at a discount, with a view to the early closing out of the addition.

The sale is being conducted by the Bottorff Realty Co. for Herman C. G. Luyties, who took the property in the crude under a deed of trust a number of years ago. He has expended a large sum in street and municipal improvements, which are of the best character, and the sale, accordingly, is regarded as an opportunity for both homeseekers and investors.

Luyties is also offering several bungalows, the remaining unsold ones of a large number of homes of that type erected by him in this addition.

The location is only a short distance west of the site selected for the General Motors Co. plant at Natural Bridge road and Union boulevard.

DOCTOR LEASES AN APARTMENT

Adjoining Washington University and Parkview between Pennsylvania and Kingsbury boulevard

Proud of your home?

Stand with your visiting friend and overlook the beautiful stretch of country—the splendidly well built residential property all around you — all of them high-class homes—overlook the Washington University Campus—just opposite—notice the wide space for Summer breezes and he will say: "This certainly is fine." "You must enjoy it." "I'd like to live here."

You surely would be proud if you lived in

Ames Place

You can live there, too; in an all-year-round home built especially to your liking and on terms almost equivalent to your present rent.

Ask us to explain how you can use this company's resources in financing the building of your home.

Location, surroundings, accessibility, improvements, restrictions, schools, price — these features are all indispensable to an ideal home. You get them all when you build in Ames Place.

See Ames Place today. Drive out Delmar avenue to Pennsylvania and then turn south to Ames Place or take the Delmar car to Rosedale and walk south to Ames Place—or, if that is more convenient, take the University car to Pennsylvania and get off right in Ames Place.

You will find a competent man in the office at Pershing avenue who will give you full information in regard to lots for sale, restrictions, price per foot and the possibilities of using this Company's resources in financing the building of your home.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

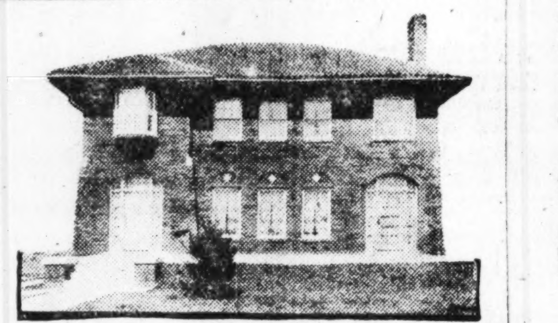
If You Have $1000, $2000 or $3000 Cash, We Will Build Your Home Costing $9000 to $20,000 in Maryland Terrace

(YOU CAN PAY THE BALANCE LIKE RENT.)

The carrying charge on a beautiful Maryland Terrace home does not exceed $60 to $80 a month. You pay this much rent. Every cent above this you put into the home is creating an asset for you. You can always get that money back when you sell the house.

If you make $400 a month you can live in Restricted Maryland Terrace—the Million Dollar, 100-Acre Residence Park, Adjoining Washington University Campus.

Buy a lot, build now or build later. These deep lots are doubling in value. Every week these lots are going off the market. It is the only deep lot property on the market today adjoining the Washington University Campus.



A modest Maryland Terrace Home, the carrying charge of which does not exceed $70 a month. What can you rent in St. Louis to compare with this home and beautiful grounds for $70 a month?

It is well restricted. The lots are 190 to 219 feet deep, facing wide drives. No congestion or crowding here. The deep building lines hold the houses back 62 feet from the streets, permitting beautiful perspective. Even a modest home in Maryland Terrace, with its wonderful setting, looks more attractive than a high-priced house set within thirty feet of a narrow street in a congested district.

Live in Maryland Terrace where your home is an asset, where your family can get all the advantages now, while they are growing, of this educational and social center.

Here you see 5000 shade trees growing, beautiful drives, parks, plazas, a wonderful sunken garden with a wide pergola entrance. Even the houses are different—no two alike.

Come to Maryland Terrace Today

See Everett Davis, President, living at the corner of Williams and Westmoreland Drive in Maryland Terrace, for full particulars and terms regarding the homes we have for sale and the terms on which they can be purchased. Let him show you plans for the new houses which will soon be under construction; let him tell you how easily you can build, how you can get just exactly what you want, and the terms under which we can build for you so as not to take too much money out of your business.

Drive to Pennsylvania, west boundary of Campus, then west on either Maryland or Westmoreland Drives. Maryland Terrace extends west from the Campus, with the University car line right to its door. Phone Mr. Davis, Cabany 147W, in evenings for full details.

More Lots Sold This Week in HI-POINTE

Seven Lots sold to seven far-sighted people who have thoroughly inspected this property. Mostly people who have never been on the subdivision before, and who readily see the wonderful opportunity offered in this splendid block for single flats only.

A block absolutely different from anything to be had elsewhere in the city.

A block where no double flats or apartments are permitted. Where you can live in a single flat and be relieved of all the objectionable features where double flats and apartments are permitted.

It Will Be Like a Block of Residences.

Just across DeMun Avenue, on top of the hill where you can see right into Forest Park, and overlooking that attractive sunken garden and beautiful residence section which practically has been sold out.

Convenient to two lines of street cars, schools, colleges, churches and stores of all kinds. Even the stores are close enough to be handy, yet far enough away to keep from being objectionable.

Truly a magnificent place to build a home, and at what a price!

This property is being offered at

$45 Per Front Foot

Which price includes every improvement. Streets, sidewalks, curbs, gutters, even the alleys will be paved and the trees planted without any additional cost to the purchaser.

Flat property of this character is selling in good residence localities from $60 to $75 per front foot. In the Washington Heights District, flat property went up to $70 a foot and was entirely built up at this price. In the O'Fallon Park District, $60 and $75 is the standard price for this class of property, and the same applies to the Tower Grove Heights District, with very few lots obtainable at any price.

You can readily see that this is a rare chance, and there is no other block like it in any other subdivision in St. Louis.

Those who purchased residence lots are all assured a profit, as lots in that section are now selling at $5.00 to $10.00 per front foot profit to the original purchaser.

Purchasers in the flat section are sure of a larger and quicker profit, as flat property always increases in value faster than does residence property, and the prices on the lots we now offer are sure to increase at once and will be selling at $60.00 per front foot within 60 days.

There is just one block of this property, and you see how it is selling.

This is a wonderful opportunity seldom offered, and if you want to participate you will have to buy at once, as you can readily see that only one block cannot last long.

THIS IS A SPLENDID CHANCE FOR A QUICK TURN-OVER AND A SURE PROFIT.

Come out today and select one of the best lots.

Ask the salesman to show you this beautiful block for single flats only.

Office open every evening until dark.

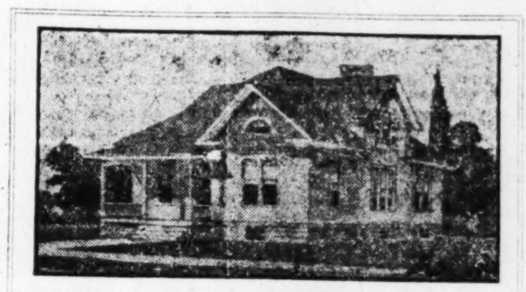
I AM SELLING MY

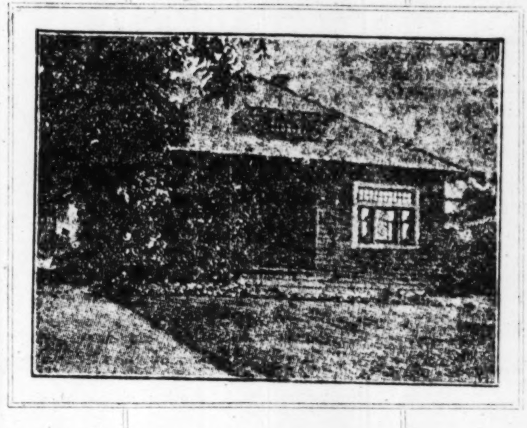
Kenwood Springs Lots at Cost

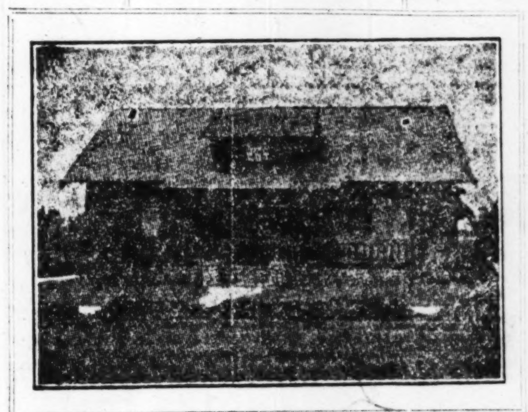
I AM NOT IN THE REAL ESTATE BUSINESS FOR PROFIT.

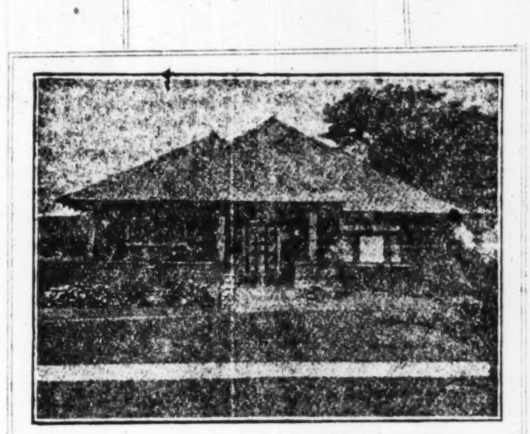
My business is manufacturing tooth and toilet preparations, but I have given 50 men an opportunity to own their own homes in Kenwood Springs. Ten years ago these men, with their families, were paying rent in the city. They bought a lot in Kenwood Springs and built a home—or bought a bungalow—and have paid for it monthly, and now they own their homes for practically what they would have paid out in rent during the same period in the city.

COME OUT TO KENWOOD SPRINGS and SEE FOR YOURSELF the comfortable, beautiful homes these men now own, and for which they have paid but $25 to $50 per month during this period.









I Now Offer You the Same Opportunity

You may buy one or two of the remaining 24 lots which I own on the installment plan, by paying $10 CASH and $10 a MONTH. NO SPECULATORS NEED APPLY—only persons who wish to build their own homes.

Why Continue to Pay Steadily Increasing Rents in St. Louis

When you can buy a lot in beautiful KENWOOD SPRINGS on the above easy terms and build your home to suit yourself?

KENWOOD SPRINGS is a most delightful place to live—out in the country, but not so far out that you have to take a train in to the city. Located only a few blocks outside the city limits—3 minutes' ride from Wellston and only 45 minutes from Broadway.

TAKE A RIDE OUT ON THE HODIAMONT LINE AND TRANSFER TO THE KIRKWOOD-FERGUSON CAR which goes right through KENWOOD SPRINGS, and see what a beautiful spot this is. If the city expands and takes in this property, as now seems probable, it is estimated that this property will increase in value from 50 to 100 per cent.

Bring $10.00 Cash With You and Select Your Lot at once, before this property is all gone. Only 24 lots left.

Two Attractive Vinita Houses For Sale

A splendid bungalow for $6250. It is very livable, occupies a high, deep lot. Get off at Buchanan street.

A Vinita Bungalow for $4500. Artistic, well adapted for this climate. See it today. Get off at Jackson street.

Build Your Bungalow in VINITA

The "Little California" of St. Louis

Vinita is, without doubt, the most beautiful, the best improved property in the close-in suburbs of St. Louis.

Situated only an eight-minute's ride from Parkview and the apartment house district. Has both the Creve Coeur and Page car lines. Has the best drives, Page Avenue Road, Hanley and Spring Avenue (North and South) Roads.

Wonderful trees, beautiful homes, splendid citizenship, good churches, schools—everything needed to make home life pleasant, desirable.

Come to Vinita Today

Select your deep lot. You can save $10 to $20 a front foot by buying now, ahead of the greatest boom in history. Put part of your savings in Vinita and see your profits grow.

Build now, or build later. Hold the property for the big profits which will be made as this district is covered with homes.

Take Creve Coeur car at Delmar Garden, then ride to Page avenue, which is Vinita. Ramble over the 130 acres comprising Vinita—talk to the people living there. You'll see what it means to get your family, those you love, into the suburbs. Phone for particulars, in evenings, Cabany 3448-J.

6-R'm Residence Large Lot. Steam Heat

I want to sell my well arranged six-room brick residence. Gas, electric lights, newly decorated. Lot 60x157½. Nice lawn, hedge fence, fine garden plot and chicken yard.

Take Bellefontaine car to King's highway Northeast, walking south to Bircher place. Apply to owner, 4523 Bircher place, or Broadway Savings Trust Company, Broadway and Lucas avenue.

Ideal for Doctor

My well-constructed, first-class, modern brick residence, containing 8 beautiful, large, light, airy rooms. Entire first floor finished in oak, beautiful electric fixtures, high-class cabinet mantels. Many large closets. Marble and tile bath. Slate roof. Splendid hot-water heating system. High, dry basement. Large garage.

I built this place for my home and spared no expense. It is built right and in perfect condition. Built on a large lot, and on a corner. It will make a splendid home for anyone, but especially suited for a physician.

I am going to build a bungalow. That is the only reason for disposing of this residence.

This is not an old worn-out house, but a splendid residence in first-class condition, and in a very good neighborhood; convenient to car lines. Will sell at a far below cost, and make very reasonable terms.

Apply to owner on premises, 2123 Ann av.

An English Type Maryland Terrace Home For Sale

This English house has many very distinctive features.

It is pleasantly situated as regards to exposure, occupies a beautiful lot, and has a built-in garage.

The owner needs two more bedrooms, and has selected other grounds in Maryland terrace on which he will build as soon as this home is sold.

This house was designed by Mr. Henry Wright, the landscape architect, who conceived and developed Brentmoor and Forest Ridge.

Every detail is perfect, from the beautiful entrance to the livable sleeping porch, from the dining room with its large bay window looking out over the sunken garden to that wonderful living room with its recessed nook in which is centered a cheerful fireplace. It has four bedrooms.

It is artistically decorated, well curtained, showing you exactly how it will look when you move your furniture in.

This home is priced at $13,000 net. This house has $1000 worth of extras, such as screens, weather stripping, fixtures, decorating, etc.

See Everett Davis, president of the company, living at the northeast corner of Williams and Westmoreland drive in Maryland Terrace, for full particulars, or phone Cabany 147W.

A Colonial Mission Maryland Terrace Home For Sale

Here is a home of tremendous possibilities.

It appeals especially to lovers of the old Southern type of homes. It has high ceilings, large windows, beautiful halls.

It gets away entirely from some of the present styles of building, such as "squatty" ceilings, "squatty" windows, and narrow halls.

See it today. See the possibilities—how you can build on to this home, if you should care to, a beautiful solarium with possibly a sleeping porch above.

The price is $14,756, including an 80-foot by 219-foot lot. Terms the same as rent; pay $500 or $1000 cash, balance $100 a month. You can always sell house and grounds and get your money back. You can move in right now.

In all our Maryland terrace experience we have never had a bargain to equal this.

This lot will be worth $150 a foot, which for the 80-foot front would mean $12,000 within three years.

It is a bargain for someone who loves a big lot—a deep lot; loves plenty of windows, loves grassy terraces; wants yard room for their children and places for their children's swings, and sand piles; a place where they can plant fruit and shade trees; have inexpensive pergolas, possibly a sun-dial—those things which lend charm to a home—make it livable.

See this home by all means at your earliest opportunity.

See Everett Davis, president of the company, living at the northeast corner of Williams and Westmoreland drive in Maryland Terrace, for full particulars and the very reasonable terms under which this home can be purchased, or phone Cabany 147W.

AT STUD—Boston terrier, beautifully marked; mahogany brindle. Bevo, 1110 Allen av.

AT STUD—Starkey's Soldier Boy. Noted son of the famous Ch. Peter King, without doubt the greatest sire ever produced. He is a rich mahogany brindle with even white markings, short screw tail, possessing what is rare to produce, a short-head with a broad, deep, square muzzle (having won several specials for best head in show), with the best of body, legs and feet ever seen on a Boston with no exception. He has an enviable show record, having won over 60 ribbons and specials in the hottest competition, getting winners and best all breeds at New Orleans, reserve winners at Boston, Mass.; winners at New Bedford, Mass., reserve winners at L. K. A. specialty show and winners at Cambridge, Mass., defeating the most famous dogs on the show bench, including many champions, and giving him several points for his own championship. But his chief distinction is as a sire, getting small, even marked puppies of show quality that are true specimens of the Peter King strain. E. N. Wilson, 2934 Michigan.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Merz, died April 27, 1918; gone but not forgotten; sadly missed by children and grandchildren. Rest in peace.

In loving memory of my dear husband, Wm. B. Meier who departed this life one year ago, April 23, 1918. Sadly missed by WIFE, CHIDREN AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

In memory of Walter Wertes, who died three years ago, April 25, 1916, beloved son of Mary Wertes.

Gone, but not forgotten, by his MOTHER, BROTHERS AND SISTERS.

In sad remembrance of our dear mother, Elizabeth Buechel, who passed away six years ago, April 27, 1913. Sadly missed by her CHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved mother, Elizabeth Schiur, who departed this life four years ago, April 26, 1915.

Sadly missed by her loving
DAUGHTERS, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Peter Pregaldin, who departed this life five years ago, April 27, 1914.

Sadly missed by
SONS, DAUGHTERS AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In sweet memory of our dear son and brother, Edwin Herrin, who departed this life three years ago, April 16, 1916. Beside his bed we knelt in prayer and felt a presence as we prayed. Lo! It was Jesus standing there. He smiled: be not afraid.

Sadly missed by PARENTS AND RELATIVES.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Fred Lebermann, who departed this life April 29, 1914:

You are not forgotten, Fred, dear,
Nor ever will you be
As long as our lives and memories last
We will always remember you.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother and grandmother, Mary Biethroade, who died April 22, 1918. Sadly missed by her two daughters.

MRS. E. GILMORE AND MRS. J. FORISTAL.

In memory of my beloved husband and our dear father, Gerhardt Boekers, who departed this life on April 25, 1909.

Your love still lingers in our hearts;
Ten full years you've been at rest;
Much too soon from us departed,
But God above knew what was best.
Sadly missed by his wife,
MRS. MARY BOEKERS AND SONS, GERHARD H. AND HENRY G. BOEKERS.

In sad but loving remembrances of Cathryn G. McDonnell, who departed this life one year ago, April 22, 1918. Sadly missed by husband, parents, sister and brother.

Sad and sudden was the call
For our dear Cathryn, loved by all.
We little knew that on that day
Our dear Cathryn would be called away.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Edward M. Besso, who departed this life one year ago, April 26, 1918.

A rose that is sweetest and fairest,
In the end, is killed by the frost;
And the flower that is dearest and rarest
Is the son and brother we have lost.
Sadly missed by
FATHER AND MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of my dear wife, mother and grandmother, Hanna K. Twellman, who departed this life on April 26, 1918:

Days of sadness still come over us,
Tears in silence often flow,
But the Lord said "You have finished;
Come up higher, mother, dear,
You have won a crown in heaven
For the pain you suffered here."
Just one year ago you left us,
Though we miss you, mother, dear,
And we remember all your kindness
As we drop a silent tear.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, who departed this life two months ago; would have been 23 years old April 30, 1919. May the name of Arthur Lee Humphrey and memories of his beautiful life be engraved upon the hearts of those who loved him.

Forget you? No, we never will;
It was a bitter pain and shock severe,
To part with you, we loved so dear,
It left us brokenhearted.
Day by day we sadly miss you,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sadness
Within our hearts concealed.
Sadly missed by his parents and brothers and all those who loved him. (c)

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

IDA.—Ordinarily, to revoke divorce a motion would be filed and an appeal taken. For various reasons a court might revoke a decree.

ANXIOUS.—To prevent egg-eating by chickens, see that they get plenty of lime in another form—oyster shells, for instance. Never feed them egg shells. Drop letters and cards require 2 cts. postage.

H. E.—Pineapple Pie: Take either fresh pineapple or canned and chip it into small pieces. Place in pan with a bottom crust just as if you were making apple pie. Pour the juice over the pieces of pineapple, add pieces of butter and a tiny bit of corn starch. Cover with an upper crust and bake. Pineapple Pie, No. 2: Beat ½ cup butter and 1 cup fine white sugar to a cream. Add the well-beaten yolks of 5 eggs, 1 small cupful of sweet cream, 1 small pineapple grated, and lastly the stiffly whipped whites of the eggs. Bake in one crust.

F. O. B.—In Illinois a couple must be married in the county in which the marriage license is obtained. A couple may be married immediately upon obtaining the license. No witness is necessary when a couple obtains a marriage license. The only time that it is necessary for the couple seeking a license, to be accompanied by anybody is when either or both are under age, or the Marriage License Clerk believes they are under age. In cases of that kind the person under age must be accompanied by their father, if he is alive, who must sign an affidavit giving his consent to the marriage. In the event of his death, the mother's consent will suffice, and in the event that both parents are dead, the consent of a legally appointed guardian must be given.

DONALD SHAW.—Some years ago a dispute arose between a preacher of New England and Col. Roosevelt as to how salmon get up waterfalls, the preacher claiming that they jumped up as high as possible, caught there by their tails and with another spring landed in the water above. Neither the preacher nor the President was right. Once where Bully Creek, a small stream perhaps 30 ft. across at the point mentioned, flows into the Malheur River, I was hunting salmon with a rifle. It was between daylight and sun-up, and the stream was not clear enough to see the fish as they came up from the river, but the fish being large caused a ripple on the surface of the water above them, which disclosed their presence. I saw a fish coming and watched it pass the point where I stood. It went on upstream and I followed, knowing that about 100 yards above was a riffle which would probably stop the salmon. I walked ahead of the fish and stood with rifle cocked and ready to shoot at the foot of the riffle. Below this place was a long, wide and deep hole, say 50 yards in length and 10 ft. deep. The riffle was where the stream came down a declivity and was wide and shallow, indeed, the water was so shallow that my impression was that the fish could not possibly ascend the stream at this point. The riffle was about 30 yards in length, until at its upper end it was of sufficient depth for a fish to swim in. After waiting awhile I saw the fish spring out of the water and land not far from me like a shot out of a gun, twice it did this, as I thought for the purpose of viewing what might lie ahead in the way of obstruction. Suddenly, as I stood ready to shoot when the fish attempted to go over the shallow riffle, out it came and wriggled over the rocks and shallows with such rapidity that I had no time to shoot before it reached the deep water above. A friend, who lived in Oregon City, on the Williamette River not far from Portland, where the river falls over a cliff of different heights, said he had often watched the salmon trying to ascend these falls. The lowest place in the waterfall is some 14 ft. perpendicularly, but the volume of water is great. This was a favorite place for the Indians to catch salmon in baskets before the coming of the white man. The fish would come to the fall, as my friend told me, and then go back a distance sufficient to give them good headway, and here was the place of all places for the President and the naturalist to have their dispute decided by actual experiment. The fish would take a run at the falls at top speed, and then swim straight up the middle of the fall, many of them being thrown back by the force of the water, but many also succeeding in getting into the water above. They did not jump the falls nor did they catch by their tails on projecting rocks, but by rapid swimming they ascended.—K. C. Star.

LOLA LEE.—The Bellefontaine Cemetery Association was incorporated under the name of the Rural Cemetery Association, by an Act of the General Assembly of the State of Missouri, approved March 7, 1849. The first meeting of the corporators named in the charter was held on the 21st day of the same month. The first purchase of land, embracing a tract of 138 14-100 acres, was completed on July 12 following. A superintendent was appointed on Au. 21; and the work of clearing up and laying out the grounds commenced under his direction on Oc. 5. On May 15, 1850, the grounds were dedicated as the "Bellefontaine Cemetery," and opened for the selection of lots. Additions to the ground have been made from time to time, giving the whole present area of the cemetery 332½ acres. The amendments to the charter, proposed by an act of the Legislature, approved Mar. 1, 1851, were adopted by the association at a meeting of the stockholders, held on Nov. 3, in the same year. By these amendments the name of the corporation was changed to the Bellefontaine Cemetery Association, and authority given the Board of Trustees, after all debts should be paid, to determine by by-laws (subject to the approval of the stockholders) to pay off the stockholders, and make lot owners holding not less than 800 square feet the corporators. By a subsequent amendment to the charter, approved March 19, 1866, and accepted by the stockholders, the corporate powers of the association were vested in a board of 15 trustees, required to be lot owners, who were to be chosen jointly by the former stockholders, and by owners of lots containing not less than 400 sq ft., which Board of Trustees was made a perpetual body, with authority to fill all vacancies from among the lot holders, by a majority vote of their whole number. In this body now, and for all future time, rests the title, control and management of all the property and affairs of the association, to be administered by them for and in behalf of the present and future lot owners in the cemetery. Lots in the cemetery are only laid out when selected, and may be procured of any desired shape, and of any size not less than 300 superficial feet. Every lot will front either on a carriage road, or pathway sufficiently wide for the passage of persons on foot, and be entirely separated from any other lot either on the sides or rear. The Bellefontaine Cemetery Association was organized for a public purpose—to supply a public want—and its original and publicly avowed object will, in all respects, be faithfully carried into execution. By its charter, the grounds are secured for cemetery purposes forever, and placed entirely beyond the power of legislative or other control, save in accordance with the objects intended in their selection and dedication. No lot is liable to taxation for any purpose, nor can a lot be sold under execution, or by order of any court or in any way conveyed, after interments have been made in it, out of the family of the original proprietor, except as provided for by Sec. 5 of amendments to the charter, approved Mar. 19, 1866, as found on Page 15, which allows a sale of a lot 2 yrs. after the dead have been removed.

BELMONT'S dance talks: If the large number of graduates who have developed into expert ballroom dancers is any indication of a school's success, then we have been a big success. After you enroll in the Belmont School you immediately develop into a Belmont booster, because you become thoroughly imbued with the Belmont spirit, which is the possible instructions for the least money. The prices are so cheap it's a shame to advertise them. Just think, 12 1-hour lessons for $3; each pupil guaranteed personal instructions by our head teacher; your age makes no difference. We get results when others fail. Those wishing to enroll in our new class which starts Monday, please report promptly at 8 p. m. We only have room for 10 new pupils. We teach the tickle toe and all the very latest New York dances. Compare our instructions with those of other schools and you will become a Belmont pupil. Belmont School, Odeon Bldg. Established 1912. (c)

DON'T JUNK

YOUR OLD TIRES

Bring them to us and let us prove to you that by having them retreaded by the Dri-Kure process you will be able to get miles and miles out of them at a cost so small in comparison with the cost of new tires that you will wonder why you did not take advantage of our proposition before.

We rebuild a new tread on your old tire out of the best material money can buy, and the tires retreaded by us deliver the extra mileage.

Let us prove to you our statement.

SOME PRO-BOLSHEVIKS—AND WHY

Drawings and Text

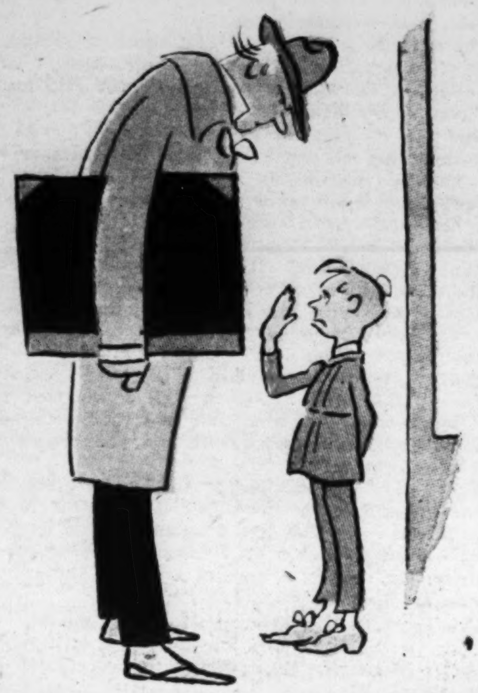
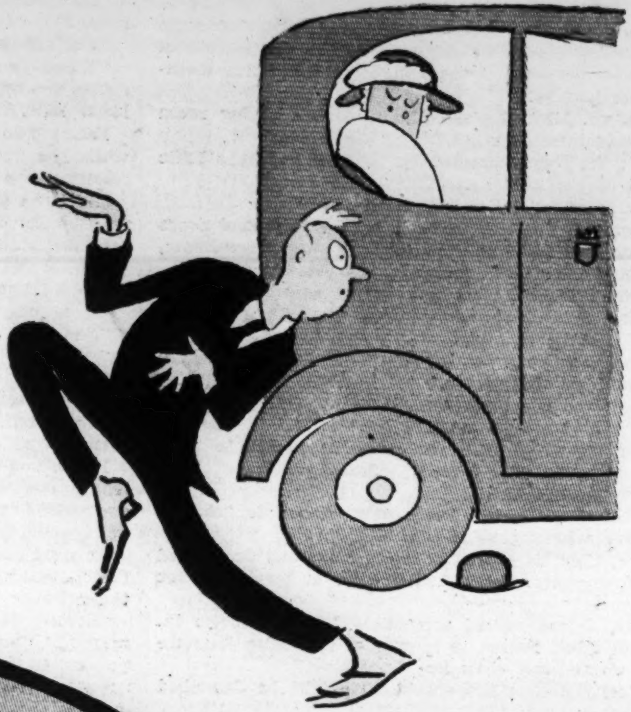
GORDON ROSS

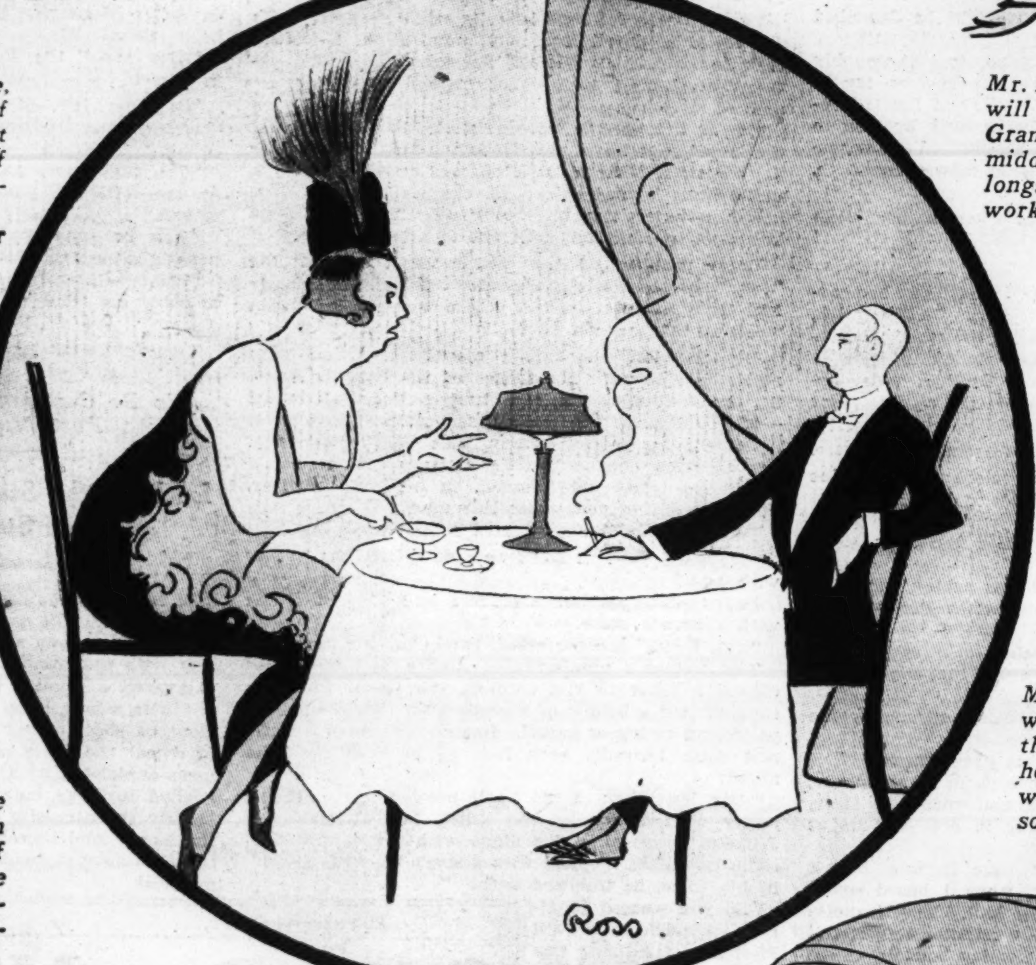


Mr. Daumier Whine, who does cartoons of social distress, cannot see the art editor of "Frills," the smart society paper.

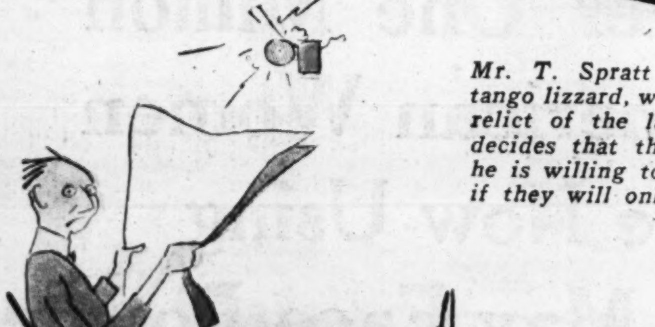
The editor never could see Mr. Whine. Oh—for a pogrom!



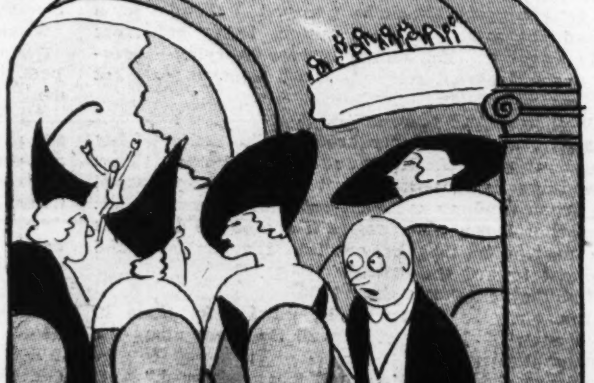
Mr. Rusher Cross, who will insist on crossing Grand avenue in the middle of the block, longs to make short work of the Limousine Bourgeoisie.



Mr. T. Spratt Hopps, the society tango lizzard, who married the robust relict of the late Hardtack King—decides that there are many things he is willing to share with others—if they will only take the big share.



Roderick, the office boy, who has been promised a raise—if he earns it—wishes he had the Boss in Moscow just for ten minutes.



Mr. Horace Whitebait, who has just bought the last seat in the house, (box, $4.00 plus war tax), sighs for a soviet to redress his wrongs.

LOCKING THE STABLE DOORS BEFORE ANY MORE STEEDS ARE STOLEN

What banks, corporations with huge payrolls and firms handling large sums are doing to protect their cash from robbers — Experiences of country bankers — Grocer's burglar trap in St. Louis 30 years ago :: ::

THERE has been a sharp readjustment of the ratio previously obtaining between prevention and cure since the affair of the Baden bank. Robbers who now start out to raid banks, paymasters, cashiers, bank messengers or others charged with the responsibility of handling money, stand an excellent chance of encountering real misfortune.

Up to the time of this astonishing performance, so suggestive of the days of Jesse and Frank James, the business world was not visibly excited. Though the papers told of holdups every day, it remained for some big, impressive happening to force an organized defensive, and the Baden robbery served that purpose. As the thieves secured booty worth nearly $60,000, it was an expensive lesson.

This bold and carefully arranged looting expedition took place in the forenoon of April 10, and not many hours elapsed before every other bank and office where money was stored waked up to the importance of taking effective means to meet such visitors, should they decide to continue their operations in St. Louis. There were conferences in many little offices about the city, and men whose business it is to meet and deal with desperate criminals were called in to give counsel and advice. Among others were regular police detectives, private agencies and the splendidly organized staffs of railroad special agents, now serving directly under Government auspices. Railroads were as deeply interested as other lines of business, since the conduct of the transportation business necessitates the handling and movement of large sums of money which cannot always be expressed in the form of checks. Then there were the large factories, with payrolls that have to be met every week or two, and then again there were the messengers who had to carry this money through the streets, very frequently with little protection.

The conferences led to some quickly formed decisions, and one of these was to encourage the freest use of checks, rather than currency in the payment of salaries and wages. Another was to trust the job of carrying money satchels through the streets only to strong, able-bodied men, with some practical knowledge of firearms and enough nerve to make use of such skill when occasion demanded. No more small boys running back and forth between the offices and the banks carrying bags that they would not be able to defend in the event of sudden attack.

Another precaution was to get satchels lined with steel that would resist a knife suddenly applied, while the carrier would be making his way through a crowd on the street or in a street car. There was a brisk demand for these reinforced satchels and a number of the old-time bags, which could be easily slitted, were put out of commission.

Another protective device was a system of concealed push buttons in all the bank cages and cashiers' offices so that help could be summoned in the event of an attempt to stage such a Wild West program as was successfully worked at the Baden institution. Then the supply of automatic revolvers was substantially increased in all these money marts and depositories. There was no notion anywhere after the Baden experience to leave anything to chance. One large establishment, in a rather out of the way district, not only installed the wires and buttons, but had a room close by occupied by young men ready and even anxious to hear a call sounded. They were well provided with revolvers of the same make that are used in the army.

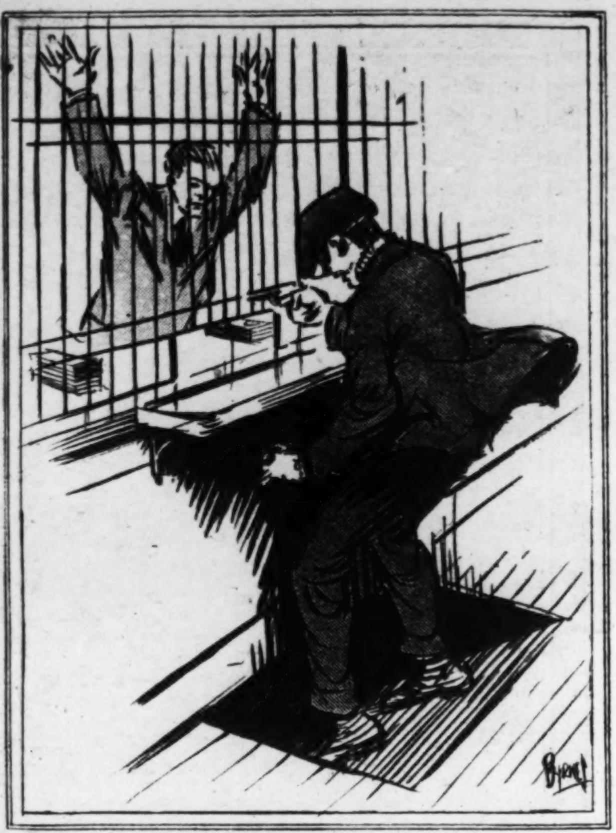
Some large concerns that had been using money to meet payrolls quickly abandoned the practice. Many workmen, particularly foreigners, who are making slow progress through the various stages of the melting pot, have decided objections to checks. They have an idea that the check is not as good as currency, and they they will have to pay a discount when it comes to getting the cash. Others said they could not get the cash unless they spent a goodly sum in the store of the merchant who furnishes the accomodation. Missionary work has been conducted among these dissenters, and it is still under way in such districts as Granite City, Madison and South St. Louis, where the percentage of Slavic and Italian labor is large.

The rising tide of crime has been by no means confined to the larger cities, though the professional operators show a decided preference for the principal population centers.

A news dispatch from Arrow Rock, up in Saline County, Mo., a few days ago, shows how thorough the preparation is in that place. A report was communicated in some way to the Marshal of the town that an automobile party was on the way to rob the Stock Bank of that place. There was a meeting called forthwith and in a little while a Gatling gun was taken out of its storage and camouflaged most artfully. Though the vigil was long and gunners willing, they were given no chance to excel in performance, as the expected raid did not materialize. Had the robbers come they would never have crossed the threshold, as a raking fire was all ready for them as soon as they stepped out of their car.

There have been many robberies perpetrated in the smaller cities and quite a number have been frustrated by the courage and forethought of the bankers and merchants in these places. A country banker in an Arkansas town distinguished himself by constructing an ingenious trap for such callers. He had been robbed several times and figured that it was up to him to devise some real preventive. He accordingly made a trap door in front of the inclosure wherein he sat, with the spring so adjusted that all he had to do was to kick it with his foot. He was accustomed to the order to throw up his hands, as previous visitors had indellibly fastened it on his memory. Accordingly, he fixed his trigger so it would work without the assistance of his hands, and then he sat back, almost hoping that a robber or two would chance along. In time his wish was gratified. He was alone in his little cage when a tough looking fellow stopped in front of the window and ordered "hands up."

The Arkansan quickly obeyed, but as his hands went up his toe went out and kicked the trigger of the trap door on which the would-be robber was standing, revolver in hand. The door worked like a charm, and the man at the window shot into a very dark hole some 10 feet deep.



"The door worked like a charm and the man at the window shot into a very dark hole some 10 feet deep."

Some of the older members of the Police Department, discussing various remedies for handling the situation that has become acute in St. Louis, adverted to a similar wave of crime that spread over the country about 30 years ago and tarried in this city for some time, though drastic means were employed for its suppression. One of these veterans recalled how a German grocer named Tegethoff, up in the neighborhood of Eighth and Biddle streets, suddenly turned inventor and produced a contrivance that helped amazingly in checking the crime wave. Tegethoff, it seems, had an experience very much like the Arkansas banker. He had been robbed so often that he concluded that these nightly prowlers would leave him penniless if he did not act in a hurry. He then went ahead and constructed a trap in his store and set it where the burglars would be sure to find it the next time they called. Then he locked his doors and went upstairs to bed.

He did not have to wait many hours before he was aroused by a great racket in the store. There was a burglar in the claws and he was so well trapped that it took the grocer and two policemen several hours to get him out.

The trap was a very cumbersome combination of logs, boards and chains, with powerful springs, so adjusted that the whole contrivance would close up as soon as anyone stepped on the planking. This capture helped to discourage the burglary traffic and it secured complete protection for that grocer from any further burglarious visitations.

Suggestion has been made that the safe deposits be equipped with tanks charged with suffocating gas and so adjusted as to release the fumes by merely touching a button. A system of this character was installed in the vaults of J. P. Morgan & Co. in New York some years ago, long before the poison gas was introduced as a war weapon by the Huns. With this system installed, burglars have certain death staring them in the face should they attempt to rob the millions in securities and money stored in these steel receptacles. All the watchmen have to do is to let the robbers get inside while staying without themselves, and then touch the button releasing the lethal fumes. In the Morgan vaults, it is reported, gas is automatically released by the mere opening of certain gates through which robbers would have to pass to get at the money.

Lieut. Sidney P. Vaughan of the pay corps of the navy, now stationed on the Pacific coast, has devised a plan of paying the employes by depositing checks to their credit in banks, instead of giving them either cash or checks. In this way the naval employe can draw against the amount placed to his credit—in other words, he has a bank account, which he did not have to take the time or trouble to open for himself. This plan, according to Lieut. Vaughan, means a big saving to the men on shore service, who only too frequently squander or otherwise lose a large part of their month's pay, when it is given them at one time. Besides protecting the employe from thieves, gamblers or other agencies lying in wait for such pay disbursements, the new system teaches habits of thrift. When a whole month's pay is deposited to the credit of the workman, with the privilege of writing checks against it, he is in a great many cases going to leave a part entrance, and they went up the rear way to her rooms."

"When you say 'her rooms,' you mean the suite of adjoining rooms which comprise the apartments of both Miss Jeanette Druse and her sister, Miss Elizabeth, do you not?"

"Yes, sir. But it was Miss Jeanette's sitting room they went into, all right."

"Isn't the room occupied by yourself and Miss Effie Tritt a part of that suite?"

"The room we did occupy is, yes, sir."

"Were you watching to see whether Raymond Sears was going to keep the engagement with Miss Druse, and whether or not she meant to meet him there?"

"Well, I wasn't what you might say watching; I just happened to be downstairs where I could see them."

"I see. And then you happened to be upstairs where you could see them go into her boudoir, is that it?"

"I followed them upstairs. I didn't know but Miss Jeanette might want me."

"As a matter of fact, you made it a point to stick pretty close to Miss Jeanette, didn't you?"

Fanny bridled.

"Nobody can say," she tartly returned, "that I was ever neglectful of my duties."

"Now, then, Miss Foster, after Raymond Sears and Miss Druse entered the sitting room or boudoir, what did you do?"

"Why, I just waited around. I'd meant to go in, too; but I had reason to remember that Miss Jeanette never wanted me when Ray was there."

Curiosity among the spectators might be described as standing on tiptoe.

Farrell, it was obvious to Drake, had thoroughly acquainted himself with the case, anyhow as far as the bureau's precis had enabled him, and Drake likewise understood that he was being kept by him to interpret and supplement the typewritten memorandum when occasion arose. This he now referred to, and put his next question:

"Was Sears carrying anything when he met Miss Druse in the garage?"

"Yes, his folding tool kit."

The interrogatory further elicited that Sears had carried the tool kit upstairs with him. The tool kit, Fanny averred, was only a detail of the elaborate pretext under which he spent as much time as possible in the girls' rooms. This was why he had been discharged. He was supposed to be installing an indoor telephone, but that didn't fool her.

Drake glanced round at Jeanette's motionless figure.

"You see, he murmured, "the telephone wasn't as much of a secret as you imagined."

Her dark eyes met his and he saw that her calmness was forced and strained. Her lips soundlessly formed one word: "Wait."

"So you don't know," Farrell was asking, "at what time Sears left the young ladies' rooms and departed from the house?"

Fanny shook her head. "No, sir."

"Did you see Raymond Sears again that night?"

"Yes, sir."

And now came a genuine sensation, sprung by the next query:

"At what time and under what circumstances?"

"Well, sir, the murder upset everybody in the house, and I was nervous and fidgety and unable to sleep, like all the rest. I couldn't stay in bed—was up at every sound.

"I don't rightly know what time it was, but it must have been near morning, when I heard something that took me out into the hall. Miss Jeanette had stolen out of her room a few minutes before, and when I saw that she'd only gone to her boudoir, where the detective was, I went back to bed. I thought for a second the noise was her coming back; but right away I realized that the steps were hurrying—hurrying down the front stairs. Then I went to see what was going on."

"Well, what did you see?"

"Miss Jeanette and her brother, Chancellor. They almost ran down the stairs and into the library. They were there for a minute or two; then they opened one of the windows and went out onto the terrace. Mr. Chancellor looked about to see if one of the detectives was near, then they dodged into the shubbery and ran east toward the drive."

"Did they encounter Sears?"

"Yes, sir. He seemed to be waiting for them in the shadow of the low stone wall that runs along the front of the property.

"Just go right ahead and tell what happened."

"The three stood whispering together a few seconds, awful scared and anxiouslike, as if afraid they'd be caught. All of a sudden Sears and Miss Jeanette ran across the drive and disappeared in the darkness, and Mr. Chancellor ran back to the house, going in at the same window he had come out of."

"What did you do then?"

"I—I—why, I went back into the house, too."

"Didn't you see where Sears and Miss Jeanette went?"

"No. I lost track of them in the dark."

"Do you know when Miss Druse returned to the house?"

"No, sir—only that she was there next morning."

"When you followed Mr. Chancellor Druse and his sister downstairs, did you see anybody else in the lower hall?"

Fanny was sure that nobody had been there, either while she was following the two, or afterward on her return to the house. Farrell pointed to Moorehouse.

"Are you positive," he asked, "that this gentleman was not in the lower hall?"

Fanny glanced at Andy.

"If he was," she temporized, "he was hiding somewhere. I only know I didn't see him."

"How long were you gone from the house?"

"Not over two minutes."

"How was Miss Jeanette dressed when you saw her run downstairs with her brother?"

"There was only a dim light in the halls, but she had on what I took to be a long waterproof over her kimono."

Drake and Farrell again whispered together at some length, during which the former drew from his pocket and passed to the other the calendar sheet bearing the anonymous message.

At sight of it, Jeanette suddenly leaned forward over their shoulders and laid upon the table between them the calendar from which the page had been torn.

"Before showing the note to Fanny," she murmured, "I want you first to consider this," and she pointed to the top or "July" page.

The two men followed intently while Jeanette, with the tip of a gloved forefinger, pointed out a feature that Drake had overlooked, notwithstanding the extreme carefulness with which he had previously examined it.

"If you will observe," she pursued, "you can see that the 'June' page has a penciled circle around the figure 6. The circle is clean cut, even, was made by a single, deliberately guided sweep of the lead pencil. The other marks are ragged, purposeless, crazy, slapped on the paper by somebody who was in a tearing rage."

Drake grabbed up the calendar and scanned the "July" sheet. While the erratic scorings had plainly left their impress upon it, there was no indication whatever of the circle.

"By thunder!" he finally ejaculated. "You were right, Miss Druse! Sears checked the date by drawing the circle around it, and Fanny scored it afterward—when she wrote the note. It's as plain as day!"

Fanny was watching them with uneasy curiosity. Farrell arose and carried the message over to her.

"I'll ask you," said Farrell, in his crisp manner, "whether or not you wrote this note?"

"What if I did?" she retorted defiantly.

"Well, did you? I don't want to debate the matter with you."

Fanny shrugged her shoulders and favored Drake with a brazen stare.

"Yes, I did," she confessed, pertly tossing her head.

The woman's unmistakable malice and animosity caused a titter to run through the room, which in turn elicited a bellow of reproof from the bull-necked policeman acting as bailiff. But no shadow of a smile rest upon Farrell's keen face as he read the note aloud:

"'Mr. Detective: Don't waste precious time. If you really want to know who killed Lord Demar, ask Jeanette Druse who was alone with her in her bedroom last night.'" And with a sharp edge of sarcasm in his voice, he followed with:

"So you wanted to direct suspicion toward Miss Jeanette Druse and Sears, did you?"

Fanny sat silent.

"Is that true?" Farrell persisted. And she suddenly flared out:

"You can think what you're a mind to! I'll say no more about it!"

And now Farrell smiled.

"I think that's sufficient," said he, "to establish the authorship of the note. We really don't care to know much more about it. Only this: When did you slip it under the bedroom door—when you followed Miss Druse there, at the time she was surprised by Mr. Drake—or was it afterward?"

"While she was with Mr. Drake," came with sullen unwillingness from the witness.

Farrell now reverted to the period when Fanny followed Chancellor Druse back to the house.

"When you returned to the house, did you re-enter by the library window, too?"

The witness acknowledged that she had, adding, by way of explanation: "That's the only way I could have gotten in without rousing Burritt and maybe the rest of the household."

"Did you stop in the library?"

Fanny's lips fell apart in a little startled gasp and she glanced suspiciously from the prosecutor to Drake's stern countenance. At this stage the detective was constantly prompting Farrell.

"Well, did you?" Farrell insisted.

"Why, I didn't hurry right out. It was pretty dark in there, and I had to get my bearings."

"I see. And while you were groping for your bearings, you presently found yourself in the neighborhood of the library table, didn't you?"

"Why, I suppose I was close to the table—yes, sir."

"Now, think, Miss Foster—isn't it a fact that you deliberately paused at the table and took a package from it, which you carried with you when you went back to your room?"

"Yes, I did!" she snapped. "And I'll have you understand that I never unwrapped it or looked to see what it was. It's just like I found it."

Drake went through a little soundless pantomime of snapping his fingers, a sign of triumph, and turned an exultant face to Jeanette.

"I've got it!" he whispered. Then, to Farrell and Coroner Curtis: "Adjourn the inquest over till—say day after tomorrow. I'll undertake to bring home the bacon then."

"How about the Foster woman?" Farrell wanted to know.

"On your life, don't lose her!" Drake earnestly charged him. He drew Callahan aside and whispered to him:

"You might work on her, chief. There was a letter—for me—with that package, or I'm an Indian! I want it bad."

Then he impulsively addressed Jeanette while moving toward the door.

"Come with me, Miss Druse. You and I are going to solve the riddle!"

of it remaining on deposit, which, with additions from time to time, will make a respectable balance. Lieut. Vaughan has given much study to his plan and believes that with the co-operation of banks, the new method will prove a blessing for the men, who so often spend all their salary in a very short while and then run along on short money rations until the next pay, only to repeat the same performance. One of the advantages associated with this system and which could be applied to large industries as well, is that it would obviate the necessity of paymasters going about with the money and thereby furnishing ready material for the hold-up men, who lie in wait for such promising material.

Over One Million American Women Are Now Using La-May Face Powder

There are actually three thousand different brands of face powder now sold in America, some on the market as long as fifty years. A new face powder has become the most popular among all of these other three thousand powders, and it is only a few months old. Yet it is now selling faster than many on the market for fifty years. Why did this new powder become famous so quickly? For two reasons: First, it is guaranteed absolutely pure. It does not contain rice powder, white lead or any injurious substance. Second, it stays on better than any other powder. This improved formula is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). The large size is fifty cents and the trial size twenty-five cents. When you see how wonderfully it beautifies your complexion you will understand why La-may is now used by over a million American women.

- The Fall of Zapata's Moneyless Republic - A Ten-Year Experiment in Socialism

Under regime of leader whose death is announced not a dollar was circulated in Morelos, Chiapas and Tabasco, in Southern Mexico—Farmers brought surplus produce to market and laid it down for all to help selves free — In return they shopped, traveled, attended opera and picture shows without cost — Collapse of "Paradise of the Workers," which comprised 3,500,000 of human beings and had area greater than Ireland. :: ::

EMILIANO ZAPATA is dead, and before he died he saw crumbling beneath the waters his Atlantis of Industry, the Paradise of the Workers which he had erected on the sunny plains of the State of Morelos, in Southern Mexico. At the height of his power, the experiment was flourishing on a gigantic scale—there were three and a half millions of human beings populating this Eden of the proletariat in the twentieth century.

It was probably the largest, happiest and most thorough trial of communism which the world has ever seen. In comparison, Socialism is reactionary and Bolshevism conservative. Let us look upon this one astounding fact: In all of Morelos, during the Zapata regime, there was not a single coin or bill of money in circulation. Money was completely abolished, save that at the capital some sacks of gold were stored for dealing with the benighted capitalistic systems of other states and countries in the transactions of import and export.

Instead of money each member of the community wore about his neck a disc of brass, the size of a dollar and twice as thick. On it was inscribed: "The bearer of this (Manuel Garcia, for example) is a member of the Industrial Union of North and South America. Who shows him favor shows favor to all the members of this union."

Armed with this disc, Manuel and his family could present themselves on a train and ride free of charge. He could shop at the stores, put up at hotels, attend the theater, opera and picture show, without price. If it was a new suit for little Manuel, a new mantilla for Dolores, a bunch of bananas, a round of excellent beef, a trip to the mountains in the hot season, a new sombrero, a box of candy, admission to a performance of "Faust"—the little brass talisman was an open sesame to one and all.

In return, Manuel was expected and compelled, if he desired to avail himself of all these advantages, to put in a certain amount of labor on behalf of the commonwealth. If he would consume, he must produce. But his toil was not irksome. Morelos and the adjoining States of Chiapas and Tabasco, to which the experiment eventually spread, enjoy a tropical climate and bounteous soil. Between the upland pastures of the interior and the hot lowlands of the coast, almost every variety of fruit and vegetable can be grown in abundance, with slight expenditure of labor. If Manuel was a farmer, he would put in an hour or so a day with his crops; then, after his own table was supplied, he would take his surplus to the market and leave it there for his fellow communists to help themselves at will. There could be no haggling and chaffering over prices, for everything was free. There was not a dollar in circulation in all the length and breadth of Zapata Land—which ran in its palmy days from the suburbs of the City of Mexico to the Guatemala border, and had an area of 90,000 square miles, equal to that of the New England states and a trifle larger than that of Ireland.

Or, supposing that Manuel worked in a factory. Strange to say, in a society so idyllic, there were factories. The sugar industry was highly organized, from cane to finished product; one refinery alone employed 25,000 persons. The shoe industry, from grazing cattle to finished boot and sandal, was equally flourishing, though not on so large a scale. One shoe factory employed more than 3000. The cotton industry was also considerable.

Under previous management, Manuel would have worked 14 hours a day and received in return the munificent recompense of 50 cents. The factories still ran 14 hours a day under Zapata, but in seven shifts of two hours each—and the pay was the freedom of the Union, from cabbage basket to opera house!

The late Emiliano Zapata.

One of the markworthy results of this system was that women immediately became free. Every woman was as wealthy as every man. Therefore, no woman could be bought, not even by the glitter of a wealthy marriage. She must be won on her own terms or not at all; she could have no motive save love in choosing the father of her children. The effect was a mighty recrudescence of love-making, in which the man had to stand on his individual merits, with no advantages over his competitors save the natural ones of greater comeliness and strength, more ardent eloquence and greater zeal.

In the early days these girls all wanted jewelry and rings. Lucky companeros, fresh from some foray, brought their sweethearts many a beautiful bit of jewelry, and those not so lucky were envious. "Since the republic is free," their outcry was, "why are there not beautiful rings for all of us?"

Zapata gallantly plundered every church in the State of its gold plate and melted the mass into a myriad rings. Then, in bushel baskets, mule-loads of them, the rings were dispatched to the plazas throughout the State and dumped on the ground. For a while the hands of the women, old and young alike, fairly blazed with jewelry. Then the hands became bare, or almost bare, again. Rings and trinkets came to be chosen and worn as happy little trifles of no importance.

As to religion, the population is nominally Roman Catholic, but the last priest fled across the border slightly in advance of the last dollar. So, quaintly, the churches were turned into motion picture houses, schools and poultry exhibitions. As for government, the republic, as such, had no affairs to settle, unless it were the management of the import and export trade, which was purely a business proposition conducted by a few skilled men at the "head office." The countryside settled its own questions, the village its own and city its own.

Whenever there was a question in dispute, the people interested would gather in the plaza of the nearest town. The band would play "La Paloma" and some waltzes, and then those who were not nervous about public speaking would mount boxes and make their arguments for and against. After an hour or two of this the band would sound a fanfare and the gathering would divide for a count of noses. The majority carried the day. But often the minority won as well as the majority. An instance is related, concerning the building of a road, in which 70 per cent of the farmers agreed upon a route which left the remaining 30 per cent in no better case than they were before. The minority submitted with good grace and loyally helped build the new road. This proved too much for the victors, who, when their own road was finished, went across the valley and built another road just as good for the special use of the vanquished.

Zapata's Industrial Union has been called "The Republic of Play." For the light-hearted peons, having so much leisure on their hands, employed it in merriment. The boasted no intellectual joys, for 95 per cent of the population of Indians could neither read nor write. And Zapata had the daring to say that "this did not matter, since civilization has not yet produced and naturally cannot produce anything worthy of a free people's perusal!" But the country teemed with merry and waggish revolutionary songs and charming ballads, in which the people were producing for themselves a literature suited to their enjoyment. Picturing the popular happiness, an admirer of the commonwealth wrote a year ago:

"Glance up this side street. Bronzed men in their white cotton suits and immense sombreros are building a low adobe wall on each side of the street and across the ends. The children clap their hands and help. The street is not being used at present, so in their ample leisure the men are turning it into a big shallow pond for the children. In a few days it is completed and the water is a riot of little glistening brown bodies. There goes up a cry for boats! All sorts of craft are contrived of sticks and paper; and then the loafing crowd of companeros begins a contest in shipbuilding. Boats of all imaginable kinds pass from their skilled knives to the hands of the eager water pirates. And the sport detains them not for a day, but for days altogether.

"Nor are more formal amusements lacking. Every plaza has its band. Mostly the performers play without music and play astonishingly well; and the bandstand is the center of the social life. Here in the cool of the enchanted tropic night gather townsfolk and villagers—old folk chatting together of the great change, even now almost incredible to them, conveys of soft-voiced, dusk-eyed children, and everywhere the gay bravado and bravura of Companero and Conchita. The band breaks into a provoking waltz. The crowd seems to flow as by one movement into a huge circle, and then you shall see the dancing of a free people. Here a tall companero, his guitar slung on his neck, dances with his little daughter; there a staid couple, toil-seamed, awkwardly happy, renew their broken youth, while all about them turn and trip a golden swarm of sweethearts, who dance with uplifted faces in the flooding splendor of the immense tropic moon as if the whole universe had nothing to do but trip and turn with them.

"Suddenly the music ceases. The tall companero unslings his guitar, mounts the bandstand, and, amid a great hush, sings in a husky-sweet baritone a love song of his own making. He is a great favorite, and the crowd keeps him singing until, with a sudden burst of chatter, the children make a rush for the south side of the plaza, where, upon a great white sheet slung across the facade of the (late!) jefe politico's palace, appears the familiar grin of Charlie Chaplin!"

Yet, despite the softness of this romantic life, the peons were and proved themselves, redoubtable warriors. Zapata began his revolution in 1910, and for five years he and his followers lived in the saddle. The zeal of their fighting was measured exactly by the difference between their status before and after the revolution. Prior to 1910, some 50-odd haciendados owned all the land and held the Indians as serfs. The peon entered service by receiving a cotton shirt and a pair of sandals from his master, who charged several hundred times their value against him. Thereafter he received no money, but only enough beans at the store to keep him alive. Never could he pay his "debt;" it grew with his years of toil and he left it as

as the picture is being made.

After Chaplin has worked out the general idea of the picture he wants to make he has his property department build the various sets in which he proposes to work. Many days he begins work without having the slightest idea what he is going to do. Often the surroundings suggest certain ideas to him and he tries them out, going through all the business in the pantomime several times before having his camera men shoot the scene. Every scene of this kind is shot from half a dozen different angles in order to get the best effect, and often 20 times as many scenes are filmed as are shown in the picture that is released. For instance, Chaplin shot nearly 50,000 feet of film while making "Shoulder Arms." It was planned to be a five or six reel picture, but it was cut down and cut down until it was not more than two and a half reels—2500 feet in length—when it was finally released. Scores of funny scenes over which he literally sweat blood were thrown into the discard. But the finished product proved to be one of the funniest pictures, if not the funniest picture, he ever made.

For the first two hours of the afternoon I spent at his studio Chaplin remade the scenes of the day before. Then he moved over into a kitchen set and began on "new stuff." Having cast himself for a half-witted farm hand in his new picture, he hit upon the scheme of putting a live chicken upon the stove and getting it to lay a strictly fresh egg. After he had his camera man shoot that uplifting situation half a dozen times, he led a cow into the kitchen set and milked her before the camera—to strengthen the comedy idea of having everything fresh.

Two hours more were spent with this cow before the comedian was satisfied with the scene. Never for a moment did he relax from his purpose, and he would have continued for another hour had not Douglas Fairbanks, in Mexican costume, from his own picture, blown into the studio. His arrival was a signal to begin cutting up.

Fairbanks had mastered a new rope trick during the day and he had come over to Chaplin's studio to teach it to him. For Chaplin and Fairbanks are not only great friends, but they have the most amazing amount of admiration for each other. The moment Fairbanks arrived Chaplin stopped work and for half an hour the two stars spun rope and kidded each other with all the zest of boys out of school. All the studio employes seemed to sense the fact that something was going on, and soon there was a big gallery. A ring of actors, camera and property men, hangers-on and visitors gathered around them and the fun would have continued indefinitely had not Fairbanks, in a mistaken moment, tried to lift a 512-pound fat boy on his back. The mountain of flesh strained a ligament in the playboy's back, and that was the signal to call it a day.

Far from the madding crowd—over the dinner table at the Los Angeles Athletic Club—Chaplin, once more in conventional attire, discussed the film game with me

"What I try to do," he said frankly, "is inject universal humor into my films. There's a big market for my pictures in China. In fact, I could make a very good living if I only made pictures for the Chinese. That's why I do the simple, elemental stunts that you find in my pictures. I try to make them appeal to the people of every land. I have found that if I can make children laugh at my stunts I can get the grownups. Men are but boys grown tall.

"I try to make my pictures without subtitles," he went on. "There is no real reason why photoplays should have long, explanatory subtitles. The action in the plays should explain everything. And in time to come all the really good pictures will be made along this line. A subtitle is a confession of weakness."

"Do you think motion pictures are better today than they were a year ago?" I asked, seeing that he was in a serious mood.

"Immensely better," he answered. "Every variety of picture has improved. In my own case, do you know that I have not used any pies in my pictures for more than a year?"

With this important side light on the films I felt that my day had been well spent. There was no longer any question in my mind that pictures had improved. Charlie Chaplin told the whole story in 10 words when he said: "I have not used a pie for the last year." And Charlie Chaplin is admittedly the greatest artist in the film world.

Number Four of a Series of Articles on the Photoplay Industry

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

"Are the movies improving?" is asked of greatest film comedian; "Immensely," he says, "I have not used any pies for more than a year" — Declares that all he earned last year was $280,000 for two pictures, out of which he had to pay expense of manufacture :: :: :: ;; ;;

IT IS not unlikely that in time to come Charlie Chaplin's shoes will find their way into a glass case at the Metropolitan Museum, along with Lillian Russell's wedding rings and other historical objects.

For Mr. Chaplin's pedal extremities, as such, are probably the most famous in the world.

What is more, they are continuing to make footprints on the sands of time, not to mention miles of film. Remove Charlie Chaplin's funny shoes and his humor is footless. He is not on record as ever having uttered, "My feet are my fortune, sir, he said," but I will write it into the record here.

One of the first things I noticed when I arrived at the Chaplin studio was an old, disreputable pair of shoes, which were parked in the bright sunshine outside of his dressing-room door.

"There is the plot of his next picture," said my escort, who picked up one of the patched and battered foot coverings with all the loving care of an antique collector handling his most valuable possession.

"May I examine it?" I begged, and a moment later I had the precious object in my hands. It was a dramatic moment, but more thrills were in store for me. After I had replaced the dirty old shoe beside its mate I was taken into Mr. Chaplin's dressing room, where his ragged coat and trousers, together with his battered derby and bamboo cane, were arranged upon a chair. Needless to say I was visibly affected.

This important event took place shortly before 11 o'clock in the morning. Mr. Chaplin had not arrived at the studio, but was expected at any moment. His brother, Sid, informed me that as he had closed his house and was living at the Los Angeles Athletic Club, his movements were somewhat uncertain, but that I might have the freedom of the studio until he arrived.

I was really much impressed with the exterior of the Chaplin studio, for it didn't have the slightest resemblance to the conventional film factory. Its main buildings on La Brae avenue are like a row of Elizabethan houses. When Chaplin bought this site about a year ago the neighboring property owners almost rose in arms. The idea of transforming a beautiful lemon grove into an ugly studio did not appeal to their esthetic sense. However, when they saw what Chaplin had built on it they were ready to present him with a loving cup. For the Chaplin studio is the most artistic layout of its kind in Hollywood.

The interior of the studio grounds was another revelation to me. The walks, closely cropped grass plots and flower gardens rival those of any private estate in the vicinity. All the buildings conform architecturally with the Elizabethan row on La Brae avenue, and everything is as spic and span as any millionaire's show place. Chaplin's private offices and dressing rooms are furnished in the best of taste. His old shoes were out drying in the sunshine and were the only blot on the otherwise perfect picture.

Shortly before 12 o'clock I heard a commotion at the main entrance, and a moment later an attache rushed up with the important news, "He's here." The news was correct. Mr. Chaplin had arrived for his day's work.

The slender little chap with the mass of curly hair who shook hands with me did not much resemble the Charlie Chaplin I had seen in the films. Without the hirsute adornment on his upper lip, his baggy trousers and his old shoes, Mr. Charles Chaplin is not at all distinguished in appearance. But I was not disappointed, for I had met him before. In fact, I knew him three years ago when he was only getting $670,000 a year.

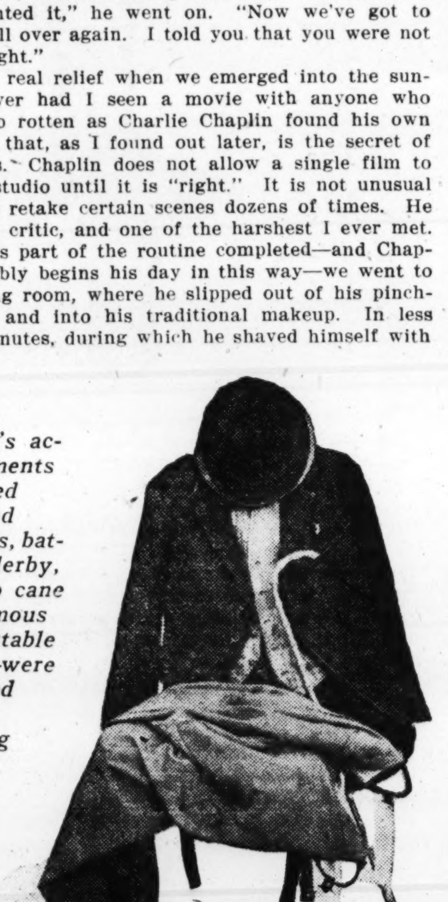
"Would you like to see the stuff we took yesterday?" he asked in his peculiar cockney accent, after the formal pleasantries of our reunion had been concluded. And suiting the action to the word we entered the nearby projection room where the film that had been "shot" the day before was run off for his approval.

The brief strip of film that was projected was very amusing. It revealed the efforts of a big man in a nightshirt to arouse a sleepy Charlie Chaplin from his bed, and its action was punctuated with several well-directed kicks at a well-cushioned spot. The several shots—different views of the same scene—appealed to me as being genuinely funny, but Charlie Chaplin had exactly the opposite opinion.

"That's terrible!" he cried, and he writhed in actual mental distress while the film was being run off. "Why didn't you get both of my feet in?" he rebuked his camera man after watching one shot. "I told you how I wanted it," he went on. "Now we've got to take this all over again. I told you that you were not doing it right."

It was a real relief when we emerged into the sunlight. Never had I seen a movie with anyone who found it so rotten as Charlie Chaplin found his own film. But that, as I found out later, is the secret of his success. Chaplin does not allow a single film to leave his studio until it is "right." It is not unusual for him to retake certain scenes dozens of times. He is his own critic, and one of the harshest I ever met.

With this part of the routine completed—and Chaplin invariably begins his day in this way—we went to his dressing room, where he slipped out of his pinchback coat and into his traditional makeup. In less than 15 minutes, during which he shaved himself with a safety razor and put on his moustache with spirit gum, he was ready for work.



Charlie's accouterments—ragged coat and trousers, battered derby, bamboo cane and famous disreputable shoes—were arranged in his dressing room.

"Here's a long telegram from Kessel & Bauman offering you $400,000 a picture," interrupted his secretary, who went through his mail while he was dressing.

"Don't answer it," ordered the comedian.

"You mean to say that you are not going to pay any attention to such an offer?" I asked in amazement.

"What's the use?" replied Chaplin. "I've got six pictures to make under my present contract, and after that I'm signed up with Fairbanks, Griffith and Pickford. We are going to distribute our own pictures. That's why I'm not interested in any kind of an offer."

"What is the real truth about your present contract?" I asked, for I was anxious to hear his version of his $1,000,000 income.

"Do you know how much money I made last year?" he asked in return. "I made two pictures, for which I received approximately $140,000 each. You see, I have a guarantee of $125,000 for each 1600-foot picture, with a bonus for whatever extra footage is accepted. Last year I made exactly two pictures, and my total receipts were not much more than a quarter of a million. I had to pay for the making of the pictures, the upkeep of my studio and all my personal expenses. So you will see that my net profits were very different from what I could have made if I had been on salary."

"But you could have made the eight pictures in the year and earned a million," I interposed.

"If I had wanted to turn out any old kind of pictures I could have done so," he admitted. "But I am not interested in merely making a lot of pictures, as I used to do. I want to make good pictures, and you can't make good ones if you make them hurriedly or if you have to have them completed at a certain date. I work on my pictures until I have them just the way I want them, and I am willing to spend months making a two-reel comedy, if at the end of the time I have something worth while.

"And, naturally, I want the returns on a good picture," he went on. "One of my recent pictures has earned more than $1,000,000, yet all I received was $140,000. That was why Doug and Mary and I—and Mr Griffith—are going to market our own pictures. We work like dogs to make our pictures and the distributors and exhibitors make all the money. I'm not crazy about money, but I would rather make two good pictures a year and get a legitimate return from them than make a dozen fairly good films at $1,000,000 salary. I'm a nut, all right, but I'm not going to be a blank blank fool any more. If the pictures are able to earn a million for a lot of delicatessen dealers, I'm going to get the million myself."

With the conclusion of this sordid discussion we repaired to the stage, where Chaplin began the retaking of the scenes which had been made so unsatisfactorily the day before. And in watching him at work I learned several things that have never before been disclosed to the public.

In the first place, Chaplin directs his own pictures. Instead of having a loud-mouthed director to think up new ways to waste time, Chaplin bosses the camera men and his associate players himself. What is more, he invents and devises nearly all the stunts which are shown in his pictures. Chaplin films are not written, they are built as they are being filmed. He has no scenario department, and consequently there is no assistant director with a script. There is no continuity to follow. The continunity automatically writes itself

The Eldest

Floss ignored him. "Hurry up with that waist, Rose!"

"I'm on the collar now. In a second," here was a little silence. Then: "Floss, is—is Henry going to call for you—here?"

"Well—sure! Did you think I was going to meet him on the corner? He said he wanted to see you, or something polite like that."

She finished her tea and vanished again. Al, too, had disappeared to begin that process from which he had always emerged incredibly sleek and dapper and perfumed.

His progress with shaving brush, shirt, collar and tie was marked by disjointed bars of the newest syncopation, whistled with an uncanny precision and fidelity to detail. He caught the broken time, and tossed it lightly up again, and dropped it, and caught it deftly likely a juggler playing with frail crystal globes that seem forever on the point of crashing to the ground.

Pa stood up, yawning. "Well," he said, his manner very casual, "guess I'll just drop around to the movie."

From the kitchen: "Don't you want to sit with me a minute first?"

He knew the selfishness of it, this furtive and sprightly old man. And because he knew it he attempted to hide his guilt under a burst of temper.

"I've been slaving all day. I guess I've got the right to a little amusement. A man works his fingers to the bone for his family, and then his own daughter nags him."

He stamped down the hall, righteously, and slammed the front door.

Rose came from the kitchen, the pink blouse, warm from the iron, in one hand. She prinked out its ruffles and pleatings as she went. Floss, burnishing her nails somewhat frantically with a dilapidated and greasy buffer, snatched the garment from her and slipped bare arms into it. The front door bell rang, three big, determined rings. Panic fell upon the household.

"It's him!" whispered Floss, as if she could be heard in the entrance three floors below. "You'll have to go."

"I can't!" Every inch of Rose seemed to shrink and cower away from the thought. "I can't. Al! Al, go to the door, will you?"

"Can't," came back in a thick mumble. "Shaving."

The front door bell rang again, three big, determined ings. "Rose!" hissed Floss, her tone venomous. "I can't go with my waist open. For heaven's sake! Go to the door!"

"I can't," repeated Rose, in a kind of wail. "I—can't." And went. As she went she passed one futile, work-worn hand over her hair, plucked off her apron and tossed it into a corner, first wiping her flushed face with it.

Henry Selz came up the shabby stairs springily, as a man of 40 should. Rose stood at the door and waited for him. He stood in the doorway a moment, uncertanly.

"How-do, Henry."

His uncertainty became incredulity. Then, "Why, how-do, Rose! Didn't know you—for a minute. Well, well! It's been a long time. Let's see—10—14—about 15 years, isn't it?"

"Fifteen," said Rose, "in May. Won't you come in? Floss'll be here in a minute."

Henry Selz came in and sat down on the davenport couch and dabbed at his forehead. The years had been very kind to him—those same years that had treated Rose so ruthlessly. He had the look of an outdoor man; a man who has met prosperity and walked with her, and followed her pleasant ways; a man who has learned late in life of golf and caviar and tailors, but who has adapted himself to these accessories of wealth with a minimum of friction.

"It certainly is warm, for this time of year." He leaned back and regarded Rose tolerantly. "Well, and how've you been? Did little sister tell you how flabbergasted I was when I saw her this morning? I'm darned if it didn't take 15 years off my age just like that! I got kind of balled up for a minue and thought it was you. She tell you?"

"Yes, she told me," said Rose.

"I hear your ma's still sick. That certainly is tough. And you've never married, eh?"

"Never married," echoed Rose.

And so they made conversation, a little uncomfortably, until there came quick, light, young steps down the hallway, and Floss appeared in the door, a radiant, glowing, girlish vision. She was miraculously well dressed, in her knowingly simple blue serge suit, and her tiny hat, and her neat shoes and gloves.

"Ah! how's the little girl tonight?" said Henry Selz.

Floss dimpled, blushed, smiled swayed. "Did I keep you waiting a terribly long time?"

"No, not a bit. Rose and I were chinning over old times, weren't we, Rose?" A kindly, clumsy thought struck him. "Say, look here, Rose, we're going to a show. Why don't you run and put on your hat and come along. H'm? Come on!"

Rose smiled as a mother smiles at a child that has unknowingly hurt her. "No, thanks, Henry. Not tonight. You and Floss run along. Yes, I'll remember you to Ma."

Then they were off, in a little flurry of words and laughter. Rose stood a moment, uncertainly, after they had left. On her face was the queerest look, as of one thinking, readjusting, struggling to arrive at a conclusion in the midst of sudden bewilderment. She turned mechanically and went into her mother's room. She picked up the tray on the table by the bed.

"Who was that?" asked the sick woman in her ghostly, devitalized voice.

"That was Henry Selz," said Rose.

The sick woman grappled a moment with memory. "Henry Selz! Henry—oh, yes. Did he go out with Floss?"

"Yes," said Rose.

"It's cold in here," whined the sick woman.

"I'll get you a hot bag in a minute, Ma." Rose carried the tray down the hall to the kitchen. At that Al emerged from his bedroom, shrugging himself into his coat. He followed Rose down the hall and watched her as she filled the bag and screwed it and wiped it dry.

"I'll take that in to Ma," he volunteered. He was up the hall and back in a flash. Rose had slumped into a chair at the dining-room table, and was pouring herself a cup of cold and bitter tea. Al came over to her and laid one white hand on her shoulder.

"Ro, lend me a couple of dollars till Saturday, will you?"

"I should say not."

Al doused his cigarette in the dregs of a convenient teacup. He bent down and laid his powdered and pale cheek against Rose's sallow one. One arm was about her and his hand patted her shoulder.

"Oh, come on, kid," he coaxed. "Don't I always pay you back? Come on. Be a sweet ol' sis. I wouldn't ask you only I've got a date to go to the White City tonight and dance, and I couldn't get out of it. I tried." He kissed her, and his lips were moist and he reeked of tobacco, and though Rose shrugged impatiently away from him, he knew that he had won.

"There is a dollar and some small change in the can on the second shelf in the china closet," said Rose.

Al was off like a terrier. From the pantry came the clink of metal against metal. He was up the hall in a flash, without a look at Rose. The front door slammed a third time.

* * * * * * * *

Rose stirred her cold tea slowly, leaning on the table's edge and gazing down into the amber liquid that she did not mean to drink. For suddenly and comically her face puckered up like a child's. Her head came down among the supper things with a little crash, and she sobbed as she lay there, with great tearing, ugly sobs that would not be stilled, though she tried to stifle them, as does one who lives in a paper-thin Chicago flat. She was not weeping for Henry Selz whom she had just seen. She was not weeping for envy of her selfish little sister, or for lonelines, or weariness. She was weeping at the loss of a ghost who had become her familiar. She was weeping because a packet of soiled and yellow old letters on the top shelf in the hall closet was now only a packet of soiled and yellow old letters, food for the ash can. She was weeping because the urge of spring, that had expressed itself in her only this morning pitifully enough in terms of rhubarb and housecleaning and a bundle of thumbed old love letters, had stirred in her for the last time.

But presently she did stop her sobbing and got up and cleared the table, and washed the dishes and even glanced at the crumpled sheets of the morning paper that she never found time to read until evening. By 8 o'clock the little flat was very still.

MEDICAL QUACKS ARE NOT A MODERN PEST

DO you regard cold cream as an ultra-modern palliative?

Or pure food and drug laws as a comparatively recent type of legislation?

Or the familiar "cure all" as an up-to-date quack device for the twentieth century credulous?

You are wrong, according to the statements contained in a bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society, based upon a communication to the Society from Dr. John A. Foote. A part of the communication states:

"Most people at some time or another use cold-cream. It seems quite a modern luxury, indispensable alike to peer and peri, and adapted to many anl varied uses. In fact, one traveler tells recently of having some of his cold-cream eaten by a fat-hungry valet in Germany. So we are inclined to regard it as a fairly modern product. And yet 'Unguentum Refrigerans,' cold-cream, has come down to us from Roman days. The first formula is attributed to Galen, who lived and wrote in the second century. What we use today is practically the same, though 'Doctor' Galen's original formula was imitated and 'improved' hundreds of times.

"Emperor Frederick II of Sicily, in 1240 or 1241, published the first pure food and drugs act. He was about 700 years ahead of Doctor Wiley, for he specified strict regulations of the standard of drug purity, and provided for drug inspectors, and fined all offenders.

"The practice of medicine was also regulated. A physician was required to have a diploma from a university before he could study medicine; then he took a three-year course in the school of medicine and one year's practice under a practicing physician. Special postgraduate work in anatomy was required if he was to do surgery.

"All this was in the so-called 'dark ages.' Even the fees of physicians and pharmacists were strictly regulated by law and were in purchasing value about the same as the charges of the present day. Physicians were not allowed to own drug stores and drug adulterators were severely dealt with.

"Mithradatium was the name of the great antidote of Roman pharmacy. It had from 40 to 50 vegetable ingredients, few of which had any real medicinal value except opium, and these drugs were blended with honey.

"It remained for Nero's physician, Andromachus, to put the finishing touches to this wonderful compound. Andromachus added viper's flesh to the formula and called his new compound Theriaca. He wrote some verses dedicated to Nero, describing this medicine and claiming virtues for it which in our day would subject him to prosecution under the Anti-trust Act. Evidently he believed he had created in this one compound a veritable pharmaceutical monopoly.

"Galen, one of the fathers of medicine, went even further. He recommended it as a cure for all poisons, bites, headaches, vertigo, deafness, epilepsy, apoplexy, dimness of sight, loss of voice, asthma, coughs, spitting of blood, tightness of breath, colic, the iliac passion (appendicitis), jaundice, hardening of the spleen, stone, fevers, dropsy, leprosy, melancholy, all pestilences, etc. Nowadays he would probably have included coupon thumb, golf shoulder, and movie eye.

"As Galen's writings dominated medical thought for over 1500 years, it is not surprising that this advertisement made Mithradatium, or Theriaca, a valued remedy. Every physician of note for centuries afterward claimed some improvement on the original formula."

The Fall of Zapata's Moneyless Republic

a legacy of doom to his children. He wore on his wrist a manacle, to attempt to remove which was cause for a death sentence, and attached to the manacle was a brass disc, on which was written the peon's name and number and the name of his master. If he attempted to escape the brass disc identified him and he was brought back, often to be lashed to death before the assembled peons of the estate by way of example.

Then came the voice of Zapata, himself an Indian, whispering here and there throughout the land: "We can!" There were secret meetings, the fumbling of accustomed hands upon ancient rifles. A haciendado commits an outrage upon a peon's child; he is assassinated by a shot from the darkness; and the revolution is on. Every foot of the way was bought with peon blood, but finally the last of the haciendados fled shrieking, and the peon was free to take possession of and till for himself and his brother workers any bit of land that struck his fancy.

Some months ago it was announced that Carranza troops had "pacified" Morelos; whether, despite the death of its leader, the land will stay "pacified" is a question. The State is impregnated with rebel seed. One hundred years ago an humble priest named Morelos kept in the field there a revolutionary army of 60,000 peons, until he was betrayed and assassinated. When his followers had wished to salute him as "Generalissimo," he replied: "I would rather be remembered as the serf of the people." He bequeathed his spirit and name to the territory. Since his death there have been eight uprisings in Morelos; like the others, the eighth, that of Zapata, is now wrecked. It was announced that he had been killed "by strategy" and his body was produced to prove that he was at last dead. His slayer, Col. Guajardo, has been promoted to a General in reward of his feat.

In the Fall he was sent to a lumber camp.

ACCOUNTING FOR THE YAWKEY MILLIONS

He made computations that resulted in enormous additions to the Yawkey millions.

Story of Aladdin-like fortune gathered in timber lands and mines all the way from Klondike to Chile — One investment of $5000 which grew into $6,500,000 — National training school for boys to be one of the benefactions :: :: :: :: ::

THIS isn't a recipe on how to get a million or half a hundred million dollars. One can get that information by reading a Wall street folder or some success epigrams. It is a story that relates some of the incidents in the life of a man who, at the age of 43 years, left a fortune of between forty and fifty million dollars, besides a trail of millionaires he had made along the swath he cut in timber lands and mines between the upper Klondike and lower Chile, and of the quest he pursued while trying to find some worthy way to spend his spare change of five or ten million dollars.

When the will of William H. Yawkey, mining and lumber capitalist, was read the other day, the public sat up and gasped. Having dodged sensationalism all his life, Mr. Yawkey had his way to public attention blazed by his death, which occurred March 5 at Augusta, Ga., from an attack of influenza which he contracted on the first lap of an automobile trip which was to take him and his wife to the Pacific coast.

Who was this William H. Yawkey? How did he make his money? What sort of man was he? These were the questions people asked when they learned that he had left twenty-one millions to his wife in addition to the income from another million and a specific bequest of $750,000; another twenty-one million to an adopted son of 16, $500,000 to a niece and bequests of from $25,000 to $10,000 each to employes and relatives.

Mr. Yawkey was the son of a Bay City (Mich.) man who had gone there from Vermont with his brother in the pioneer days, chopped wood for 50 cents a cord, and later bought up neighboring forests and mines. When at the age of 16 William H. Yawkey finished his final term at the Military Academy at Orchard Lake, his father took him aside and said:

"William, the Yawkeys have always been toilers. I think we ought to have one professional man in the family. You're my only son. So it's up to you. Choose your profession and make up your mind that you're going to be an uncommon success. I have planned to have you go to Yale University."

"But, dad," pleaded William, "I've decided to be a business man like you. I think I've gone to school long enough. I want to get out and do things. That's my idea of getting an education."

The boy won after he had agreed to go to business college and learn stenography and typewriting. Six months later his father hired him for $25 a month and his board. In the fall he was sent on a business trip to a lumber camp in the Northern woods. When he got back he asked to be transferred from the office to the bush. He was told that if he went to camp he would have to stay there until spring. That was just what he wanted to do.

Felling trees, hauling logs over acres of snow, rafting and racing them to the mill when the river rose with the spring floods, young Yawkey started friendships that lasted all his life. He also became adept at a specialty that was to come in handy later on. He could size up a few acres of timber and estimate how many feet of lumber the trees would make after coming through the mill. Sauntering through stretches of timber lands in Minnesota, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas in later years with a pad in one hand and a pencil in the other, he made computations that were different from those of other experts and that resulted in enormous additions to the Yawkey millions.

Meanwhile the senior Yawkey had acquired mining properties along the Messaba Range in Minnesota, in Colorado, Idaho, Washington and British Columbia. He hadn't yet given up the idea that his boy should have a college education. If the lumber camps didn't faze him, perhaps the mines would. The lad's idea of living was to do a man's work in the mines during the day and to study geology and mining engineering at night. It wasn't long before he was recognized as an expert mining engineer and one of the most practical in the country.

When he was 23 his father called him into the head office that had been moved from Bay City to Detroit, and said: "Well, William, if you won't take it easy, I guess the old man will. I've worked a long time and I'm tired. I'm going down to New York to live, and you can run the the mining and lumber business. I'll pay you $150 a month. That'll be all right, won't it?"

It was all right, of course. Before his father's death in 1903, the young manager's salary had been increased to $5000 a year, which was considerably less than many of his employes were getting.

The elder Yawkey had been a far-sighted financier in acquiring property. William H. Yawkey was a developer. When he took over the management of the estate his father advised him to go ahead and initiate ventures on his own account. From that time until his death, and especially in the last 10 years, he was kept busy getting richer and richer when he wasn't hunting or fishing or putting fortune in the path of someone else.

It was nothing unusual for one of his employes to be greeted thus when the boss came in: "Well, how are you holding them this morning? By the way, I made a good investment yesterday. That is, I think it's good. I'm carrying you for $1000."

If the investment was good the employe won. If it wasn't, he never heard any more about it.

Baseball was one of his hobbies. For seven years he was owner of the Detroit American League Baseball Club. In 1907, after the Tigers lost the series to the Chicago Cubs, he gave them an extra bonus of $15,000 for winning the American League pennant. But when Tyrus Cobb demanded a three-year contract with a clause that he be paid his salary, sick or well, Mr. Yawkey balked at the sick clause.

William H. Yawkey, who left approximately $50,000,000 at the age of 43.

Although he had been accused of being generous to a fault with his club, he wouldn't be bullied in baseball any more than he would allow a business competitor to bully him in a mining deal. Sometimes in the spring Mr. Yawkey would desert business and travel to Gulfport, Miss., to see the Tigers train.

One of Mr. Yawkey's first independent ventures was to examine titles and take leases on 50,000 acres of coal lands in West Virginia. He saw the possibilities of those oil fields, something that hadn't occurred to his father. He started developing on a capital of $5000, and worked up until he sold some of that property last year for $6,500,000.

When the oil business began to slump early in the war, Mr. Yawkey called the employes of the oil fields together and gave a plain talk to these hundreds of men. He explained that he could keep only a small number of them. These were selected. The others were told to go to the boss and name their own figures on how much money they needed for living expenses, according to the size of their families. The money would be paid regularly until business started up again. They were advised to take any temporary jobs they could find, and told that he expected them to come back at the first call. They came, of course, and the Yawkey oil fields were making a fortune while competitors in the business were getting their gangs organized.

"Mr. Yawkey believed in surrounding himself with brains and paying for them," said W. J. Clark of New York, who was one of his most intimate friends. "The managers of his various ventures were practically partners in the business. He considered it good business for himself to give them a big inducement to make good. In that way he helped quite a number of them to become millionaires. But whether he made them right or not, there was something in the man that insured their loyalty.

"One of the secrets of his success was to sell at a figure that allowed the purchaser to make a good profit. He never exerted himself to sell anything. The big fellows were always coming to him to buy. He has been known many times to drive a close bargain for the sport of the game and then give way generously at the end. He would sell anything he had for the right price except his Messaba Range property.

"He knew every mining field from Alaska to South America, and all the mining regions in Europe except Russia and Denmark. His pleasure trips through Australia and New Zealand consisted chiefly of trips from one mining district to another. Having lived in lumbermen's bunk houses and miners' shacks, he knew the men and the business from the ground up. That was why business never fretted him and why he was able to make a game of it and enjoy it almost as much as hunting or fishing. He knew the gold and silver deposits of Peru and the iron in Minnesota and everything in between."

From the beginning to the end of his business career Mr. Yawkey believed he had had the right education for his life work. Because he came across a lot of men who hadn't had the right training for the work they wanted to do, he became convinced that there was a gap in the school system into which someone ought to step, and he was in the midst of plans for nominating himself to that mission when death cut short his scheme.

His idea was to establish a trade and technical school for boys whose fathers didn't happen to have mines and timber lands scattered all over the map. He was a great believer in re-establishing craftsmanship, and he thought many men with potentialities for skilled workmanship were spoiled by being put into professions for which they had no talent.

"This boys' school idea had been the uppermost thing in Mr. Yawkey's mind for years," said Mr. Clark. "If the war hadn't come along the school would have been opened by this time. He spoke of it as a 'five or ten million dollar' proposition, and he wanted to make the endowment self-perpetuating, somewhat after the fashion of the Sailors' Snug Harbor, which is maintained by valuable Manhattan property. The school will be established by Mrs. Yawkey at the earliest possible date after the estate is settled.

"One of the reasons why he was so much interested in boys' education was because he never got over being a boy himself. Another reason was his adopted son and nephew, Thomas Austin Yawkey, to whom he left nearly half his fortune. When that lad was 12 years old he could pop off sparrows in the eye at 50 yards. He made a great hit with his uncle by being a good rifle shot and an allround outdoors boy. His foster-father believed in handling this holder of the third generation patronymic pretty much as he was handled when he was a boy, because that 'twenty million dollar boy' gets along on a spending allowance of $1 a week.

"Mr. Yawkey had the greatest faith in woman's intuition. He used to say that he didn't really begin increasing his fortune until after he was married, and that he rarely, if ever, put through a big business deal without consulting his wife. He would trust to what he called her feminine intuition and pass up advice from experienced business men, and he declared that her counsel was always worth following. Before he decided on his main philanthropy they investigated all sorts of charitable schemes together. The school idea was hers as well as his. They were agreed in the conviction that nothing else was more important to society than that boys be kept on the right educational track from about 12 to 20."

The Padlocked Book

"Go on, Andy!"

"Well, there's nothing sneaking about that girl. By and by she came right out and called my hand. I see she knew you'd been bluffing. But what got me was that you've been mighty frank and open with her, and she was hurt to think you'd ticketed her that way. She couldn't understand it. And I see, too, that she knew a whole lot that I didn't—just like you two had been working together.

"So it came to a showdown. She handed it to me straight, and I had to back into a siding and let her go by. When she said she was going out I let her go. I didn't follow her, either."

When Drake stood silent during another pause, the other added:

"If you're wondering why I didn't, I'll give you two good reasons why. You can trust her. That's one reason. Then, the other woman—Miss Foster—was acting kinda queer; I thought I owed my first attention to her. I had a hunch she'd try to follow her mistress; but that big racing machine Miss Druse drives left Fanny at the post, gnashing her teeth, tearing her hair and hissing: 'Coises! Foiled again!' That's just the way she looked. She's a nice, pleasant party! If it was her who stuck the peer, I'd be glad to know it."

"So," Drake commented, when the other was through, "Miss Druse and her brother kept a rendezvous away from the house." His intent regard shifted to Mockowitz, as if it were his place to supply the remainder of the report.

"He!" exclaimed the Pole. "Rendezvous!"

"Just a minute," Moorehouse broke in. "I want to tell you that Fanny showed me—— But listen. Miss Druse carried a traveling bag away with her. That bag seemed to hypnotize Fanny, for she kept her eyes glued to it till Miss Druse was gone. I was expecting her to run up and snatch it from her hand. Just as soon as the young lady drove away in the auto, Fanny slipped into Miss Elizabeth Druse's bedroom. She was mighty secret about it; but this old head was right on the job and followed her.

"Fanny went to the bed—it's been made up, you know, since the invalid disappeared—and lifted that lace-covered pasteboard pipe that the pillows set on and satisfied herself that something was inside of it. She was mighty relieved when she found it was. Before sneaking out again, she set things to rights, and I took a slant at what was in the bolster arrangement—what it was she feared the young lady had carried away in the bag."

Moskowitz feigned a sudden angry impatience. He shook a threatening finger under Moorehouse's nose.

"See here, you hop-head!" he muttered through clenched teeth. "Your pipe's out! Pass the layout and I'll relate my own dreams! What was in the bolster arrangement?"

Moorehouse's reply was directed at Drake.

"I thought you'd guess. I took it to be a book wrapped up in a newspaper and tied with twine."

Whatever the degree of Drake's satisfaction, no inkling of it was betrayed by his preoccupied air. He seemed intent upon a trivial performance of Lloyd's, who was idly tossing up some small bright object and catching it again, while he incuriously followed the talk.

"I'm glad you didn't disturb it," said Drake at last. "I have a hunch she never opened that package—got cold feet and put it back where she found it. It will be safe enough there."

"I hadn't a chance to grab it, anyhow," Moorehouse explained, "because the butler came into the room and fussed around, making a stall at cleaning up. I see he was watching me, and it was no use. I made sure, though, that he came out right after me."

Drake anxiously asked:

"He didn't see what you were doing, did he?"

Moorehouse grunted. "Huh! Not him. That old stiff is too scared to tumble to anything."

Lloyd abruptly made a final toss-up and catch of the bright object, and held the clenched fist inclosing it before one speculative squinting eye. Then he looked up quickly at Drake.

"There's something I want to get out of my system, then I must beat it," said he. He opened the clenched hand, and Drake and the others saw for the first time that the bright object was a silver key—small, ornamental, perhaps not practicable, but, nevertheless, a key.

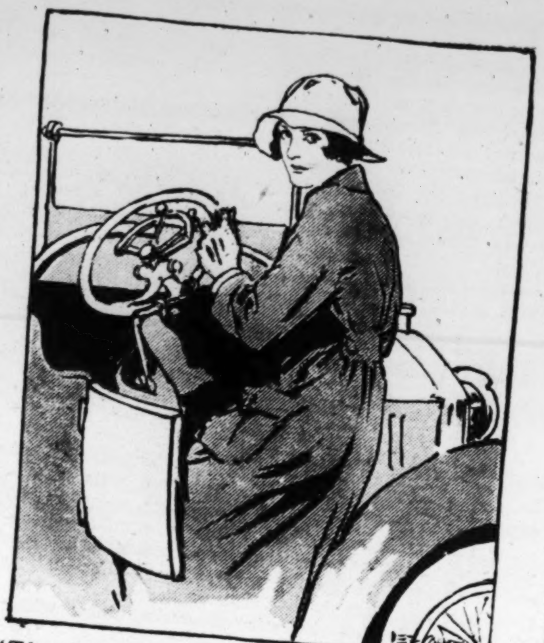
For no cause at all that he could at the moment define, a thrill shot through Drake at sight of it. The eyes of all the group were fixed upon the shiny little object nested in the palm of Lloyd's hand, and in a vague sort of fashion that none of them could account for it assumed a vast and significant importance.

"Where did that come from?" Drake suddenly asked.

Lloyd was surprised by the sharp tone. Said he:

"I had no idea the thing was of such consequence. I took it for granted you'd understand; the lady said you would."

Drake grasped the wrist of the hand and snatched up the key.



"That big racing machine Miss Druse drives left Fanny at the post."

"Lady!" he snapped, his expression harsh and stern. "Quick, tell me about it, Lloyd."

The man disengaged his wrist and gingerly felt of it.

"Why," he replied, "I went by the front office before coming over here. Just as I was leaving a lady came in and handed this key to the desk man telling him to give it to you. She was so open and matter-of-fact about it that we didn't think she meant anything particularly—just thought likely it was something you'd forgotten, and your landlady had brought it down to you."

"I haven't any landlady!" Drake growled.

"Well, you ought to have; she'd probably influence you to exercise a little more self-control"—still rubbing the wrist. "Shutters asked her what to tell you, and she said there was no message; just hand you the key, and you'd understand. Then she beat it."

For a long moment Drake stared at his colleague, then looked down blankly at the key, now in his own hand.

Was the thing symbolical, and he so dull that he could not understand?

There are keys and keys, all sorts of keys—keys to one's inner thoughts—keys to treasure vaults—keys to lock thieves out, and keys to lock them safely in—keys to riddles—a whole world of keys, in short. Ah, yes! And there were keys to padlocked books!

"Describe the woman," he demanded of Lloyd, who shrugged his shoulders and complied.

"She was a commonplace old body, 60 or thereabouts, fat, talkative and good-humored. She'd have given Shutters the history of her past life if he hadn't shooed her away."

This description did not fit in with the explanation in his mind; there was no place for such a woman; but no more was to be learned from Lloyd, and he directed his attention to Moskowitz.

The volatile little man did not strive for any dramatic effect, however; somehow the key episode would render any such attempt anticlimax.

Briefly, he had shadowed Chancellor Druse to a questionable hotel of the "family" variety in West Madison street, where, as if his coming had been expected, he was at once shown to a room. When Moskowitz revealed himself to the pasty-faced clerk, that individual did not dare refuse the detective's demand that he be shown to an adjoining room, one that afforded opportunities for spying upon his quarry.

The detective was obliged to wait for fully a half-hour, though, until the room in question could be cleared of certain tenants then occupying it, without creating any sort of disturbance or drawing attention to himself. Then he slipped in and saw some things through the keyhole of the connecting door, though he heard nothing more than a dull murmur of voices.

Chancellor and Jeanette Druse, he averred, were for more than an hour absorbed in a conversation that engrossed them utterly. Although the eavesdropper caught none of the words, nevertheless he was able to draw certain conclusions. From the behavior of the two, the keynote of their talk had been one of hopelessness and despair.

The conference ended abruptly when Chancellor tore himself away, white and desperate. The last Moskowitz saw of Jeanette before following the man, he declared, was when she flung herself upon the bed and gave way to a paroxysm of grief.

"Are you sure you recognized Miss Druse?" Drake asked, when the other was through.

"Why, sure. I've had a glimpse or two of her at the house, though I've never nad the opportunities you've had of photographing her on my mind."

Greatly perplexed, Drake had no time to question the Pole further. The doors to the Coroner's office were suddenly thrown open, and a red-faced, perspiring policeman emerged and excitedly called his name aloud.

"Here!" answered Drake, and he and his four colleagues pressed into the room, sensible of the fact that something extremely interesting must have occurred to creat the atmosphere of dynamic tension that swept outward through the open doors and inflamed curiosity to fever pitch.

CHAPTER XXIII.

FANNY TESTIFIES.

THE attention of everybody was riveted upon the group over by the Coroner's table, where were Farrell, from the State Attorney's office, Curtis himself, Inspector Callahan, a dazed and pale Chancellor Druse, his sister Jeanette, and, lastly, Fanny Foster, whose air was one of insolent triumph.

Jeanette watched her maid with an intent, steady, purposeful look that must have penetrated to and stirred some innate compunction in anybody less boldly malicious than the big, handsome woman. Callahan's brow was black with wrath, and he gnawed savagely at his scrub of mustache. The "jolt" apprehended by Drake obviously had been delivered, and the inspector's belligerent bearing bespoke how little it pleased him.

Callahan instantly caught Drake's eye and his right arm flew up in an imperative beckoning gesture. As soon as the young man could elbow his way to hearing, his chief harshly demanded:

"Why didn't you tell me about this woman? What you mean letting her spring a thing like this?"

Drake remembered that he had told his superior everything that he himself had learned about and from Fanny; but, naturally, Callahan had to vent his angry vexation and annoyance over the surprise with she had sprung—it patently was so at variance with the day's program. But the young man only inquired mildly:

"Like what?"

The prosecutor interrupted. He was a smallish, wiry young man, alert, sharp-eyed, keen of features and not one to be easily tipped from his balance.

"There's no use arguing about it, Mr. Inspector," he declared, in a tone of authority. "Miss Foster has come here with what impresses me as testimony very relevant to this examination, which she has volunteered to lay before the jury. Am I to understand that you want to suppress it?"

Callahan swore and fumed under his breath, but could not openly object.

"May I ask," interposed Drake, "what the nature of her testimony is?"

"You'll learn at once, if you don't already know," was Farrell's dry rejoinder. "You'd better sit here by me." Then raising his voice: "Miss Foster, be sworn, please."

Drake obediently sank into a chair beside Farrell. Callahan resumed his own seat and fixed a malevolent look upon Fanny, which did not in the least disconcert her.

With a polite "By your leave, Mr. Coroner," young Mr. Farrell himself decisively took charge of Fanny's examination. After the preliminary questions as to name, age, occupation and the like, he immediately went after the knowledge which she had so boastfully professed to Drake to possess. And when it fell upon the ears of the hushed audience it was startling enough.

"Now, please relate just what you know relative to Raymond Sears being at the Druse home on the afternooon and evening of June 6."

"Shall I tell about him telephoning?" the witness wanted to know.

"Certainly, if it is responsive to my question."

"Well, some time late in the afternoon, Ray got Miss Jeanette on the phone. Whatever it was he said, of course, I couldn't hear, but from what I heard her say I knew there was something he was simply wild to tell her and Miss Elizabeth, and he wanted to come out to the house to tell it—wouldn't mention it over the phone. She tried to persuade him not to come because of the way her father and mother felt toward him; but in the end it was understood that he was to come to the Druse garage, where Miss Jeanette promised to meet him."

"Did he come to the garage?"

"Yes, sir, at about 5 o'clock."

"You saw him, did you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did Miss Jeanette meet him at the garage, as agreed?"

"She did."

"Go on and tell what happened then."

"She let him into the house through the servants'

New Stories by Edna Ferber

NUMBER FOUR

THE ELDEST

THERE is no plot to this because there is no plot to Rose. There never was. There never will be. Compared to the drab montony of Rose's existence a desert waste is as thrilling as a five-reel film.

They had called her Rose, fatuously, as parents do their first-born girl. No doubt she had been normally pink and white and velvety. And now, an unwed woman, grown heavy about the hips and arms, as houseworking women do, though they eat but little, moving dully about the six-room flat on Sangamon street, Rose was as much a slave as any black wench of plantation days.

There was the treadmill of endless dishes, dirtied as fast as cleansed; there were bed, and beds, and beds; gravies and soups and stews. And always the querulous voice of the sick woman in the front bedroom demanding another hot water bag.

A spinster nearing 40, living thus, must have her memories—one precious memory, at least—or she dies. Rose had hers. She hugged it close. The L trains roared by, not 30 feet from her kitchen door. Alley and yard and street sent up their noises to her. The life of Chicago's millions yelped at her heels. On Rose's face was the vague, mute look of the woman whose days are spent indoors, at sordid tasks.

At 6:30 every night that look lifted for an hour. At 6:30 they came home—Floss and Al and Pa—their faces stamped with the marks that come from a day spent in shop and factory. They brought with them the crumbs and husks of the day's happenings, and these they flung carelessly before the life-starved Rose, and she ate them gratefully.

They came in with a rush, hungry, fagged, grimed, imperious, smelling of the city. There was a slamming of doors, a banking of drawers, a clatter of tongues, quarreling, laughter. A brief visit to the sick woman's room. The thin, complaining voice citing its tale of the day's discomfort and pain. Then supper.

"Guess who I waited on today!" Floss might demand.

Rose, dishing up, would pause, interested. "Who?"

"Gladys Moraine! I knew her the minute she came down the aisle. I saw her last year when she was playing in 'His Wives!' She's prettier off than on, I think. I waited on her, and the other girls were wild. She bought a dozen pairs of white kids, and made me give 'em to her huge, so she could shove her hands right into 'em, like a man does. Two sizes too big. All the swells wear 'em that way. And only one ring—an emerald the size of a dime."

Or, perhaps Al, the eel-like, would descend from his heights to mingle a brief moment in the family talk. Al clerked in the National Cigar Co.'s store at Clark and Madison. His was the wisdom of the snake, the weasel and the sphinx. A strangely silent young man, this Al, thin-lipped, smooth-cheeked, perfumed. Slim of waist, flat of hip, narrow of shoulder, his was the figure of the born foxtrotter. He walked lightly, on the balls of his feet, like an Indian, but without the Indian's dignity.

"Some excitement ourselves today, down at the store, believe me. The Old Man's son started in to learn the retail selling end of the business. Back of the showcase with the rest of us, waiting on trade, and looking like a Yale yell."

Pa would put down his paper to stare over his reading specs at Al.

"Mannheim's son! The president!"

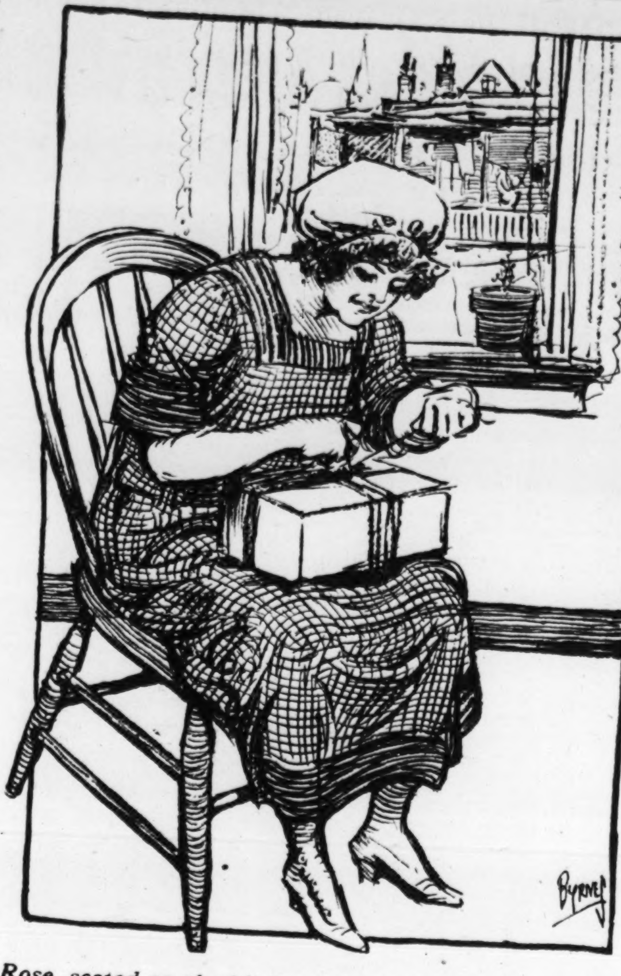
"Yep! And I guess he loves it, huh? The Old Man wants him to learn the business from the ground up. I'll bet he'll never get higher than the first floor. Today he went out to lunch at 1 and never shows up again till 4. Wears English collars and smokes a brand of cigarettes we don't carry."

Thus was the world brought to Rose. Her sallow cheeks would show a faint hint of color as she sipped her tea.

At 6:30 on a Monday morning in late April Rose smothered her alarm clock at the first warning snarl. She was wide awake at once, as are those whose yesterdays, todays and tomorrows are all alike.

Rose never opened her eyes to the dim, tantalizing, half-consciousness of a something delightful or a something harrowing in store for her that day. For one to whom the washwoman's Tuesday visitation is the event of the week, and in whose bosom the delivery boy's hoarse "Grocerees!" as he hurls soap and cabbage on the kitchen table, arouses a wild flurry, there can be very little thrill on awakening.

Rose slept on the davenport-couch in the sitting room. That fact in itself fixes her status in the family. This Monday morning she opened her eyes with what might be called a start, if Rose were any other sort of heroine. Something had happened, or was happening. It wasn't the 6 o'clock steam hissing in the radiator. She was accustomed to that. The rattle of the L trains and the milkman's artillery disturbed her as little as does the chirping of the birds the farmer's daughter. A sensation new, yet familiar; delicious, yet painful, held her. She groped to define it lying there. Her gaze, wandering over the expanse of gray woolen blanket, fixed upon a small black object trembling there. The knowledge that came to her then had come, many weeks before, in a hundred subtle, exquisite ways, to those who dwell in the open places. Rose's eyes narrowed craftily. Craftily, stealthily, she sat up, on hand raised. Her eyes, still fixed on the quivering spot, her hand descended, lightning-quick. But not quickly enough. The black spot vanished. It sped toward the open window. Through that window there came a balmy softness made up of Lake Michigan zephyr and stockyards smell and distant budding things. Rose had failed to swat the first fly of the season. Spring had come.



Byrnes

Rose, seated on the kitchen chair, untied the rude bit of string that bound the old candy box.

Rose was the household's obscure Aurora. Following the donning of her limp and obscure garments it was Rose's daily duty to tear the silent family from its slumbers. Ma was always awake, her sick eyes fixed hopefully on the door. For 14 years it had been the same.

"Sleeping?"

"Sleeping! I haven't closed an eye all night."

Rose had learned not to dispute that statement.

"It's spring out! I'm going to clean the closets and bureau drawers today. I'll have your coffee in a jiffy. Do you feel like getting up and sitting out on the back porch, toward noon, maybe?"

On her way kitchenward she stopped for a sharp tattoo on the door of the room in which Pa and Al slept. A sleepy grunt of remonstrance rewarded her. She came to Floss' door, turned the knob softly, peered in. Floss was sleeping as 20 sleeps, deeply, dreamlessly, one slim bare arm outflung, the lashes resting ever so lightly on the delicate curve of cheek.

"Floss! Floss, honey! Quarter to 7!" Floss stirred, moaned faintly, dropped into sleep again.

Fifteen minutes later, the table set, the coffee simmering, the morning paper brought from the back porch to Ma, Rose had heard none of the sounds that proclaimed the family astir—the banging of drawers, the rush of running water, the slap of slippered feet. A peep of inquiry into the depths of the coffee pot, the gas turned to a circle of blue beads, and she was down the hall to sound the second alarm.

"Floss, you know if Al once gets into the bathroom!" Floss sat up in bed, her eyes still closed. She made little clucking sounds with her tongue and lips, as a baby does when it wakes. Drugged with sleep, hair tousled, muscles sagging, at 7 o'clock in the morning, the most trying hour in the day for a woman, Floss was still triumphantly pretty.

She had on one of those pink muslin nightgowns, artfully designed to look like crepe de chine. You've seen them rosily displayed in the cheaper shop windows, marked 98 cents, and you may have wondered who might buy them, forgetting that there is an imitation mind for every imitation article in the world.

Rose stopped, picked up a pair of silk stockings from the floor and ran an investigating hand through to heel and toe. She plucked a soiled silk blouse off the back of a chair, eyed it critically and tucked it under her arm with the stockings.

"Did you have a good time last night?"

"Oh, Lord, I don't know! I guess so!" snapped Floss. Temperamentally, Floss was not at her best at 7 o'clock on Monday morning. Rose did not pursue the subject. She tried another tack.

"It's as mild as summer out. I see the Werners and the Burkes are housecleaning. I thought I'd start today with the closets, and the bureau drawers. You could wear your blue this morning, if it was pressed."

Floss yawned, disinterestedly, and folded her kimono about her.

"Go as far as you like. Only don't put things back in my closet so's I can't ever find 'em again. I wish you'd press that blue skirt. And wash out the georgette crepe waist. I might need it."

The blouse, the skirt and stockings under her arm, Rose went back to the kitchen to prepare her mother's breakfast tray. Wafted back to her came the acrid odor of Pa's matutinal pipe, and the accustomed bickering between Al and Floss over the possession of the bathroom.

"What do you think this is, anyway? A Turkish bath?"

"Shave in your own room."

Between Floss and Al there existed a feud that lifted only when a third member of the family turned against either of them. Immediately they about-faced and stood united against the offender.

Pa was the first to demand breakfast, as always. Very neat was Pa, and fussy, and strangely young looking to be the husband of the gray-haired, parchment-skinned woman who lay in the front bedroom. Pa had tow manias—the movies and a passion for purchasing new and complicated household utensils—cream whippers, egg beaters, window clamps, lemon squeezers, silver polishers. He haunted department store basements in search of them.

He opened his paper now and glanced at the headlines and at the Monday morning ads. "I see the Fair's got a spring housecleaning sale. They advertise a new kind of extension curtain rod. And Scouro, three cakes for a dime."

"If you waste one cent more on truck like that," Rose protested, placing his breakfast before him, "when half the time I can't make the housekeeping money last through the week."

"Your ma did it."

"Fourteen years ago liver wasn't 32 cents a pound," retorted Rose, "and besides"——

"Scramble 'em!" yelled Al, from the bedroom, by way of warning.

There was very little talk after that. The energies of the three of them were directed toward reaching the waiting desk or counter on time. The energy of one toward making that accomplishment easy. The front door slammed once—that was Pa, on his way; slammed again—Al. Floss rushed into the dining room fastening the waistband of her skirt, her hat already on. Her blouse was of the sheerest. Her hair shone in waves about her delicate cheeks. She ate her orange and sipped her very special coffee and made a little face over her egg that had been shirred in the oven offered some comment, which won a smile or whispered response from the other; but for the most part they sat silent, calmly taking in the unfamiliar scene before them.

By and by Coroner Curtis entered with a direct, businesslike air that arrested everybody's attention. He saw that the jury were all in place, then seated himself at a broad, flat-topped desk and rapped upon it for order. Inspector Callahan followed him from the anteroom and took a chair at one side and a bit to the rear of the Coroner.

The inspector was the first witness. With the matter-of-fact, crisp utterance of one to whom the experience was an old story, he established the fact that Lord Frederick Demar had been slain under conditions which pointed unmistakably to murder. To the spectators he was the model, capable policeman, wholly unprejudiced, whose sole aim was to see that the ends of justice were conscientiously served.

Drake, for one, was skeptical of the motives governing the big man in the witness chair. He slid unobtrusively into a seat that placed the Druses in front of him, and his attention was divided between watching them and his superior. He was not in the least misled by the inspector's bluff, straightforward manner.

"Was there anything to indicate how and by whom Lord Demar was slain?" queried the Coroner.

"There was," came Callahan's blunt reply. "He was stabbed in the throat with a knife. This here's the knife"—holding it up so that all might see. "It belonged to one Raymond Sears, who, up to three days prior to the killing, was a chauffeur in the employ of Mr. Marshall Druse. Sears was hiding in a near-by room at the time, without the knowledge of Mr. Druse and other members of the family or the servants. He had no legitimate business there, so far as we have found out. And, lastly, he's disappeared—made a clean getaway—and the department so far has been unable to locate him."

As Callahan began speaking, Jeanette leaned forward, her level gaze riveted upon his heavy, fat face. When he finished, she breathed a little sigh and leaned back again, and a faint, enigmatical smile played about the corners of her mouth. All this Drake observed. Thereafter, he also noticed, she manifested only a lukewarm interest in the inspector's testimony.

Callahan more definitely identified the battered old stag-handled knife, with its nickel blade and ominous dark stains, and described the circumstances under which it and the body had been found by him, Drake and Moorehouse. After he was through, he resumed his former seat, where he could confer with Curtis.

Dr. Frye, the Coroner's physician, took the oath. He merely detailed the manner of death, and approximately fixed the time that the fatal wound had been inflicted—about 8 o'clock. Dr. Frank Lovinger, the Druse family physician, confirmed this opinion. Interest in his testimony was enhanced by the fact that he was at the slain man's side within 10 or 15 minutes after life was extinct.

After Dr. Lovinger was excused, Callahan and Curtis whispered together for several seconds; then followed a craning of necks when Curtis turned again to his desk and called the name of the next witness:

"Chancellor Druse."

Young Druse started as from the shock of a dash of ice water, but recovered himself and walked doggedly to the chair. After he was sworn, surprise and relief followed one another in his thin, pale countenance as it gradually dawned upon him that he was not to be put through the unmerciful grilling that he had looked forward to and shrunk from.

First, he detailed the circumstances under which Demar became a guest in the Druse home, and then told of the finding of the body, recounting all the grewsome details that are now familiar.

Next the Coroner asked him:

"Do you know whether or not Raymond Sears was in one or another of the rooms adjacent to Miss Jeanett Druse's bedroom?"

"No, I do not."

"Did you know of the telephone that Sears was installing to connect the apartments of both your sisters?"

"At the time I did not."

"Was Peter Burritt continuously in your presence until you and he ran from the maids' room into the bedroom?"

"He was."

"But Effie Tritt was not?"

"No. A few seconds before the alarm she left the maids' room and went into my sister Elizabeth's bedroom."

"And when did you next see her?"

"When Burritt and I burst into Jeanette's bedroom. She opened the bathroom door and saw what had happened simultaneously with Burritt and me."

Another whispered consultation, in which the prosecutor from the State Attorney's office participated, and Curtis announced:

"That's all, Mr. Druse."

Fergus Drake failed to witness the tremendous sigh of relief with which Chancellor rose up and limply returned to his former seat, because his attention had been attracted to the double door which allowed access to the outside corridor.

The diversion was created by a woman who had entered and was earnestly whispering to the policeman stationed there. Drake noted that the officer listened to what she was saying with the air of lofty superiority that stamps the veteran and hardened "flatfoot," who presently interrupted her and pointed out the prosecutor, as if passing her and her errand on to one exercising a higher authority than his. The woman turned to look in the direction indicated by the leveled finger, and Drake recognized Fanny Foster.

But Drake could not foresee, of course, that no one present more than himself—unless it should be Jeanette—was also to be afforded a surprise that was weighted with far-reaching consequences.

Coroner Curtis called aloud the name of another witness:

"Jeanette Druse!"

As she gracefully moved to the chair to be sworn, Fanny, who was elbowing a way toward the prosecutor, bent upon the accomplishment of her errand, halted to fix upon Jeanette a smoldering look of hatred, whose fierce intensity rendered all the hate he had ever encountered feeble and inert and of little consequence.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE SILVER KEY.

INTEREST in the proceedings for Fergus Drake was now centered, not in what was going on so conspicuously before the eyes of everybody, the uninspiring formalities of legal inquiry, but in the irregular undercurrents that were beginning to surge to the surface, whose significance he alone understood.

Of such was Fanny Foster's unheralded arrival upon the scene. Likewise the appearance of Andy Moorehouse, who followed her so closely as to suggest that she had not once been out of his sight since leaving the Druse mansion—which was, indeed, the truth. When he thrust his head in at the double-entrance doors he was not long in catching Drake's eye, whom he beckoned with a slight but decisive jerk of his gray head. The head instantly was withdrawn, and the door closed, as though he were sure that Drake would not keep him waiting.

So it chanced that Drake did not see the outcome of Fanny's meeting with the prosecutor, whose attention she had now gained, nor was he able to watch Jeanette in order to fathom the look of startled amazement with which she became aware of the maid's purposeful presence. For he did promptly make his way into the marble corridor, where he found not only Moorehouse, but Lloyd and Francks and Moskowitz, all fellow detectives from the bureau, who had been doing sentry duty at the Druse place.

Drake bluntly demanded: "What's up?"

It was Moorehouse who replied:

"The scene of operations has been shifted, as the old man would say, from Lakeside to friend Curtis' bailiwick. We've been brought in, and I don't think we're slated to go back. Old man's orders. The bunch we've been watching are all in there, anyhow," with a nod toward the double doors.

The familiar ruminative look was in Moorehouse's habitually squinting eyes, and Drake waited. Presently the older man went on:

"Mosky and I both have something to tell you; but as he wants time to work up a fine dramatic effect, I'll shoot my wad first. I told you yesterday I was a bum actor—it was either that, or else Miss Druse is too foxy for us."

"What happened?

Moskowitz, his bright black eyes snapping, broke in before Moorehouse could frame a reply.

"She kept a date!" he whispered, with an exaggerated air of mystery. "With a man! I spotted 'em—me! After she'd given old Andy the slip, too."

He laughed in high good humor at what he seemed to look upon as his colleague's discomfiture. But Moorehouse was unmoved. He continued in the same voice:

"Mosky was shadowing young Druse; that's how he come to see Miss Jeanette. And she didn't give me the slip, either; I let her go."

Drake drew a long breath and glanced from one to the other; from Moorehouse's stolid, impassive visage, with its narrowed eye glinting amid a network of fine wrinkles, to the swarthy, animated countenance of the little Pole.

Moorehouse resumed:

"You hadn't been gone long yesterday until the postman came. He left some letters. It was the young lady who got them from the table in the hall. She ran through them, taking her time to it, till all at once she came upon an envelope that made her jump as though it was a live wire. At the same time she shot a frightened glance at me, then caught herself and stood biting her lips, as though put out by giving herself away like that. She lamped each of the envelopes, slow and deliberate, while I sat wondering what she was going to do with them—carry them all away with her or put them back unopened on the table.

"Say!" burst admiringly from the speaker. "She's one pippin', Drake. When she'd seen 'em all, she turned and stared coolly at me while she picked out the one that had given her such a start and tucked it in the front of her dress. She threw the others back onto the table and started slowly up the stairs. She give her chin a little toss, as much as to say: 'What you going to do about it?'

"'Who—me?' says I to myself. 'Why, nothing!' I says. Her back was to me, and I give her the regulation salute with my good right hand. What did she do but turn and catch me right in the middle of it. Believe me, it made me feel foolish! Then, what you think? She grinned, as pleased as any kid, and drew herself up stiff and returned it. Yes, sir, she did! Then she wheeled round and ran the rest of the way up."

"And you didn't find out anything about the letter?" Drake asked reproachfully.

"No chance. Things began to happen, though. Her brother had already beat it—sneaked out, thinking nobody was wise to it. But Mosky slid along after him, all right."

"Me!" contributed that light-hearted individual, tapping his chest. "Nobody can put it over on this sleuth!"

"After half an hour or so," pursued Moorehouse, deaf to interruption, "Miss Druse came down again. She'd changed her dress; had on a natty street uniform that made me wonder if she was going to try to sneak out, too. She wasn't grinning, either, now. She sized me up like I was a new auto she was figuring on buying."

When Moorehouse lapsed into silence Drake jogged him.

When Sears met Miss Druse in the garage, he was carrying his folding kit—it was only a pretext.

or in some way highly specialized. Then the front door slammed again—a semi-slam, this time. Floss never did quite close a door. Rose followed her down the hall, shut and bolted it, Chicago fashion. The sick woman in the front bedroom had dropped into one of her fitful morning dozes. At 8 o'clock the little flat was very still.

If you knew nothing about Rose; if you had not already been told that she slept on the sitting-room davenport; that she was taken for granted as the family drudge; that she was, in that household, merely an intelligent machine that made beds, fried eggs, filled hot water bags, you would get a characterization of her from this: She was the sort of person who never has a closet or bureau drawer all her own. Her few and negligible garments hung apologetically in obscure corners of closets dedicated to her sister's wardrobe of her brother's or her spruce and fussy old father's. Vague personal belongings, such as combings, handkerchiefs, a spectacle case, a hairbrush, were found tucked away in a desk pigeon hole, a table drawer or on the top shelf in the bathroom.

As Rose pulled the disfiguring blue gingham dust cap over her hair now, and rolled her sleeves to her elbows, you would never have dreamed that she was embarking upon her great adventure. You would never have guessed that the semi-yearly closet cleaning was to give to Rose a thrill as delicious as it was exquisitely painful. But Rose knew. And so she teased herself, and tried not to think of the pasteboard box on the shelf in the hall closet, under the pile of reserve blankets, and told herself that she would leave that closet until the last, when she would have to hurry over it.

When you clean closets and bureau drawers thoroughly, you have to carry things out to the back porch and flap them. Rose was that sort of a housekeeper. She leaned over the porch railing and flapped things, so the dust motes spun and whirled in the sunshine. Rose's arms worked up and down energetically, then less energetically, finally ceased their motion altogether. She leaned idle elbows on the porch and gazed down into the yard below with a look in her eyes such as no squalid Chicago backyard, with its dusty debris, could summon, even in springtime.

From far down the alley sounded a chant, drawing nearer and nearer, until there shambled into view a decrepit horse drawing a dilapidated huckster's cart. Perched on the seat was a Greek, who turned his dusky face up toward the two women leaning over the porch railing. "Rhubarb, leddy? Fresh rhubarb!"

"My folks don't care for rhubarb sauce," Rose told the woman next door out on the porch.

"It makes the worst pie in the world," the woman confided to Rose.

Whereupon each bought a bunch of the succulent green and red stalks. It was their offering at the season's shrine.

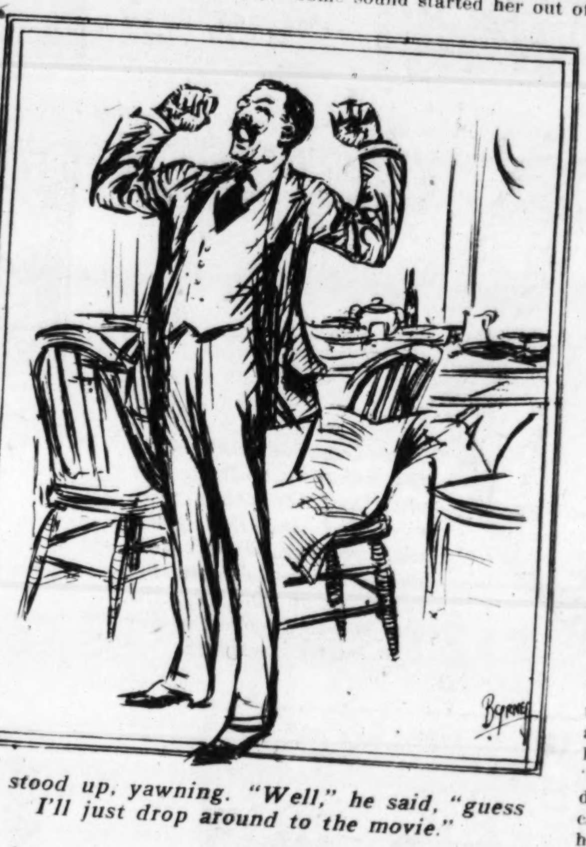
Rose flung the rhubarb on the kitchen table, pulled her dust cap more firmly about her ears and hurried back to the disorder of Floss' dim little bedroom.

After that it was dust cloth and soap and suds and scrub brush in a race against recurrent water bags, insistent doorbells and the inevitable dinner hour. It was midafternoon when Rose, standing a-tiptoe on a chair, came at last to the little box on the top shelf under the bedding in the hall closet. Her hand touched the box and closed about it. A little electric thrill vibrated through her body. She stepped down from the chair heavily, listened until her acute ear caught the sound of the sick woman's slumberous breathing; then, box in hand, walked down the dark hall to the kitchen. The rhubarb pie, still steaming in its pan, was cooling on the kitchen table. The dishes from the invalid's lunch tray littered the sink. But Rose, seated on the kitchen chair, her rumpled dust cap pushed back from her flushed, perspiring face, untied the rude bit of string that bound the old candy box, removed the lid, slowly, and by that act was wafted magically out of the world of rhubarb pies and kitchen chairs, and dirty dishes, into that place whose air is the breath of incense and myrrh, whose paths are rose-strewn, whose dwellings are temples dedicated to but one small god. The land known as Love, and Rose traveled back to it on the magic rug of memory.

A family of five in a six-room Chicago flat must sacrifice sentiment to necessity. There is precious little space for those pressed flowers, time-yellowed gowns and ribbon-bound packets that figured so prominently in the days of attics. Into the garbage can with yesterday's roses! The janitor's burlap sack yawns for this morning's mail; last year's gown has long ago met its end at the hands of the ol'-clo'es man or the washwoman's daughter. That they had survived these 14 years and the stricture of their owner's dwelling, tells more about this boxful of letters than could be conveyed by a battalion of adjectives.

Rose began at the top of the pile, in her orderly fashion, and read straight through to the last. It took one hour. Half of that time she was not reading. She was staring straight ahead with what is mistakenly called an unseeing look, but which actually pierces the veil of years and beholds things far, far beyond the vision of the actual eye. They were the letters of a commonplace man to a commonplace woman, written when they loved each other, and so they were touched with something of the divine. They must have been, else how could they have sustained this woman through 15 years of drudgery?

The story? Well, there really isn't any, as we've warned you. Rose had been pretty then in much the same delicate way that Floss was pretty now. They were to have been married. Rose's mother fell ill. Floss and Al were little more than babies. The marriage was put off. The illness lasted six months—a year—two years—became interminable. The breach into which Rose had stepped closed about her and became a prison. The man had waited, had grown impatient, finally rebelled. He had fled, probably to marry a less encumbered lady. Rose had gone dully on, caring for the household, the children, the sick woman. In the years that had gone by since then Rose had forgiven him his faithlessness. She only recalled the wonder of having been first in someone's thoughts—she who now was so hopelessly, so irrevocably last. These letters were her ballast, her refuge, the leavening yeast in the soggy dough of her existence. This man had wanted her to be his wife. She had found favor in his eyes. She was certain that he still thought of her, sometimes, and tenderly, regretfully, as she thought of him. It helped her to live. Not only that, it made living possible.



Pa stood up, yawning. "Well," he said, "guess I'll just drop around to the movie."

A clock struck, a window slammed, or a street noise smote her ear sharply. Some sound started her out of her reverie. Rose jumped, stared a moment at the letters in her lap, then hastily, almost shamefacedly sorted them (she knew each envelope by heart) tied them, placed them in their box and bore them down the hall. There, mounting her chair, she scrubbed the top shelf with her soapy rag, placed the box in its corner, left the hall closet smelling of cleanliness, with never a hint of lavender to betray its secret treasure.

Were Rose to die and go to heaven, there to spend her days thumbing a golden harp, her hands, by force of habit, would drop harp strings at 5:45, to begin laying a celestial and unspotted tablecloth for supper. Habits as deeply rooted as that must hold, even in after life.

* * * * * * * *

Tonight's 6:30 stampede was noticeably subdued on the part of Pa and Al. It had been a day of sudden and enervating heat, and the city had done its worst to them. Pa's pink gills showed a hint of purple. Al's flimsy silk shirt stuck to his back, and his glittering pompadour was many degrees less submissive than was its wont. But Floss came in late, breathless and radiant, a large and significant paper bag in her hand. Rose, in the kitchen, was transferring the smoking supper from pot to platter. Pa, in the doorway of the sick woman's little room, had just put his 14-year-old question with his usual assumption of heartiness and cheer: "Well, well! And how's the old girl tonight? Feel like you could get up and punish a little supper, eh?" Al engaged at the telephone with some one whom he addressed proprietarily as Kid, was deep in his plans for the evening's diversion. Upon this accustomed scene Floss burst with havoc.

"Rose! Rose! Did you iron my georgette crepe? Listen! Guess what!" All this as she was rushing down the hall, paper hatbox still in hand. "Guess who was in the store today!"

Rose, at the oven, turned a flushed and interested face toward Floss.

"Who? What's that? A hat?"

Floss whipped it out of its bag, defiantly. "There! But wait a minute! Let me tell you"——

"How much?"

Floss hesitated just a second. Her wage was $9 a week. Then: "Seven-fifty, trimmed." The hat was one of those tiny, head-hugging absurdities that only the Flossies can wear.

Rose, thin-lipped with disapproval, turned to her stove again.

"Well, but I had to have it. I'm going to the theater tonight. And guess who with! Henry Selz!"

Henry Selz was the unromantic name of the commonplace man over whose 15-year-old letters Rose had glowed and dreamed an hour before. It was a name that had become mythical in that household to all but one. Rose heard it spoken now with a sense of unreality. She smiled a little uncertainly, and went on stirring the flour thickening for the gravy.

"What's the joke?" she said.

"Joke nothing! Honest to God! I was standing back of the counter at about 10. The rush hadn't really begun yet. Glove trade usually starts late. I was standing there kidding Herb, the stock boy, when down the aisle comes a man in a big hat, like you see in the Western pictures, hair a little gray at the temples and everything, just like a movie actor. I said to Herb, 'Is it real?' I hadn't got the words out of my mouth when the fellow sees me, stands stock still in the middle of the aisle with his mouth wide open and his eyes sticking out. 'Register surprise,' I said to Herb, and looked around for the camera. And that minute he took two jumps over to where I was standing, grabbed my hands and says, 'Rose! Rose!' kind of choky. 'Not by about 20 years,' I said. 'I'm Floss, Rose's sister. Let go my hands!'"

Rose—a transfigured Rose, glowing, trembling, radiant—repeated vibrantly, "You said, 'I'm Floss, Rose's sister. Let go my hands!' And"——

"He looked kind of stunned, for just a minute. His face was a scream, honestly. Then he said: 'But of course. Fifteen years. But I had always thought of her as just the same.' And he kind of laughed, ashamed, like a kid. And the whitest teeth!"

"Yes, they were—white," said Rose. "Well."

"Well, I said, 'Won't I do instead?' 'You bet you'll do!' he said. And then he told me his name, and how he was living out in Spokane, and his wife was dead, and he had made a lot of money—fruit, or real estate, or something. He talked a lot about it at lunch, but I didn't pay any attention, as long as he really has it, a lot I care how"——

"At lunch?"

"Everything, from grapefruit to coffee. I didn't know it could be done in one hour. Believe me, he had those waiters jumping. It takes money. He asked all about you, and ma, and everything. And he kept looking at me and saying, 'It's wonderful!' I said 'Isn't it!' but meant the lunch. He wanted me to go driving this afternoon—auto and everything. Kept calling me Rose. It made me kind of mad, and I told him how you look. He said, 'I suppose so,' and asked me to go to a show tonight. Listen, did you press my georgette? And the blue?"

"I'll iron the waist while you're eating. I'm not hungry. It only takes a minute. Did you say he was gray?"

"Gray? Oh, you mean—why, just here and there. Interesting, but not a bit old. I don't want any supper. Just a cup of tea. I haven't got enough time to dress in, decently, as it is."

Al, draped in the doorway, removed his cigarette to give greater force to his speech. "Your story interests me strangely, little gell. But there's a couple of other people that would like to eat, even if you wouldn't. Come on with that supper, Ro. Nobody staked me to a lunch today."

Rose turned to her stove again. Two carmine spots had leaped suddenly to her cheeks. She served the meal in silence. She saw that Al and her father were served. Then she went back to the kitchen, and the thud of her iron was heard as she deftly fluted the ruffles of the crepe blouse. Floss appeared when the meal was half eaten, her hair shiningly coiffed, the pink ribbons of her corset cover showing under her thin kimono. She poured herself a cup of tea and drank it in little quick, nervous gulps. Al, glancing expertly at the ingeniousness of her artfully simple coiffure, the slim limpness of her body, her wide-eyed gaze, laughed a wise little laugh.

"Every move a Pickford. And so girlish withal."

The PADLOCKED BOOK

A Modern Mystery-Detective Story

BY CHARLES EDMONDS WALK

Illustrated by LEE CONREY

THE STORY FROM THE START.

At the luxurious Druse home, Lord Frederick Demar, fiance of the younger daughter, Jeanette, has been mysteriously murdered—stabbed by an unknown assassin, whom nobody will admit having seen or suspected. Inspector Callahan and Fergus Drake, the police detectives, learn that Chancellor Druse, Jeanette's brother, had accused Lord Demar of having wronged a young English girl, Effie Tritt, niece of the butler, Burritt, and now employed as companion to Elizabeth Druse, the elder daughter of the house, a bedfast invalid, who for years past has never been seen outside her apartment.

While Drake is investigating a clew that points to a discharged chauffeur named Raymond Sears, the startling announcement is made that Eliazbeth has unaccountably disappeared. The supposed helpless invalid has gone or been spirited away, taking with her a private diary which she had kept in a silver-bound book, fastened with a padlock.

The interest in the search for Elizabeth is in a way to overshadow that in the murder of Lord Demar.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE ADJOURNED INQUEST.

INSPECTOR CALLAHAN cocked a bushy eyebrow at Drake when the latter entered his chief's busy office at the Detective Bureau, and sank wearily into a chair away from the noisy, talkative group around the desk. An ironic grin played momentarily beneath the inspector's bristly grizzled mustache, which was quickly repressed and followed by a baleful stare.

"Don't go 'way, Drake," he gruffly ordered. "I want you in a minute."

The talk was all of Elizabeth Druse, and Drake hearkened indifferently to what he succinctly designated as the "rag chewing," and realized with a grim humor that the search, despite the potent incentive of $10,000 reward, was thus far utterly barren of results.

The hubbub Callahan shortly silenced; he issued a few curt orders and dismissed his subordinates from the room until he and Drake were alone together.

Callahan picked up a newspaper from his desk, scowled at it, then tossed it angrily aside.

"Drake," he stormed, "the inquest can't be put off any longer. The newspapers are prodding us now, and we gotta make a showing. It's the fourth day, now, since that lord guy was bumped off. You've had plenty of time to clean up all the side issues and be able to account for everything. It's a plain case, and we'll show these wise newspaper reporters that we're not so slow."

Drake permitted his surprise to manifest itself in a look.

Callahan continued: "There never was any doubt from the beginning about it being an inside job, was there?"

"Nope. And we know that one of five—or, say, four persons pulled it."

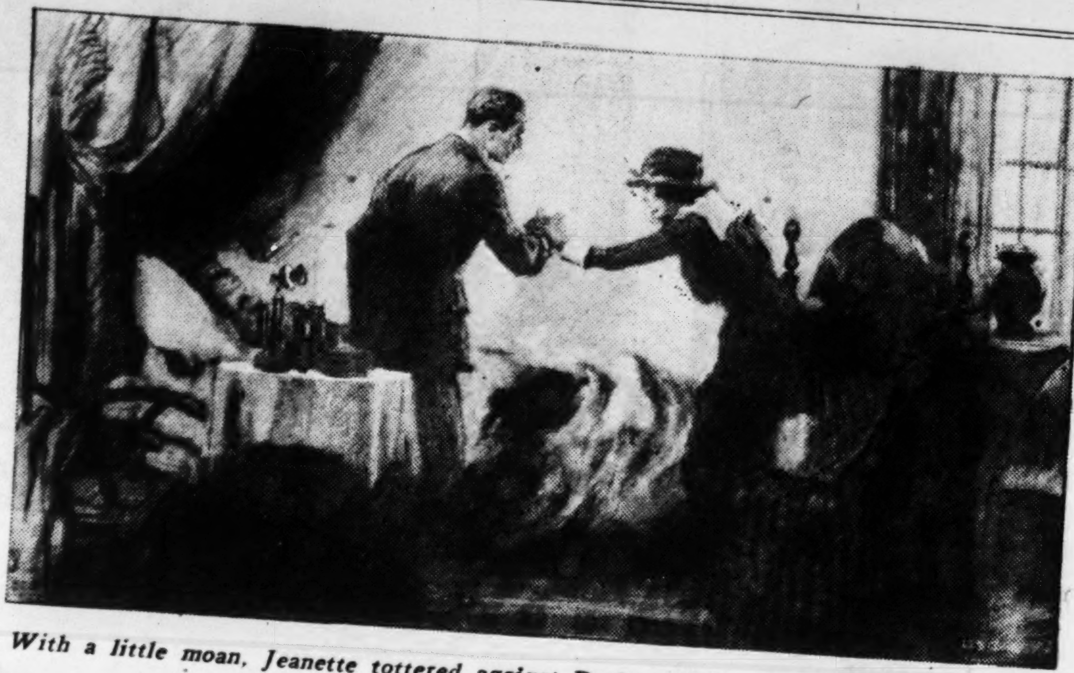
"Well, you've safely cleared the little lady and her brother—and mebbe the butler, Burritt, too. So either this here Sears or the Tritt girl's the one we want."

Drake's surprise now manifested itself in speech. "Just how do you figure that I've cleared Chancellor Druse and Burritt? As a matter of fact, their position is more doubtful than it's been any time yet. Before I left the house yesterday I started a little scheme that I'm expecting to produce results. It's going to make either or both of those fellows open up —perhaps force a confession."

The inspector gave him a look that was hard to decipher, and his heavy features hardened. Drake fancied that his chief somehow was not entirely pleased by the notion.

"Don't cloud the issue again," Callahan grumblingly admonished, "just as it's getting clear. The evidence will send Sears to the chair once we get him. Sears—he's our man." Then, with studied unconcern: "What's this little scheme of yours?"

"Young Druse and Burritt are right on the point of breaking under the strain; they can't stand the gaff much longer. Chancellor has been worrying himself sick ever since I restricted Miss Jeanette's freedom, and the butler is just as worried over his pretty niece's predicament. Yesterday I put the screws on a bit harder. They'll come through when Curtis gets them up in front of him."



With a little moan, Jeanette tottered against Drake, clawing at his arm for support.

With a frowning brow Callahan digested this information.

"Well," he said at last, "all the more reason why Curtis should get busy. I can't keep a bunch of cops roosting in the Druse home forever; I want to get 'em away from there."

This was reasonable enough; but still Drake wondered. It seemed strange that just as he was becoming doubtful respecting the culpability of Sears, his chief should acquire such a positive conviction of his guilt. And yet he was bound to admit that the logic of the facts abundantly warranted Callahan's stand.

Then why was he himself uncertain, irresolute, unable to cling to his own convictions? Had Jeanette's personality and beauty and charm so impressed themselves and worked upon him that he could no longer contemplate the facts as they were, or reason from them without bias?

The inspector's harsh voice broke into his cogitations.

"You want to get away from that confession notion, Drake. If those guys should come through, it would be a stall. They want to protect the girls. They see 'em in a hole and want to pull 'em out. Of course, they're worried."

All at once Drake saw a light. There flashed back to him the last meeting with Marshall Druse in the vestibule, and that gentleman's assured manner, and he suddenly asked:

"Seen Marshall Druse lately?"

The inspector's shrewd gray eyes fastened a veiled, guarded look upon him from beneath their thatch of brows.

"Why?" he bluntly countered.

Drake's manner bespoke complete indifference. He said: "I just wondered."

Callahan let him continue to wonder, for he did not enlighten him.

But his chief's reticence was eloquent to the young man. He now understood Mr. Druse's mien of aggressive confidence, in sharp contrast with his previous despondency; and saw clearly why Callahan was determined upon making Sears the goat—the man of wealth had "got to" the inspector.

Drake was eminently well pleased with the turn of affairs. He knew now that the light that lay in a pair of bright eyes was not blinding his reasoning faculties; that a woman's charm and beauty were not molding his will to conform to hers. Callahan, his vision clouded by the $10,000 reward, was not hunting the murderer of Lord Frederick Demar. Old Druse's money looked as good to Drake as it did to Callahan or anybody else, but he was just zealous enough in the pursuit of his calling not to be turned aside by any monetary bribe. Successful accomplishment was the highest reward he wanted to earn.

At this stage, if he could but have foreseen it, Inspector Callahan was blindly blundering in the direction of the same astounding goal toward which he was so laboriously but surely picking his own way. He was standing upon the threshold of discovery; only a word was necessary to open the door and enable him to step across.

No mention of the Demar inquest has been made heretofore, because the initial proceedings were of no consequence to this narrative. Coroner Curtis impanelled a jury, took them to the scene of the crime, afforded them a view of the body and the weapon, and then an adjournment was taken until a later day, in order that the police might have an opportunity to resolve something definite out of the chaos of suspicion that seemed to cry aloud that so many different individuals were guilty.

Now that the press was beginning to indulge in biting comments on police methods and inefficiency, as applied to "The Lakeside Mystery," Callahan believed that it was high time to show his hand. He grinned with smug complacency as he reflected that conditions could not possibly be more favorable to suit his purposes. Whether Sears were guilty or innocent, no one could gainsay a circumstance that stood out unmistakably—the investigation had more seriously implicated Sears than anybody else. And if the fellow were innocent, it was sheer luck that synchronized his presence with the murder amid circumstances so equivocal and suspicious that Jeanette and Chancellor Druse might be easily freed from the coil which otherwise must have closed inevitably about them.

So the adjourned session of the inquest, as soon as Inspector Callahan could get in touch with Coroner Curtis, was set for this same afternoon, for the purpose of hearing the testimony of the witnesses, who were summoned to appear at the Coroner's roomy offices in the county building.

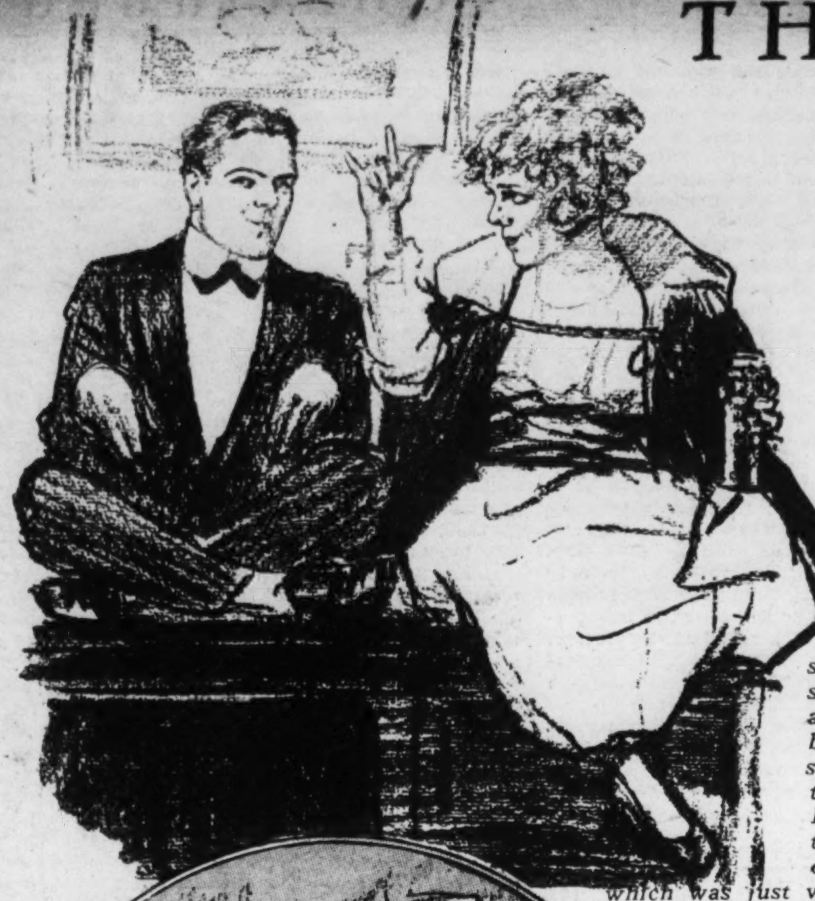
An air of nervous tension was noticeable in the large room where the proceedings were about to be opened. Officers of the law, the representative from the State Attorney's office, attaches of the Coroner's office, curious individuals attached to other departments of the county who dropped in and out again, reporters and newspaper artists.

Chancellor Druse and Peter Burritt unmistakably were on edge. The younger man shrank whenever he caught one or another of the curious furtive glances that constantly were being directed at him. Effie Tritt, her lovely, flowerlike face still colorless and drawn, her beautiful blue eyes wide with anxiety and startled awe, clung to her harassed uncle, as if he were a tower of strength instead of a distressed old man trembling under a load of anxiety. She was so fragile in appearance, so shrinking and fearful, that the eyes turned toward her discerned only a spectacle that moved their owners to pity.

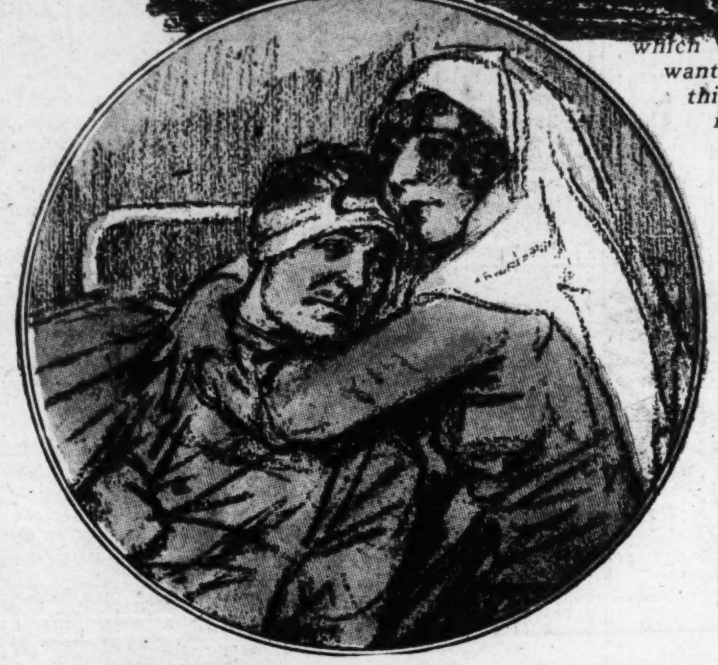
Jeanette sat beside her father. Of all present, these two alone appeared unconcerned, perfectly at ease. If their deportment indicated any feeling at all, it was one of resignation; they were determined to await in patience whatever might be forthcoming, serene in the assurance that nothing could transpire to harm them. Now and again Jeanette or her father

THE GREAT AMERICAN DRAMA

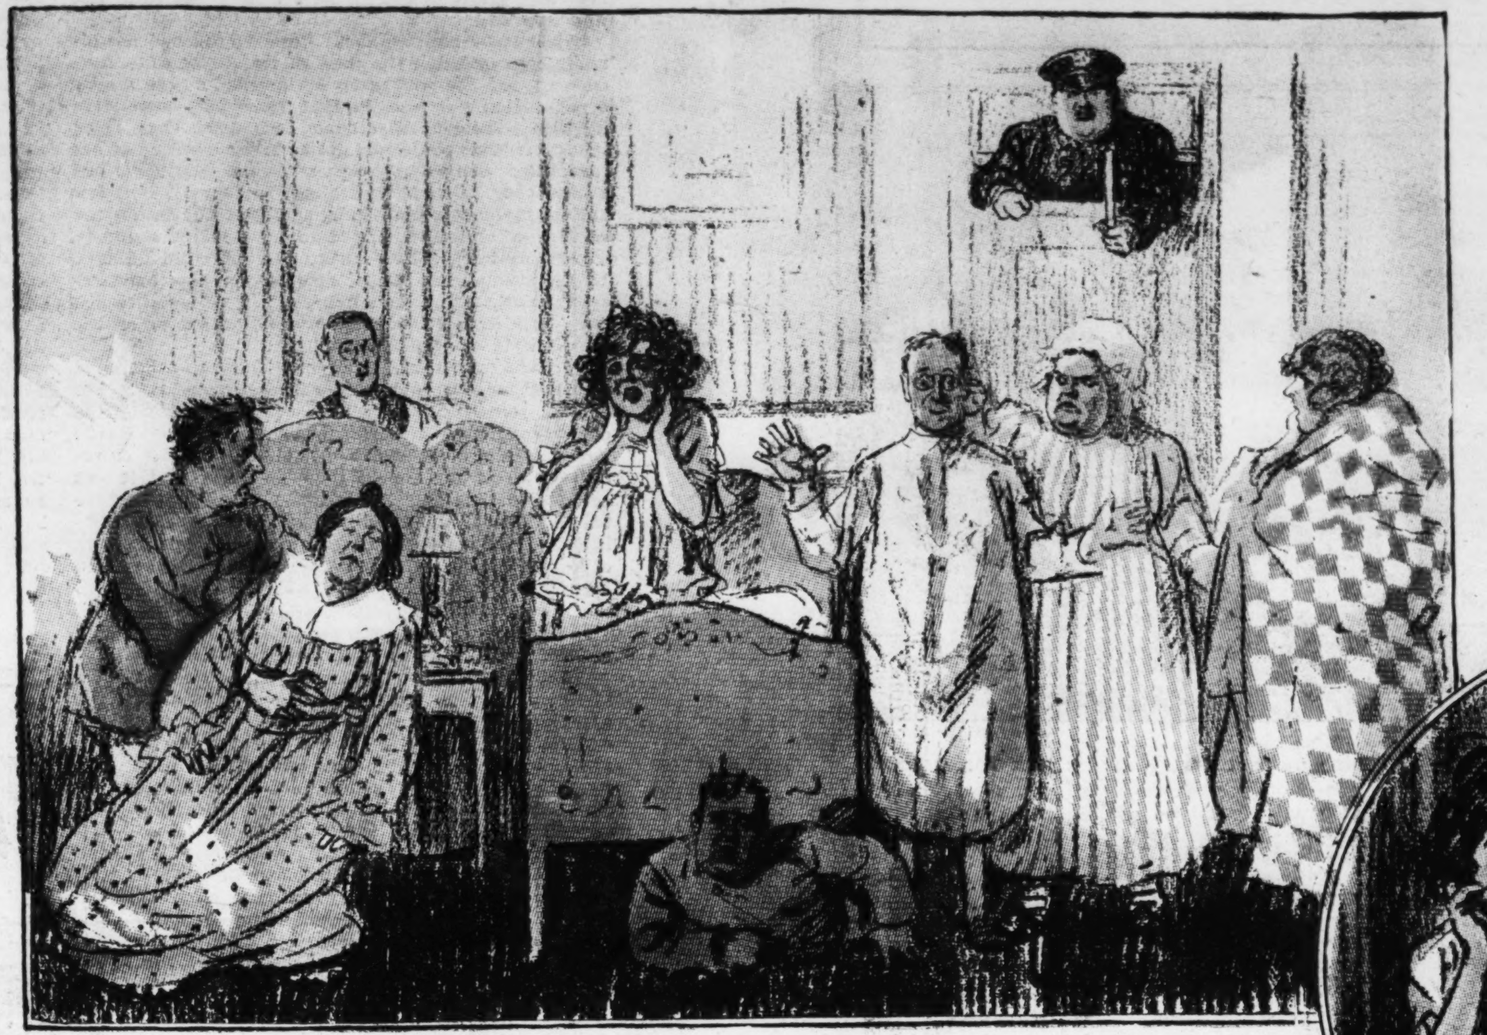
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



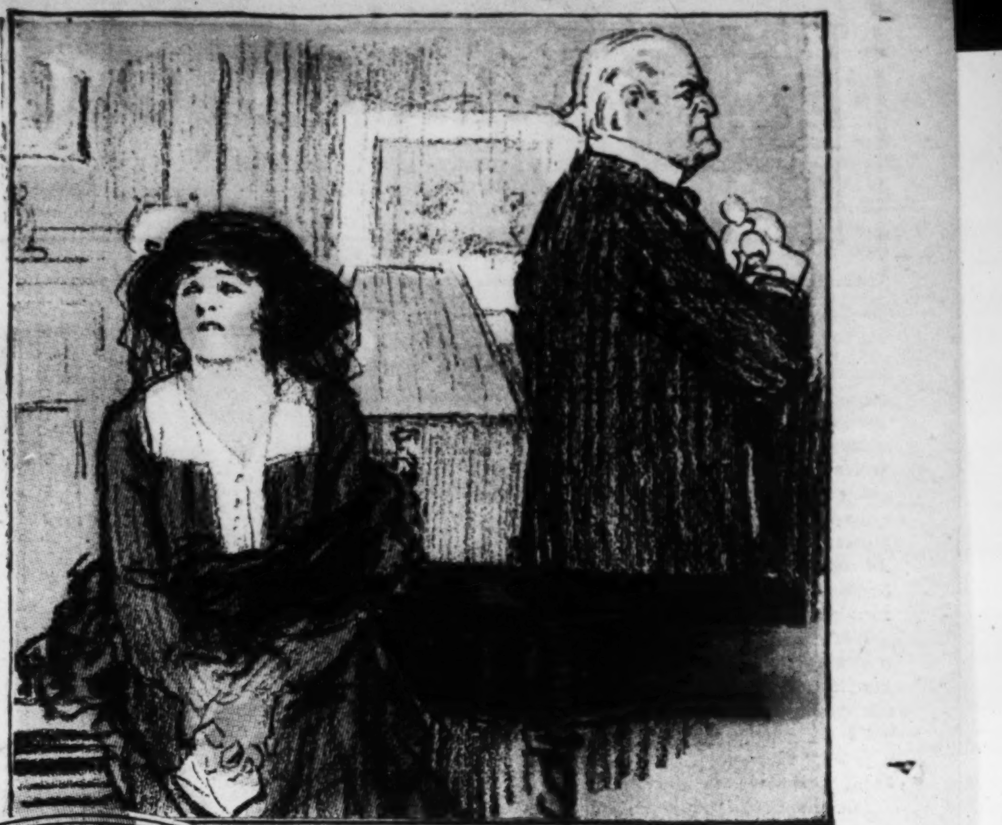
The play about youth love and springtime. Very sticky. Ronald and Althea have been forbidden to see each other by their parents. So Ronald and Althea see each other and elope, which was just what the families wanted, it is explained in the third act, having secretly been in favor of the match all the time. On the picture Althea is about to feed Ronald an olive.



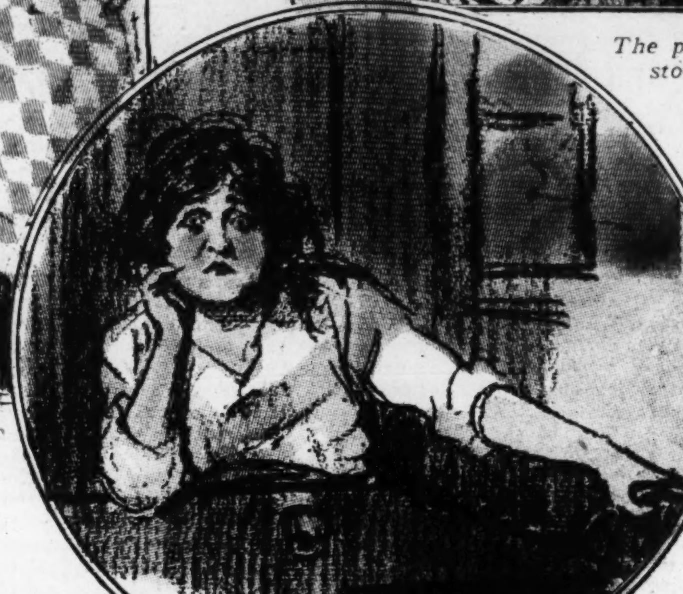
The triangle play with the unhappy ending. The wife and the other man, ennobled by the great war, resolve to part forever, he to rejoin his regiment in the Argonne and she to go back to her lonely husband.



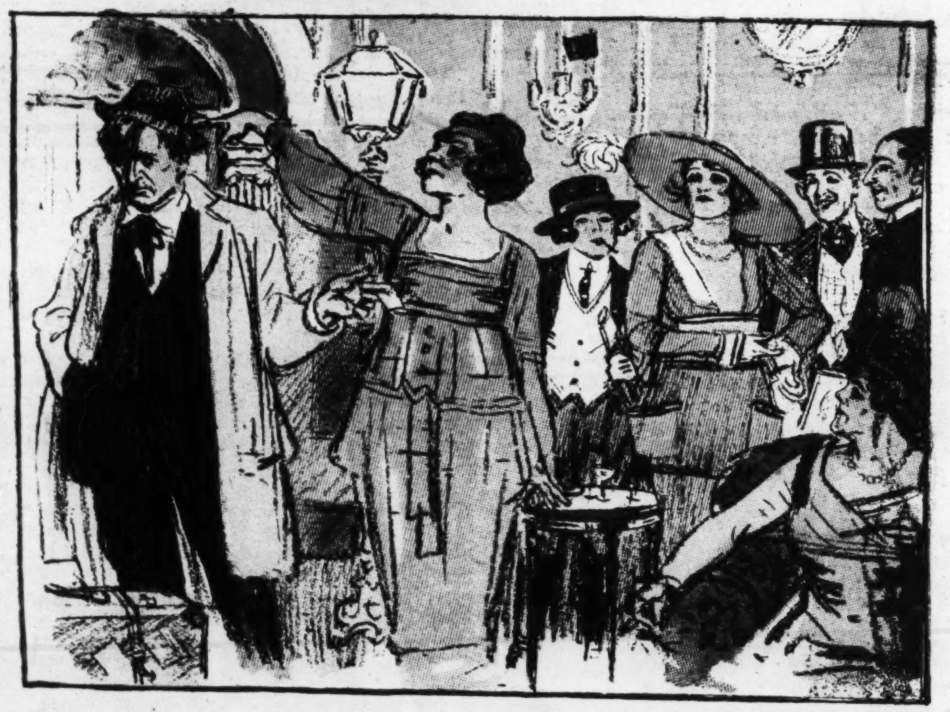
"Five-in-a-Bed," the bedroom farce, showing the bed which is never slept in. Things look pretty bad for the male members of the cast up to five minutes before the curtain falls, when it transpires that they walked in their sleep.



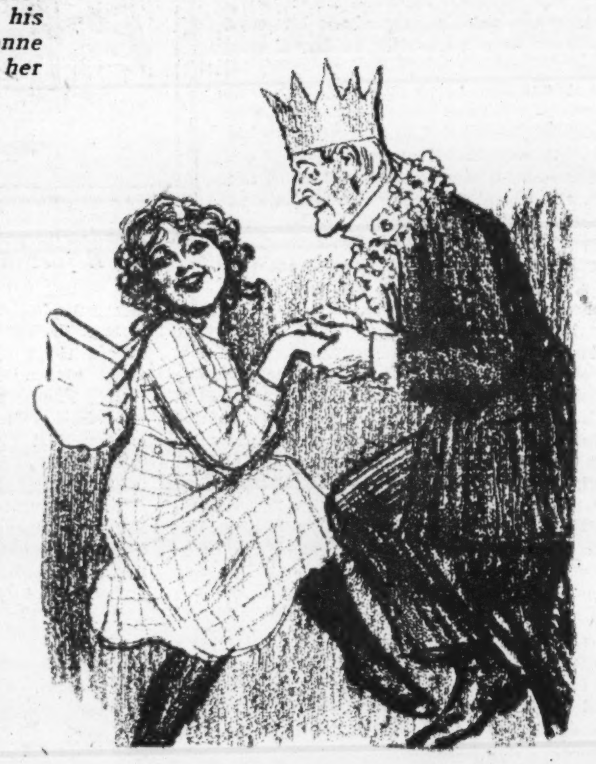
The play about the wronged woman, who stole the fur muff for her baby's sake. Sing Sing or Matteawan means nothing to her, so long as "my baby has the things he is entitled to!"



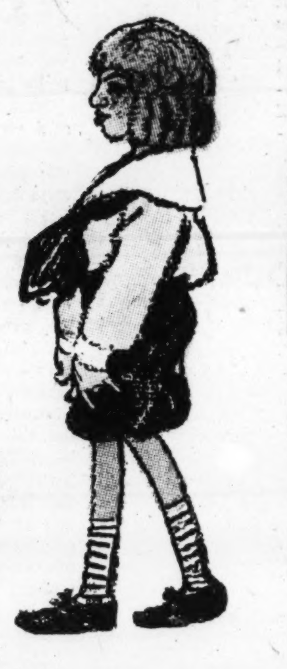
The dream play, in which Myrella, on the eve of her wedding to the man she loves, dreams she is married to a man she doesn't love, who sells her to a half-caste keeper of a hashish joint in Bombay. After three acts of this Myrella wakes up and goes on with the wedding.



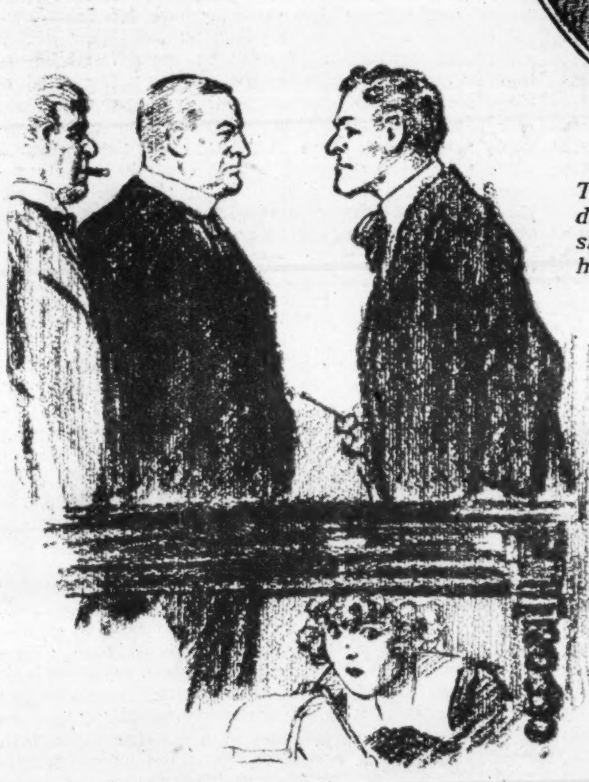
Cousin Lem, the rough diamond from the Middle West, who walks in uninvited upon a smart Long Island house party, and shows up the effete Easterners. Though not popular with the heroine at the start, he persuades her in the last act to come back to the folks and "the little vine-covered cottage" out Kalamazoo way.



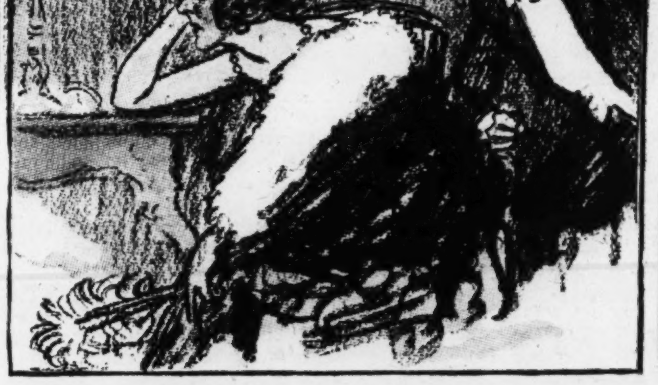
The glad play, very sweet and pretty. The little waif from the foundling asylum has dressed up her old guardian as Prince Bo Bo, the happy fairy, and they are playing the joyous game so that he will forget his rheumatism.



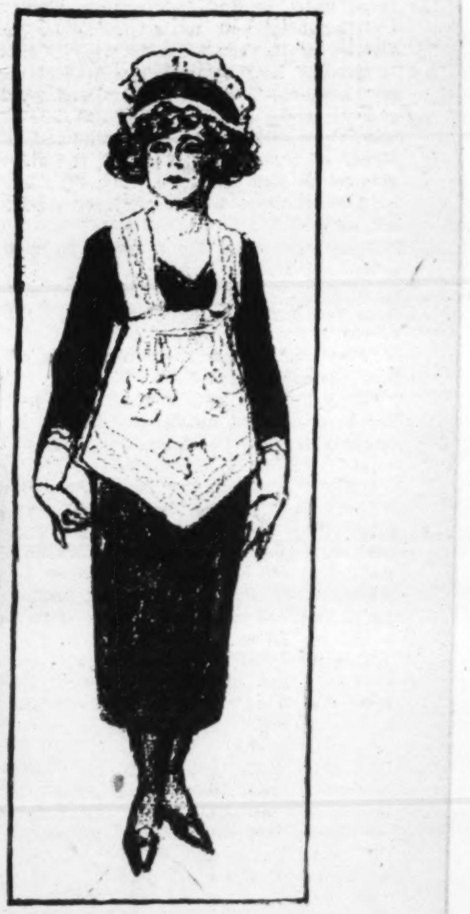
The dear little boy in the high life drama, who says in Act Four: "I'm not cry-ing because I am sad, fawtheh; it is because I am so happy, for now we can live in the country!"



The political drama, all about capital and labor and corrupt politics, showing the struggle between David Hume, reformer, and the bad Senators who would railroad him to Sing Sing. But Shirley, the heroine, is secreted under the table and is taking down the evidence in shorthand. David and Shirley are married in the end, and the maximum wage for widows and orphans goes through.



The high life play. Joan, the unhappy wife of John, the millionaire, has just come in at 4 a. m. "Don't tor-ture me with questions!" she says, when John asks for an explanation. They lose their money in the last act and are very happy.



The maid in the high life drama, who understudies all the other women in the cast, and shows it.

"A skin you love to touch"

You, too, can have this charm

No matter what other charms you have, they count for little unless you have the greatest of all charms—a clear, fresh skin.

An authority on the skin has said: "Whatever your difficulty is, you can remedy the trouble, if you will only give your skin intelligent care and attention."

The following treatment brings the blood to the surface and stimulates the small muscular fibres. Begin it tonight and see how it will improve your skin.

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. After rinsing your face with warm water, rub a fresh lather of Woodbury's into your skin, using an upward and outward motion. Do this until the skin feels just a little sensitive. Then rinse the skin well in warm water, then in cold, finishing by rubbing for thirty seconds with a piece of ice. Always be careful to dry the skin thoroughly.

Make this treatment a regular habit, and in a much shorter time than you would imagine, your skin will take on the greater loveliness that it can have.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25c cake will last a month or six weeks.

Write today for a week's size cake

For 6c we will send you a trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap large enough to last for a week of any Woodbury treatment, together with the booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch", giving the famous Woodbury skin treatments. Or for 15c we will send, in addition, samples of Woodbury's Facial Soap, Facial Powder, Facial Cream and Cold Cream.

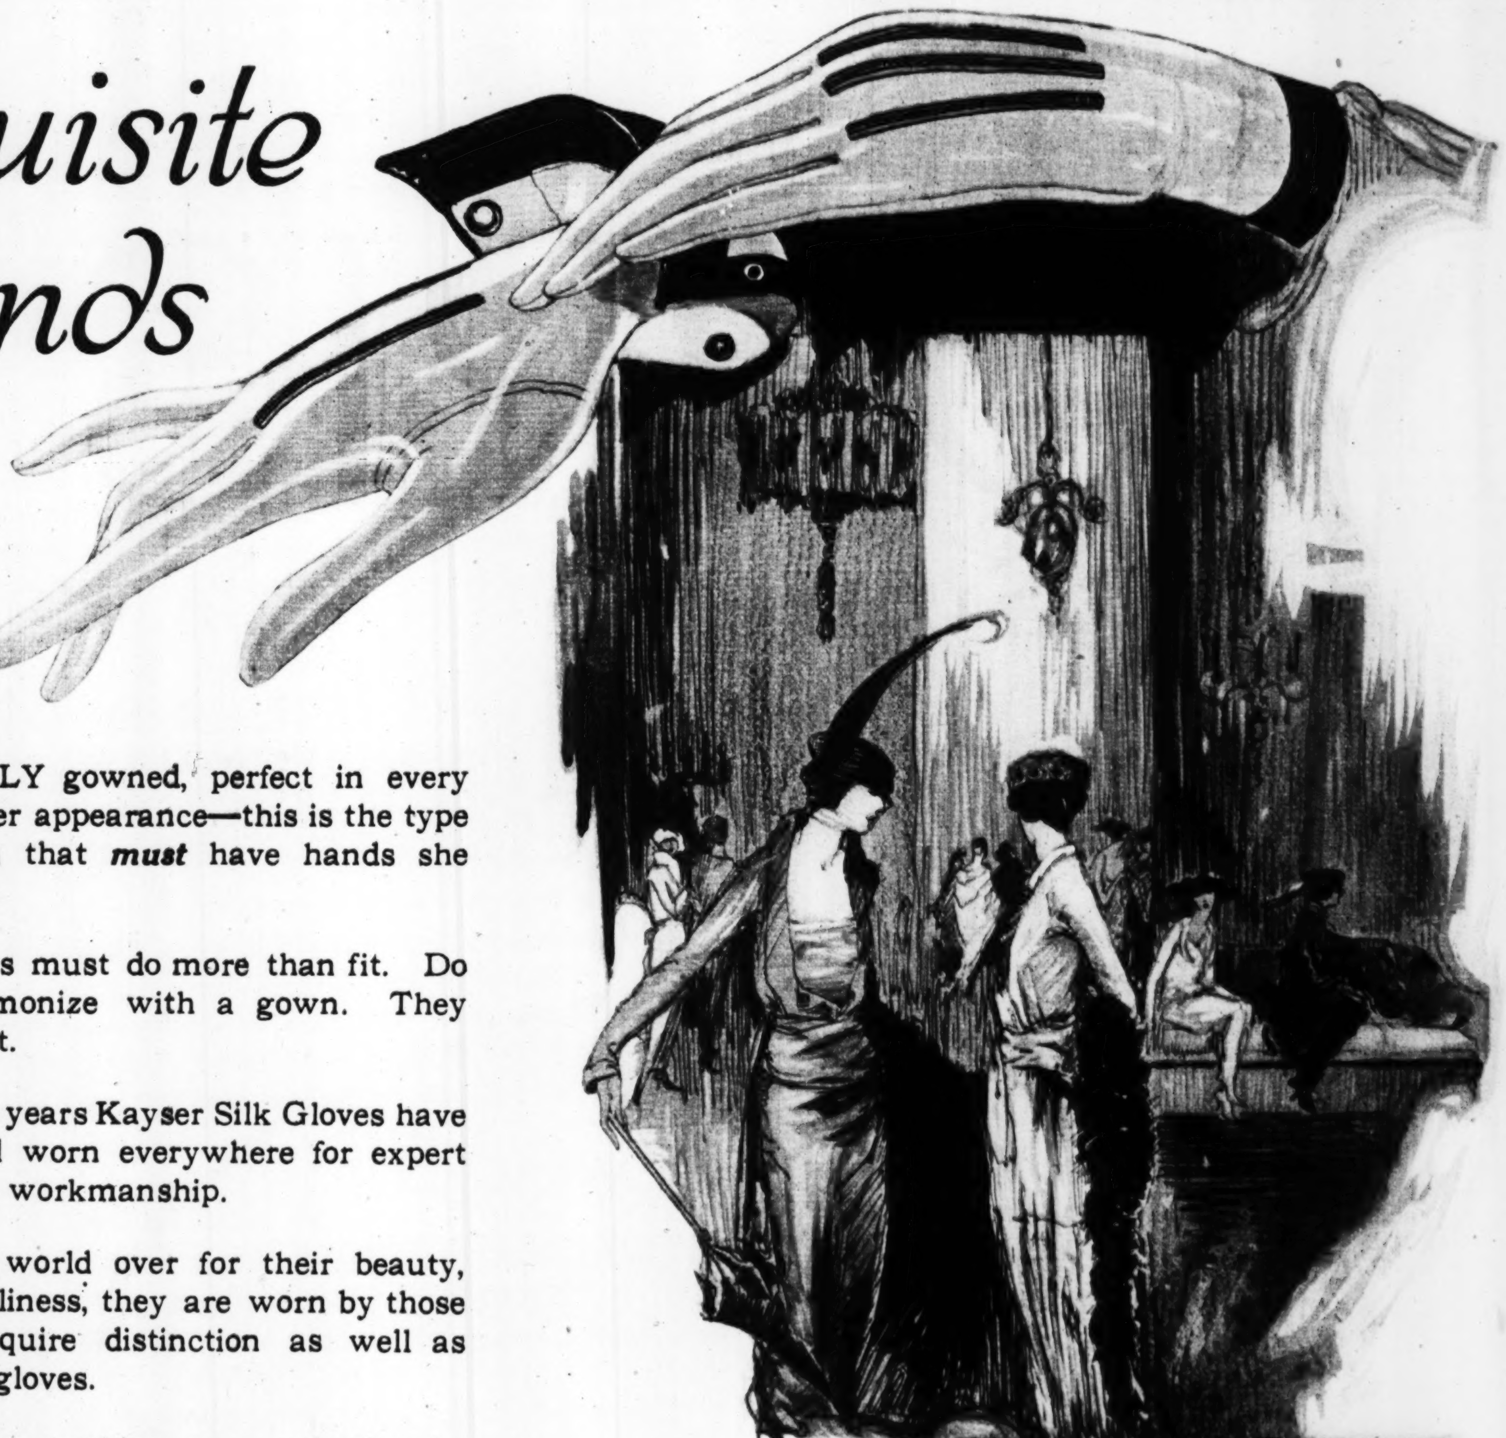
Exquisite Hands



EXQUISITELY gowned, perfect in every detail in her appearance—this is the type of woman that must have hands she can be proud of.

For her, gloves must do more than fit. Do more than harmonize with a gown. They must complete it.

For over forty years Kayser Silk Gloves have been known and worn everywhere for expert shaping—perfect workmanship.

Known the world over for their beauty, finish and shapeliness, they are worn by those women who require distinction as well as quality in their gloves.

When you are making your selection be sure to look for the name "Kayser" in the hem.
JULIUS KAYSER & CO., NEW YORK.

INSIST on having beautiful hands! An awkward, ill-fitting silk glove makes even a shapely hand unsightly! A finger that is not quite long enough—an uncomfortable sagging and wrinkling over the back of the hand—a wrist that will not fit snugly—how they uglify a pretty hand! Kayser Silk Gloves are so correctly modeled, so carefully finished that from them any hand will gain charm and distinction. They are known and worn everywhere by women who insist on having beautiful hands.

MUTT AND JEFF—Dodging the Rent ❋ ❋ By BUD FISHER

JEFF, IT ISN'T THAT I MIND GETTING THROWN OUT FOR NOT PAYING THE RENT, BUT THE LANDLADY WILL KEEP OUR BAGGAGE. HERE'S HOW WE FOOL HER!
FINE! AND WE'LL PAY HER WHEN WE GET SOME MONEY! TEE HEE!
JEFF
A. MUTT
I THOUGHT THEY'D TRY SOME CRUDE WORK.
A. MUTT
I'LL JUST KEEP THAT SUITCASE, GENTLEMEN, FOR THE ROOM RENT YOU OWE! I BELIEVE IN PLAYING SAFE!
SLAM!
AIN'T THAT A PRETTY HOW-DE-DO?
EVERYTHING WE OWN IS IN THAT SUITCASE. I'M GOING OUT NOW, SO WHILE I'M GONE YOU TRY TO THINK OF SOME SCHEME TO GET OUR SUITCASE BACK!
WE SIMPLY GOTTA GET THAT SUITCASE BACK OR THE NEXT TIME I HAVE MY LAUNDRY DONE I'LL HAVE TO STAY IN BED. LET ME THINK, LET ME T-H-I-N-K!
EUREKA! I GOT AN IDEA!!
I KNOW ENOUGH ABOUT LAW TO KNOW THAT IF YOU CREATE A DISTURBANCE YOU CAN BE PUT OUT OF A PLACE BUT THEY CAN'T HOLD YOUR BAGGAGE!
BUT I REALLY WANTED YOUR TRAINED PIG. WHAT ANIMAL CAN YOU SPARE?
HOW ABOUT THE DANCING KANGAROO?
FINE! THE OLD GIRL DIDN'T SEE US COME IN. WE'LL RAISE SUCH A DISTURBANCE WITH THIS DANCING KANGAROO THAT SHE'LL PAY US TO MOVE!
CLOS
SHE WON'T STAND FOR THIS NOT ONE MINUTE! TEE HEE!!
MUTT, WE WON'T LAST IN THIS PLACE ANOTHER DAY. BUT, LISTEN! ACCORDING TO LAW SHE CAN THROW US OUT BUT SHE'S GOTTA GIVE US OUR BAGGAGE!
YES, YES GO ON!
CLOSET.
BUT WHAT'S THE CLOSET GOT TO DO WITH OUR GETTING THROWN OUT?
JUST TAKE A PEEK, OLD DEAR, AND SEE!
WHAT TH'?
